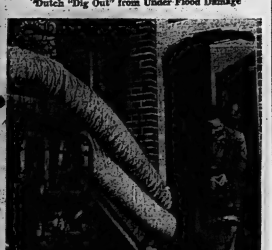
A wrecked car costs two to three times as much to replace as in 1939 — a damaged car costs twice as much to repair — those fenders every two minutes cost three times as much.
- Because medical and hospital costs have increased an estimated 165%.
The bill for injuries is the highest in history.
- Because average Canadian earning power is up 150%.
That means higher payments to settle "lost time" claims.

THEN HOW have insurance companies kept rates from going much higher?
- By cutting operating costs.
Overhead is highest but operating costs per vehicle have been slashed.
- By losing money.
Auto insurance companies paid out $68,000,000 in claims last year. They lost $6,3000,00 doing it.



THE REMEDY
- Reduce accidents.
When the accident rate goes down — unless the cost of each accident goes 'way up — insurance rates will go down too. Competition makes that certain.

REMEMBER—
The accident that doesn't happen never costs anybody a dime.

'Dutch "Dig Out" from Under Flood Damage

It often happens that a child is playing happily one hour and fighting for its life in an iron lung the next. For diseases, such as polio, strike with terrifying suddenness, leaving the tiny victims with maimed bodies and twisted limbs.

Then begins the long, hard road to rehabilitation, a journey which is made more pleasant in the hot summer months for hundreds of crippled children by the ever-growing camping program of the Ontario Society for Crippled Children.

Three Hospitals

The Society, in co-operation with over 200 Ontario service clubs, operates three camps — "Blue Mountain," on Georgian Bay; "Woodeden" on the Thames near London, Ontario, and "Merrywood" on Rideau Lake. All are recognized by the Department of Health as "convalescent hospitals" and all have programs which include three weeks of sunshine, swimming, boating, overnight hikes and camping out trips and many arts and crafts.

All three camps, however, like the O.S.C.C. itself, are suffering from growing pains. And all three have undergone wide expansion this year in preparation for their summer guests.

New buildings, new equipment and new staff members have been added. "Blue Mountain," for example, will go from a capacity of 44 to 72 children per treatment period; "Woodeden" from 30 to 80 and "Merrywood" from 40 to 72. This arrangement will furnish holidays for 360 additional crippled children, exclusive of those who may be taken to two new camps being opened this summer.

The first summer camp was opened in 1937 by the O.S.C.C. five miles north or Collingwood on a Georgian Bay beauty spot called Blue Mountain. At that time there was a staff of two or three and a group of 13 crippled children in attendance.

Equipment and facilities were as sparse as campers and counsellors.

Fully Staffed

Today each camp is thoroughly staffed with 36 trained counsellors and a camp director who is usually a nurse. Each camp has a committee consisting of local service club men associated with the Ontario Society for Crippled Children. It is expected that nearly 900 handicapped youngsters of all races, classes and creeds will attend the three existing camps sometime during the summer of 1953.

Each year public support of the annual Easter Seal campaign mounts higher and higher. And each year new potentialities of the crippled children are being discovered and developed. Youngsters who were once considered to be society's dependents have proven themselves to be productive citizens. . . . Just because enough in the past have purchased Easter Seals and used them. Buy your seals before April 5.

The Ontario Society for Crippled Children needs $475,000.

Dispute With Britain Serves As Unifying Issue in Iran; Settlement May Bring Grief

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press News Analyst

Two years ago, Iran nationalized her oil. There were dire predictions that this would lead to national bankruptcy, that the Communists would soon dive in and take over, that the Western world would avoid the loss of the oil.

None of these things happened. Those who forced the nationalization are astonished that they did not win the victory they expected. All hands are astonished that Iran continued on with relatively little shock to her economy. The Western world was surprised to learn it could get along without Iranian oil. The Middle East was astonished that the Communists did no more than they did.

Still Dangerous

The Iranian situation is still dangerous. Much of the danger lies in the possibility that Iran's oil crisis might bring a settlement. This might have the effect of easing tensions between Iran and the West but would hardly be taken lying down by Russia and its satellite Tudeh (communist) party in Iran.

Part of the incredible strength of Premier Mohamed Mossadegh, leader of the national front government, lies in the oil crisis. It has given Iran an outside enemy—the British—and a unifying force which keeps the government together and retains mass support.

On the stooped shoulders of the wrecking Mossadegh rest the power and responsibility to keep communism from Engineering a situation where the country will be ripe for the plucking.

Settlement of the oil crisis might bring the country more evil than good.

If the Iranian government wins a clear victory in its case before the Rome court in the case of the 1,000 tons of oil on the tanker Mirtella, it must shut off the British indefinitely in the Anglo-Iranian dispute.

Could Sell Too Much

But if Iran sold a great deal of oil, that might tend only to strengthen the old status quo. By selling just a little, Iran can keep on her feet and still have the oil situation to keep the government in control.

Despite propaganda to the contrary, Iran is not "on the verge of bankruptcy." The loss of the oil revenues did have the effect of cutting Iranian imports and halting needed economic development but only a small section of the country's 20,000,000 people was directly affected.

Iran cannot be compared to any Western country. About 80 per cent of the population is agricultural. The people know the leader, whoever happens to be in power. The villages are poor and primitive and accustomed for years to having landlords do their thinking and acting in a feudal society. They live off the land.

For the vast section of the population, bankruptcy is a meaningless term. To them the only important thing is the crop, and there has been a succession of good crop years.

Imports Fall Off

Iran's imports have fallen off 50 per cent since the oil crisis. The oil revenues had paid for such imports. But Iran in the last year exported 60,000 tons of rice 20,000 tons of cotton, and quantities of dried fruits, dates, sheepskins and animal fats. Thus, oil has simply been the icing on the economic cake. Only on paper does Iran's economy depend on oil.

When imports dropped off, the law of supply and demand set in. Most vital imports are paid for by Iran's exports and meanwhile the 40,000 workers remaining at the Abadan refinery are paid by borrowing from government.

The oil crisis has affected the 1,000 persons pyramid of power—among whom the government reins pass back and forth. Mossadegh has attempted to broaden the base of this pyramid and seems the only leader available now who can appeal to mass sentiment. He seems the only one able to deal with foreign representatives, and in a land of intrigue he is a masterful intriguer.

At the same time he has many enemies—formidable ones like the speaker of the Majlis (parliament), the ambitious and unscrupulous Ayatollah Kashani and, far from the least, the Communists.

Canada's Youngest Sergeant-Major

At 22 WO1 Herb E. Fournier of the 81st Field Regiment, RCA, stationed at Camp Petawawa, Ont., has the distinction of being the youngest regimental sergeant-major in the Canadian army. A native of Kingston, Ont., Fournier began his military career in the tender age of nine as a boy bugler in the navy and then switched to the army two years later. At 14, he became a full-fledged "boy soldier" in the permanent army as a bugler with the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery. In 1939 when the war broke out he was among the first to be sent overseas. He returned to Canada in 1942 to become an instructor and served in various training centres across the country. His previous as a crack drill and parade square perfectionist was widespread and in particular for the royal visit of Princess Elizabeth in 1951, he was selected to train the guard of honor picked, from the Army services in the city of Winnipeg. Now, Sergeant-Major Fournier will see action once again, as he is leaving for his unit to the west coast to sail for Korea.—Central Press Canadian.

Some Trends In Purchases Of Farm Machinery

OTTAWA — While increasing activity has tended to reduce the supply of labor in rural communities, the industrial expansion has increased the supply of goods available, including a wider selection of new and improved lines of farm equipment. This has enabled farmers to become effectively mechanize farm operations, says J. M. Armstrong of the Agricultural Engineering Division, Central Experimental Farms, Ottawa.

Some of the consumer preferences in choice of this equipment are of interest. In general, there has been a trend to heavier farm power with a large demand for standard tractors in the 2-3 and 3-4 plow sizes and for row crop of one-plow and garden tractors tractors in the 2-3 plow size. Sales have tended to fall off while sales of diesel tractors have increased to about 10 per cent of the wheel tractors sold.

The most striking changes in the tillage tool group have been the rapid trend to tractor mounted units, including tool bar type cultivators and the large reduction in the sales of horse-drawn tillage equipment. There has been heavy reductions in the sale of one-way disks, a corresponding increase in the sale of disk harrows and the sale of heavy duty cultivators.

More Power Mowers

In haying equipment, sales of horse-drawn mowers are down to less than half their former volume or to about the same as the number of tractor mounted units sold. Sales of tractor drawn mowers have increased sharply to exceed the sale of other classes of mowers. The number of side-delivery rakes sold now exceeds the number of dump rakes and sales of hay loaders have steadily increased. These changes have contributed to the speeding up of initial hay harvesting. Sales of hay balers have approximated three thousand a year with an increasing proportion of engine driven units, while sales of forage crop harvesters have risen to be second to the sales of heavy duty cultivators.

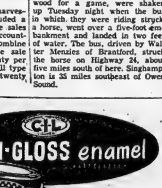
Land Owners To Get Redress From House

TORONTO (CP)—Land owners dissatisfied with payments for land expropriated for highways may get further redress as a bill introduced in the legislature Tuesday.

At present, there is no appeal from the ruling of the Ontario municipal board, which decides how much owners will be paid. The bill would allow property owners to appeal the decision to the Ontario Court of Appeal.

It also would give individuals the right to sue for payments when the value of their land is increased by the construction of a highway nearby.

Second Victom Dies



TORONTO (CP)—Anne Mifsud, 23, of Toronto, died Tuesday, the second victim of a two-car crash Saturday night on the Queen Elizabeth Way near the No. 27 High-way cloverleaf five miles west of here.

Leo Casha, 23, of Toronto, a passenger in another car, died Monday, Miss Mifsud's sister Rose, 18, was also injured.

Police said the car in which they were riding collided with a car driven by John Turza, 25, of Brampton.

HOCKEY TEAM SHAKEN UP

SINGHAMPTON (CP)—About 15 members of a junior hockey midget, hockey team, travelling to Collingwood for a game, were shaken up Tuesday night when the bus in which they were riding struck a horse, went over a five-foot embankment and landed in two feet of water. The bus, driven by Walter Menzies of Brantford, struck the horse on Highway 24, about five miles south of here. Singhampton is 25 miles southeast of Owen Sound.

New Preparations Better For Dehorning Calves

OTTAWA — Horns are responsible for an estimated loss of one million dollars to the Canadian cattle industry. These losses are the result of inefficient gains or production, injuries and reduced value of carcasses from bruising due to horns.

The safest and simplest method or dehorning, consists of stopping the horn growth of the young calf by means of one of the special preparations now on the market for this purpose. At the Experimental farm at Indian Head in Saskatchewan, both the liquid and paste types of commercial preparations tested have proved quite effective. In contrast to the old caustic pencil, the new preparations are more easily applied and there is much less danger of injury to the hands and eyes of the calf or to the hands of the operator when reasonable care is exercised.

W. W. Cram, Animal Husbandman at the Indian Head Farm says that calves to be dehorned are treated when one week old or the horn bud is easily seen at this stage. The hair is closely clipped around the horn bud and the horn button is thoroughly cleaned by scrubbing and wetting. The paste or liquid preparation is then applied over the horn and around the horn button according to the directions on each container. The cow should be restrained from licking her calf for the first hour or so after treatment. If properly done there is no bleeding or open sores, hence the treatment can be used at any season without danger from flies.

If treatment of horns is delayed until the calf is over ten days to two weeks of age or until the horns have obtained considerable growth, the use of a clipper type of dehorner will probably be necessary.

As all dehorning preparations have a burning action and are poisonous, they should be kept properly labelled and out of the reach of small children at all times.

Beaver Do Not Stand So Well With Officials

TORONTO (CP)—The beaver, once a privileged member of the forest kingdom in Ontario, doesn't stand so well with forestry officials now.

A bill introduced in the legislature Tuesday, containing a number of minor amendments in game laws, would remove protection which the beaver now enjoys from farmers and trappers.

At present, if beaver are damaging property the only way they can be killed or their dam destroyed is by a provincial game official.

But the department says there has been a great increase in the beaver population and little chance of a future scarcity. So farmers and woodsmen would be able to shoot beaver or destroy their dams without first obtaining department approval.

STOP LEAFLET ISSUE

TORONTO (CP)—An Ontario provincial police squad was sent to Queen's Park Tuesday night, when a small group, believed to be Communist sympathizers, began handing out leaflets in the hall outside the legislative chamber. The group stopped distributing the pamphlets when the officers appeared and no police action was taken.

Power Project Soon Will Start Says Saunders

OTTAWA (CP)—Robert Saunders, chairman of the Ontario hydro-electric commission, said Tuesday he hopes to receive permission "in a few weeks" to go ahead with the power development of the St. Lawrence.

Speaking to students at Ottawa's Nepean high school, he said there were 25 projects in prince for organizing an application group among fellow students.

When freed in March last year, they began a three-day trek to the frontier.

Most of the exiles had been in the habit of listening to foreign radio programs.

"Listening to the Voice of

Their Actions Were in Vain!

Bulgarian Refugee in Turkey Typical of Many Who Await Opportunity to Get to Canada

By HARRY WHYTE

ISTANBUL (Reuters) — Nanlu Nanev, a 24-year-old Bulgarian peasant, is exile in Turkey after fleeing his Communist-dominated homeland a few months ago, knows only a few words of English but he speaks them as proudly as if they had magic in them.

And for him they do have a kind of "magic." Since they will help him take him to Canada and a new life.

Many Exiles

Nanev is typical of a small group of exiles from Soviet satellite countries who are waiting in Turkey for resettlement in countries which want immigrants. While here, they are cared for by the joint efforts of the President's Escape Program, administered by the United States state department, the World Council of Churches and the International Refugee Committee.

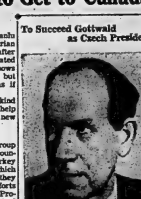
Much of the money and effort devoted to their care comes from the United States, but Canada, Australia and Brazil are the countries to which most of the group—at present there are 382 of them—are likely to go.

Nanev hopes that in Canada he will be able to work in a vineyard, for he is an expert in grape-growing. But he is willing to do any kind of farm work.

Seeking Jobs

Finding a job in a country which is willing to take immigrants is part of the work undertaken by the joint efforts of the organizations which are caring for them. Getting a visa for that country usually takes a long time and meanwhile, many of the exiles are put to work on a farm on the Asiatic shore of the Bosphorus opposite Istanbul.

But one group of 10 young men live in a hostel at Bebek, an Istanbul suburb, on the European shore, as students.



They, too, are waiting for the day when their native land, Bulgaria, will be free.

Two of them, 24-year-old Ignat Kalchev and his friend, 23-year-old Koyu Nikolov, spent three years in prison for organizing an opposition group among fellow students.

BOY GRANTED DAMAGES

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Gerald McGuire, 14, a London schoolboy severely injured 15 months ago when struck by a car on Hamilton road was awarded $5,000 damages Tuesday by Mr. Justice J. Maurice King who found the car driver solely to blame. Gerald suffered a fractured left ankle, fractured left hip and damaged kidney. The car was driven by Robert E. Warren.

To Succeed Gottwald as Czech President

Premier Antonin Zapotocky regarded as more moderate than some of the Red hierarchy, will succed the late Klement Gottwald, as president of Czechoslovakia. Chosen for the job by the Czech Communist party's central committee, Zapotocky assumed the presidency immediately after receiving a unanimous vote from the 271 legislators of parliament assembled in Prague. Changes in the government were brought in by the death of Gottwald, who succumbed to an illness officially described as pneumonia and pleurisy soon after returning from Prime Minister Stalin's funeral to Prague. — Central Press Canadian.

America or the British Broadcasting Corporation or the Paris radio is not forbidden," Nanev said. But he said there is a great deal of jamming in attempts to prevent listening to foreign radio programs. "Everyone listens, including the Communists!" Ignat said. "They listen perhaps even more than we do!".

TWO FAMILIES HOMELESS

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Two families with six small children were forced out of their two-storey frame home on Waterloo street by a Tuesday night fire. Firemen estimated damage at well over $1,000 to the house, owned by Richard Blatchford.

History Debunked

This piece of real estate in Quebec City is called the Plains of Abraham in history books but historians now say the name is wrong. They say the site of the battle between Wolfe and Montcalm in 1759 did not belong to settler Abraham Martin after whom it is named. Historians say the "Battle of the Plains of Abraham" did not take place on the "Plains", (left foreground) but on "Nevre's Knoll", or Coverfields (upper centre). A true, historical name for the area, now the property of the federal government, which calls it Battle Fields park, is a controversial subject among some Quebecers. — (CP Photo.)

Historians Agree About Misnaming Plains of Abraham But Differ On What Plains Should be Called

By BERNARD DUFRESNE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

QUEBEC (CP)—Quebec historians agree about the misnaming of the Plains of Abraham, described in history books as the place where France lost Quebec to British forces in 1759. But they differ on what the Plains should be called.

The Plains, they say, did not belong to settler Abraham Martin, after whom they are named.

Any change would have to be made by the federal government, which bought the 1½-square-mile area from the Ursuline nuns in 1908 and calls it Battlefields Park.

The name, however, does not satisfy historians because it does not refer exclusively to the plains. It takes in an area ½ mile away from the spot where Murray and Levis fought the battle of Ste. Foy in 1760 and confirmed Britain's hold on New France.

Different Site

There's another angle: The fateful battle between Wolfe and Montcalm did not take place on the "Plains" after all. It occurred on rolling terrain listed in eye-witness accounts as "Buttes a Neveu" (Knolls) and now called the Coverfields. The Coverfields cover roughly the eastern half of the Plains.

The odds are that the name Plains of Abraham will stay.

This business of debunking Quebec history started when Georges Morisset, a Quebec writer, described the term Plains of Abraham as "an historical hoax" in an article for Concorde, a magazine published by the city.

It seems Abraham's farm was at least ¼ mile from the battle site. His heirs sold the property to the Ursuline nuns almost a century before Wolfe sneaked up a gully from the St. Lawrence river shore and captured the town.

Origin of the name Plains of Abraham is unknown, but it is believed the area was known by that name long before the battle.

Mr. Morisset suggested the Plains might be called "The Plains of the Ursulines" or "The Fields of the Canadian destiny."

Possible Objection

Abbe Arthur Maheux, Laval University archivist, said the Ursulines might object to having their name associated with the Plains. However, mountain north of Quebec City and formerly their property are called "The Mothers' Mountains" and the park might be called the "Mothers' Plains."

Better still, he suggested, the Plains might be called "the Montcalm-Wolfe Plains" or "Wolfe-Montcalm Plains," depending on whether you consider the fact that the French were here first more important than Wolfe's victory.

Another historian who asked not to be identified said a change would be "ridiculous and unnecessary" since the name had gone down in history 200 years ago and was a "tradition" in Quebec.

"History," he said, "speaks of the Battle of Hastings in William the Conqueror's time, but nobody wants to change the name, although the battle did not really occur at Hastings."

HAPPY DAYS

MONTREAL (CP)—As in many other municipalities, Montreal parks officials now are busy refurbishing the summer equipment for recreation centres for children. All but 10 of the city's 182 skating and hockey rinks had been dismantled last week.

Harry Duguid, 38, Wanted for Bank Robbery, Held

VANCOUVER (CP) — Harry Duguid, Toronto's most - wanted criminal, sought for bank robbery and breaking jail, has been arrested here, police said here today.

Duguid, a 38-year-old former plastics manufacturer, was picked up in a suburban theatre early Sunday when the theatre manager discovered him in the lobby, police said. They said he was also known as Harry Digald and Harry Thompson.

Duguid is wanted for the $14,500 robbery of a Dominion Bank branch in Toronto in 1942, the $19,400 holdup of the Imperial Bank branch at Stamford, Ont., in 1947 and for escaping from the Welland county jail.

Police said Duguid escaped briefly Monday when RCMP officers were escorting him to Okalla prison, a suburban Burnaby, and was recaptured when police fired several warning shots over his head.

Duguid appeared in court Monday and was remanded for a week. Police said he made his bid for freedom as a police car approached the prison.

Duguid wrenched the steering wheel away from one of the officers and sent the car careening into a cement post at the prison entrance. He was caught in bush near the prison and arrested on foot through Okalla's gates.

The arrest came as Toronto police were pressing their search for Duguid in Ontario following two attempted Toronto jail robberies in the last three weeks. Toronto police said then that they resembled Duguid's work.

Sought Since 1947

Duguid, once a prominent Toronto plastics manufacturer who slipped into a life of crime 10 years ago, has been sought since he broke out of the Welland jail in 1947.

He was captured six years ago after the Stamford robbery. In 1943 police said, he robbed a Toronto bank of $14,500 and escaped by street car after holding up the entire bank staff singlehanded.

While awaiting trial in Welland, Duguid sawed his way through two sets of bars, scaled a 24 foot high wall and disappeared.

He married two weeks after the first robbery and moved to London, Ont.

2 Were to Hang On March 31; Freed by Judge

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) Crown Attorney Ian Munro today announced that the Ontario Court of Appeals has quashed the conviction of Glenn Nevers, 34, formerly of Saint John, N. B., and George Groulx, 37, of Blind River, Ont., on a charge of murder in the shooting four years ago of John Hargis at Amyot, Ont.

Mr. Justice D. P. J. Kelly of the Ontario Supreme Court sentenced the men Jan. 23 to be hanged March 31.

Mr. Munro said Nevers and Groulx will walk out of the dock in trial jail as free men later today.

Hargis, 68, a retired railway worker, was found dead in the ruins of his burned cabin at Amyot, some 200 miles north of here, in October, 1948. Nevers and Groulx were arrested late last year.

Their appeal against the conviction was heard in Toronto about two weeks ago.

BIG NUISANCE

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) —The Memorial Gardens commissioners here barred a youth from skating at the arena for one year because of skating that menaced others. An official said this particular youth had been repeatedly warned about his speed performances.

Relics Sealed in Nfld. Building

In the cornerstone being laid in St. John's Newfoundland, by Hon. Lionel Chevrier, federal minister of transport, there is a copper box sealed and containing "relics" of 1953. The relics consist, among other things, of copies of Newfoundland newspapers, a parchment outlining the terms of union between Newfoundland and Canada, newly minted coins bearing a picture of Queen Elizabeth II, and photographs of the dignitaries officiating at the stone-laying. The building is the Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation edifice which is expected to be finished in August of this year. Premier Smallwood, left, is an interested spectator as Mr. Chevrier lays the stone. The copper box is expected to remain undisturbed for a century. — Central Press Canadian.

UPRISING IN CHINA

TAIPEH, Formosa (AP) —The Chinese nationalist defence ministry said Sunday one man was killed and 20 wounded when more than 500 Chinese fishermen staged a vain uprising against Communist officials in Checkiang province, south of Shanghai, March 2. The ministry said the disgruntled fishermen fought security guards with bamboo poles and oars. They were reported seeking permission to fish in waters south of the Red-held Chu Shan islands.

Expect Short Syrup Season

TORONTO (CP) — Maple syrup making is in full swing in most Ontario counties, the agricultural department said today in its weekly crop report. However, farmers in some counties expect the season will be short.

The condition of fall wheat is generally good except in Oxford, where some damage was reported. A number of Huron, Haldimand and Peel county farmers are applying nitrogen fertilizers to their fields.

Mild weather is prevailing in Northern Ontario, melting snow and drying up fields. The main interest throughout the northern districts is increasing milk production.

CATERPILLARS FEW

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP)— Although the Kawartha border area is preparing for a heavy infestation of tent caterpillars this year, forestry experts here said the menace should be light in eastern Ontario. "The high infestation period is generally past and now is on the downgrade," said one district forester.

HOUSE CONTINUES SYMBOL OF

At the House opening Fisheries Minister Sinclair announced that Britain will buy 84,250,000 worth of British Columbia canned salmon. The Purchase probably will absorb about half of the 200,000-case carryover from the 1952 pack when British did not purchase salmon.

Labor Minister Gregg reported his department is making a new effort to settle a five-week-old Vancouver grain elevator strike. Government action also is planned to settle a dispute between elevator operators and employees at the Lakehead.

Trudeau Report

Resources Minister Winters presented the 1952 annual report of the government-operated Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. It showed housing starts totalled 84,246 last year compared with 68,579 in 1951.

At the start of the night sitting, Prime Minister St. Laurent announced to a hushed House the death of Mackenzie King in Ottawa. The Commons adjourned the regular night sitting as a mark of respect.

In the emergency powers debate, Mr. Garson dealt with a March 17 editorial appearing in the Toronto Globe and Mail Night.

He said the editorial erred when it said the Emergency Powers Act conveyed the right to make secret orders and gave the impression there could be interference with personal liberties. The trouble with the editor of Saturday Night and others, like him was they didn't have enough time to study such matters and had to rely too much on statements by members of the opposition.

No Objections to Attack

Mr. Garson said he has no objection to attacks on the government by publications or opposition members. But no member of Parliament and no editor should recklessly, carelessly or deliberately slander the laws of his own country."

Only one secret order-in-council has been passed, but the law pertaining to secret orders was not in the Emergency Powers Act. The power to make an order secret was contained in the Regulations Act and the exempting order must be published.

Mr. Drew described Mr. Garson's statements as "remarkable" and an attempt to prevent free discussion. The minister wanted no criticism, but the press had been doing its job and would continue to do so. Saturday Night was correct when it said the government was seeking permission to make secret orders.

He said there had been suggestions that members of the opposition parties knew the contents of secret orders and if they kept silent about them it was tacit admission that their publication would be against public interest.

Has Never Seen Secret Order

The Opposition leader said he wants it clearly understood he has never seen the one secret order admitted by the government. He said he "protests" against the existence of any secret order.

Mr. Coldwell said the CCF previously had supported the act when it was passed in 1951 and renewed in 1952. But it was opposing it now because the government did not use the power to ease the cost-driving burden or housing difficulties of Canadians. He had seen orders-in-council used to do things that should have been done by Parliament. Parliament was not a rubber stamp, but he feared it was in danger of becoming one.

Mr. Coldwell also said he had no knowledge of the government's secret orders described by Prime Minister St. Laurent Feb. 20 as having to do with the security of the state.

John Diefenbaker (PC-Lake Centre) said the attitude of Mr. Garson is that "criticism is dangerous."

Mr. Garson interjected that he had said no such thing.

Mr. Diefenbaker said nothing could be more dangerous than pulling arbitrary power into the hands of a cabinet which did not have to answer to Parliament.

"Mr. Speaker, I rise to move adjournment of the House. I have with great regret to make the announcement that Queen Mary has died."

Few Cries of Dismay

Churchill said the Commons he would make an address of condolence to Queen Elizabeth today, then ask adjournment for the day "as an expression of our profound sorrow and respect."

In Ottawa, Prime Minister St. Laurent announced the death to the Canadian House of Commons and it also adjourned. He termed the death "a personal sorrow for all Canadians."

As Churchill spoke, a solemn attendant a few blocks away posted the fourth and last medical bulletin of the day on the gates of Marlborough House.

Many Pay Tribute

Four generations of Britons who knew and loved her as the proud symbol of royalty paid their tribute. Throughout the Commonwealth, with its 575,000,000 people, flags were dipped and minutes of silence observed.

U. S. President Eisenhower sent his deep personal sympathy and recalled: "Queen Mary was a good, great Queen. Free peoples the world over will mourn her loss."

"She was like your own grandmother," said one of the mourners, who crowded in silence about her stately Marlborough House residence, where she died in London's foggy gloom.

"Poor old soul—and she wanted so badly to see her grandchild crowned," murmured another.

Preparations Go Ahead

Though the Queen's decision was awaited, preparations for the Coronation went ahead today. Because of her age and health, Queen Mary had planned to watch the Coronation on television.

A period of official mourning will be announced shortly, probably within 48 hours. It was expected to last a few weeks.

Funeral arrangements were expected to be announced today.

Men bared their heads and many women wept as the Queen's personal standard was lowered slowly over her residence Tuesday night.

Some had waited all through the anxious hours for the posting of the first medical bulletin, at 11:30 a. m. Tuesday, announcing Queen Mary had suffered a relapse.

Arrived Before Death

Her eldest and dearly-loved son, the Duke of Windsor, had been summoned urgently by the doctors for his third call of the day. He arrived at his mother's sick-bed shrouded but just nine minutes after she died.

Forty-five minutes later, grey and drawn, he left. The Duke had hurried to London from a Florida vacation two weeks ago.

Earlier today three generations of the Royal Family had called to pay their last respects in the darkened room filled with flowers and memories of other years.

Barely Conscious

The old Queen was barely conscious when the grand-daughter she helped train for the throne, Elizabeth II, stepped quietly to the bedside. But she recognized the Queen, turned her face and smiled.

Three of the old Queen's six children survive her—Windsor, the Princess Royal Mary, Dowager Countess of Harewood, and the Duke of Gloucester.

She is survived also by nine grandchildren.

During her long life, Queen Mary had seen England change from the days of 19th century imperial glory under Queen Victoria, through two world wars, into the economic straits and tense uncertainties of the post-war atomic era.

Witnessed Upheaval

In her later years, she witnessed social upheaval in her own country, the rise of socialist government controls and a curtailment of the monarchy which Queen Victoria could hardly have envisioned. The once-wealthy nation became poor. The opulent Edwardian life finally was succeeded by post-war austerity.

Her long career was punctuated, too, by personal tragedy. Her first fiance, Prince Edward, Duke of Clarence, died in 1891, a little more than a month after their engagement. She subsequently married his brother, George.

Their youngest son, Prince John, died in 1919. The death of her husband Jan. 20, 1936, brought widowhood, but within the year she was struck by another tragedy—the abdication of her beloved eldest, Edward VIII, to marry an American divorcee whom Queen Mary never received.

With the Second World War came death for her fourth son, the Duke of Kent, in an RAF crash in 1942. February 6, 1952, her second son, King George VI, died.

Through all the public and private sorrow, the indomitable woman never faltered in her stern devotion to duty.

At her husband's death, after the couple had reigned for a quarter-century, she said: "Although he will no longer be at my side and no words can tell how I shall miss him, I trust that with God's help, I may still be able to continue some part, at least, of the service which for 42 years of happy married life we tried together to give to this great land and Empire."

It was a pledge she staunchly fulfilled through the difficult years and the dark days of the Second World War and the bitter post-war years, until illness this winter forced curtailment of her activities.

She was born May 26, 1867, in Kensington Palace, the daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Teck and a great grand-daughter of King George III. Her parents christened her Victoria Mary Augusta Louisa Olga Pauline Claudine Agnes, but she became known as Princess May.

After Prince Edward's death of influenza in 1891, she married George in 1893. The death of Victoria, in 1901, and of George's father, Edward VII, in 1910, brought them to the throne.

As Queen-Empress, and later as Queen Mother, she led a busy life of public service. She inspected slums and the homes of the working classes, gave generously to charity, visited hospitals, institutions and orphanages, constantly mingled with different classes of society, and was an indefatigable patroness of the arts and the theatre.

Trained in economical methods as the daughter of not-wealthy parents, she ran her palaces on strict and careful budgets. She rose early, ate lightly, carried on a voluminous correspondence and remained the centre of her large family.

During the Second World War, when she moved to the relative security of the Gloucestershire village of Badminton, she helped in troop canteens, organized entertainments, often dug in her vegetable garden as an example to the "dig for victory" campaign for more food, and gave standing orders to her chauffeur to give rides to any limousine to servicemen and women walking or resting on the highway.

White-haired, stately, ramrod-straight, her aristocratic imperiousness softened by humanity and simplicity, the old Queen in her later years represented what historian Arthur Bryant described as "the English sense of honor, of quiet certainty, of continuing standards."

The millions of Britons loved her for these qualities and for her touches—the fifty-eighty-year umbrella, the turban-like hats she always wore because "George liked them," her tireless shopping, her great needlework, and all the other things that made her a woman as well as a Queen.

Queen Mary's public appearances began to dwindle after the death of her husband, decreasing in number and weariness took their toll. Trying to maintain her regime, she spent her last Christmas at the royal country home in Norfolk, Sandringham, but a chill delayed her return to London until the end of January.

The first indication of her last illness came three weeks ago, in a brief statement that she had been confined to her bed for a week with a recurrence of gastric trouble.

HAWKS IN DIXIE!

The Black Hawks can grab a stranglehold on the junior "B" championship series tonight in Dixie if they can turn back the starry Flash Hollett crew. The series now stands at two games to one for the Hawks and if they can grab the verdict tonight they would be strong favorites to sop the round here on Saturday night when the fifth game of the series will be played.

But it won't be an easy task tonight. The Flashers are back in their own ballwick and they will be fough nuts to crack. However the Hawks will be at full strength, it is reported, and are confident they can take the measure of the speedy crew from the west.

STANLEY CUP PLAYOFF NOTES

Fresh from winning their fifth straight National Hockey League championship, something no other club has ever done before, Detroit Red Wings, defending Stanley Cup holders, are making a bid for their sixth Stanley Cup. The Wings will also be out to duplicate their record set last year when they captured the Cup in the minimum number of games. The Wings copped the Cup in eight consecutive games, downing Toronto in the semi-finals and Montreal in the finals, each in four straight. The Wings won the Cup in 1936, 1937, 1943, 1950 and 1952. The 1953 playoffs mark Detroit's 14th, straight appearance in Stanley Cup play. No other club can equal this record for the last 14 years. This is Detroit's sixth playoff series in as many years as Detroit coach. During that time the Wings were Cup winners twice and finalists thrice. Iwon pilsted the 1950 and 1952 Stanley Cup winners, while Jack Adams, who managed all five Cup champions, also coached the 1936, 1937 and 1943 winners.

This is the 23rd. appearance in Stanley Cup playoffs for Montreal Canadiens. Canadiens were winners in 1930, 1931, 1944 and 1946. They also won in 1924, prior to the expansion of the N.H.L. Dick Irvin, oldest coach in professional hockey at 50, has mentored three Stanley Cup champions. He coached Toronto in 1932 and Canadiens in 1944 and 1946. This is Irvin's 32nd, playoffs as a coach. Maurice Richard, Montreal right winger, holds several playoff records. He holds the mark for most goals, 47 in eight playoff series. His 12 goals in nine games in 1945-44 playoffs is a record for most goals in a single series. Richard's five goals against Toronto on March 23, 1944, is also high mark for goals in a playoff game. The Rocket also holds the record for most points in playoff competition. He has 47 goals and 34 assists for 71 points. Elmer Lach, centre for Richard on Canadiens, and Toe Blake, former left winger on the same line, hold playoff record for most assists—37 in nine and 10 playoff series respectively. Toe Blake assisted on Richard's five goals on March 23, 1944, to hold record for most assists in a playoff game. Most points in one playoff game is five and is held jointly by Richard, Blake, Eddie Bush and Don Metz. Lach holds top mark for assists in one series—12 in nine games in 1943-44.

Fastest goal in a playoff game was scored by Sid Smith, of Toronto, against Canadiens on April 11, 1951. He scored 15 seconds after game started. Longest overtime game lasted 176 minutes and 30 seconds. A total of 116 minutes and 30 seconds of extra play was recorded before Mud Bruneteau scored for Detroit to give Red Wings a 1-0 win over Montreal Maroons. Game played in Montreal on March 24, 1936. Shortest overtime game lasted 25 seconds. Syd Howe scored for Detroit against New York American on March 19, 1940, at Detroit, to give Wings a 2-1 win. 247,855 people witnessed 20 playoff games in 1945 for an attendance record. Most one-sided victory in Stanley Cup play was when Canadiens shut out Toronto 11-0, on March 30, 1944, at Montreal. First United States city to win Stanley Cup was Seattle, in WHA. U.S. teams have won trophy 14 times in all. 73 times since the N.H.L. was formed in 1917-18. Last United States final was between New York Rangers and Detroit in 1950. Average number of goals per game in last 16 playoff series is 16. Last year's playoffs went 15 games.

Ted Kennedy, captain of Toronto Maple Leafs, has played on five Stanley Cup teams. No other player in modern hockey can match that feat. Conn Smythe has managed seven Toronto Maple Leaf teams to the Stanley Cup. No manager can beat this record. Toronto is the only team in the history of the N.H.L. to annex Lord Stanley's pewter three successive years. Leafs did that in 1947, 1948 and 1949. Turk Broda took part in more play-off games than any other player. The former Toronto goalkeeper played in 101 playoff tilts. He holds the record for most shutouts in playoffs—13 in 13 playoff series. Terry Sawchuk, Detroit; Frank McCool, Toronto and Dave Kerr, N.Y. Rangers, share the record for most shutouts by a goalkeeper. Each has registered four shutouts in a playoff series—Kerr in 1937, McCool in 1945 and Sawchuck in 1952. Toe Blake holds the most points in a series—18. He had seven goals and 11 assists in nine games in 1943-44 playoffs. Lach, Richard and Blake amassed 48 points among them in this 1943-44 series, which is most scoring points by one forward line. Boston Bruins have competed in 24 Cup playoffs in the 29 years they've been members of the National Hockey League.

Champions Defeat Boston 7-0 As Habs Defeather Hawks 3-1; Second Games Set For Thurs.

By ED SIMON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The trouble with the fable of the hare and the tortoise is that the hare doesn't always lose.

Frankie Chalou went a long way Tuesday night toward proving that while the race may not always be to the fleet, it helps to get home and cooled out early when you have a tough playoff series ahead.

In the last few games of the National Hockey League schedule, Detroit Red Wings and Montreal Canadiens decidedly weren't killing themselves. With their playoff positions assured, they allowed their opposition to kick them around while they saved their best licks for Stanley Cup play.

On the other hand, Boston Bruins and Chicago Black Hawks, in the thick of a three-way battle with Toronto Maple Leafs for the last two playoff spots, played their best hockey of the season as they locked over the opposition in the last few weeks to nail down third and fourth place respectively. Glenda Wins Cup

But the sleeping giants awoke Tuesday night when the Red Wings looked like the NHL champions they are in crushing Boston 7-0 in the opening game of their Stanley Cup semi-final. The second-string Chicago Black Hawks edged Hawk goalie Al Rollins, but were much the better team as they whipped Chicago 3-2.

Quite a few votes remain to be counted before the best-of-seven series ends, but the opening-night performances offered little comfort to the underdogs, who will try their luck again Thursday.

The Bruins' whose announced pre-series tactics were to check the Wings in a standstill, found themselves three goals down before the first period was halfway finished. The Hawks, trailing all comin, from behind, scored the first goal and couldn't get the range again.

Boston's main claim to fame was that they kept high-scoring Gordie Howe off the score sheet, a worthy achievement which was marred only by the fact that line-mates Marty Pavelich and Ted Lindsay were scoring two goals apiece at the time.

Stopped 43 Shots

Alex Delvecchio, Metro Prystai and Johnny Wilson were the other Detroit marksmen as the Wings fired 43 shots at Bruin goalie Jim Henry while Terry Sawchuk was called on to handle only 27 Boston drives, few of which were dangerous.

The same discrepancy was evident at Montreal as Canadiens' Gerry McNeil blocked 23 shots to 31 for Rollins, with the Hawks unable to do much damage to Cup goalie.

After a scoreless first period in which Chicago got away only two shots on goal, Gerry Coubure snagged a rebound to put the Hawks ahead 1-0 early in the second frame. But Bernie Geoffrion tied the score barely a minute later.

Defenceman Emile (Butch) Bouchard shot a screened shot for the winning goal in the third period and Paul Meger completed the scoring on a play that the Hawks disputed, claiming the puck hadn't entered the net.

Smiths Falls Wins 3rd in Row From Beavers

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—Smiths Falls Rideaus were within one game of capturing the Allan Cup eastern semi-finals after defeating Saint John Beavers 8-2 Tuesday night. The Rideaus lead the best-of-seven series 3-0.

The fourth game in the best-of-seven series will be played here Thursday.

More than 4,000 fans packed the Forum as the Rideaus continued the domination they gained in the first two games at Smiths Falls. Orval Gravelle and Eddie Mulligan led the goal-getters with three each. Other scorers for Smiths Falls were Stu Smith, Archie Richardson and Johnny Muretich. Saint John marksmen were Charlie Knox Jack Hamilton and Buck Rogers.

The visitors proved themselves sharper and smoother. Most of their goals followed nice passing play on the ice. Poor ice slowed the pace as the game progressed and the surface became watery in spots in the last period.

Saint John opened the scoring when Hamilton scored after two deuce served penalties. Then Gravelle, Mulligan and Knox added leads. The session ended 4-2 after Hamilton scored for Saint John.

Smiths Falls made it 7-3 during the second stanza, Gravelle and Mulligan ended the scoring.

Lineups

Saint John—Goal, Diguer; defence, Fowler, Kiley, Rogers, McDevit; forwards, Hewey, Choyce, Knox, Edwards, Nicolle, Hamilton, Shepherd, Grant, McPhee.

Officials—Louis LeCompte, Maurice Wahn.

Clear Way For Aussie Olympics

SYDNEY, Australia (CP)—The way was cleared today for Melbourne to keep the 1956 Olympic Games after settlement of a thorny housing issue.

Premier John Cain of Victoria announced his government has accepted the offer of the federal government for a loan of £2,000,000 approximately $5,714,000 for erection of an Olympic village. The loan is interest-free. The houses later will be used for residential developments.

This was just one in a series of obstacles which faced the Olympic organizing committee and which for a while threatened Melbourne's hold on the games.

The chairman of the games control committee, A. W. Coles, said he is confident now his report of Australia's preparations will be accepted by the International Olympic Committee in Mexico City April 17.

Campbellford Trims Wellington 8-4 In Trent Valley Finals Thriller

battle the Campbellford Greenshirts, north division champions, last night defeated the Wellington Dukes, southern division titleholders 8-4 in the opening game of the best-of-seven finals of the Trent Valley Hockey League.

Over twelve hundred fans, including large delegations from both centres were kept on the edge all night in Memorial Arena as both teams flashed a speedy brand of hockey, featured by more or less sensational efforts on the part of the respective goalies.

The second game of the series is scheduled for the arena Thursday night.

Scored Three in Second

Wellington roared back in the second half but could get no edge in the play, firing home three markers with a single return from the winners. The Dukes drew within striking distance shortly after that period opened to make the count 5 to 4.

The Greenshirts, however, uncorked another goal-getting drive and hit the hemp three times in three minutes to put the game on ice. The Dukes drove back in a frenzied effort to whittle the margin, but Nelson in the Campbellford nets, came up with a sparkling performance to keep them off the scoring list.

Referees Vern Goyer and "Red" Carson had "the troops" well under control, dishing out eleven penalties, one of them a misconduct to Hurst, who tossed a broken stick into the crowd after the game was but three seconds old. The only flistcuffing diversion which was registered came when the officials came in the third act when Payne and Yorke started a duel that netted them two minor penalties each.

Eady Got Three

Eady paced the Campbellford offensive with three goals while Payne being credited with four assists. Both Eady and Payne got one and two helpers with Craig, Cole, Blake and Wilson scoring singles.

Coulson, Goyer, Scott and Graham were the sharpshooters for the Dukes with Hurst being in on two of the tallies.

Channel replaced Parks, who was ill, in the Wellington nets and came through with a standout performance. At the other end, Nelson rose to some sort of goalkeeping heights especially in the third period when he stopped everything the Dukes tossed at him.

The teams:

Wellington—Goal, Channel; defense, Hurst, Yorke; forwards, Scott, Cousins, Graham, Goyer, Hatfield, Johnston, Pettingill, Twigg, Mowatt.

Timmins-Porkies Win Over Maritime Squad

NORTH SYDNEY, N.S. (CP)—Timmins - Porcupine Combines powered on the pressure in overtime Tuesday night to defeat Northside Franklins 5-4 in the opening game of their best-of-seven Memorial Cup hockey quarter-finals.

The game was full of thrills from the start, the Franklins matched strides with the visitors in the first period, slipped ahead in the second and came up with a 5-5 tie at the end of regulation time.

But there was no stopping the Combines in the overtime. After 30 seconds of play H. Jarvis broke down the right wing to score a backhand shot.

Pat Piche cut through centre to tally again for Combines and Marv Edwards scored the last of just after the eight-minute mark.

Franklins came back in the last two minutes but it was a case of too little too late as Combines skated off with a 9-7 victory.

'Teeder' Gets 200 Silver Bucks

TORONTO (CP)—Ted Kennedy, captain of Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, received 200 silver dollars Tuesday from an anonymous admirer.

They came in a box with an inscription on the cover depicting the 200th goal of Kennedy's NHL career which he scored in Montreal last Thursday.

A note with the gift said the "accompanying souvenirs" are intended to mark the occasion of the 200th goal mark and "the sincere admiration of your splendid leadership—your gentlemanly conduct on or off the ice."

Hundreds Seek Hockey Tickets

KITCHENER (CP)—Hundreds of hockey fans lined up Tuesday for ticket sales for the all-Ontario senior hockey finals Thursday and Friday between Sudbury Wolves and Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen.

Sudbury won the Northern Ontario Hockey Association title from Rouyn Flashes in four straight games. The Dutchmen needed six games to eliminate Owen Sound Mercurys from the best-of-seven Ontario Hockey Association Senior A finals.

This is the first time Kitchener senior hockey fans have had an OHA Senior A champion in 25 years.

Barons Defeat Syracuse 2-0 In Playoff

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

CLEVELAND, O. (AP)—Goaltender Johnny Bower recorded his first playoff shutout Tuesday night as Cleveland Barons defeated Syracuse Warriors 2-0 in the first game of a first-round series leading to the American Hockey League's Calder Cup.

Bower had appeared in 30 previous play-off games without a whitewash job.

After two scoreless periods, Ray Ceresino darted in on goalie Gordon Bell to put Cleveland ahead at 0:33 of the last period.

In the final minute, with the Syracuse goalie "out of the game, defenceman Fred Shero lobbed a long shot from in front of the Cleveland net all the way for a bullseye.

Attendance at the shot was around 159 feet.

Bower made 35 saves and Bell made 40.

The second game of the best-of-five series will be here Saturday, and the third at Syracuse Sunday night. Date of the third game was changed Tuesday at a conference of Cleveland, Syracuse and league officials.

Denies Probe Into Baseball

WASHINGTON (AP)—The department of justice Tuesday night denied reports it had ordered an immediate investigation of organized baseball.

The department also said in a statement no inquiry is planned into the refusal of the American League club owners to let St. Louis Browns move to Baltimore.

The department's statement said:

"Reports that Attorney General Brownell had ordered an immediate investigation into organized baseball or into the refusal of the American League club owners to let the St. Louis Browns move to Baltimore were denied today by the department of justice."

Schmidt, 'Craftiest Veteran' In National Hockey League

This story is one of a Canadian Press series on outstanding players and teams in the National Hockey League. Selections were made in a poll of sports writers and sportscasters in NHL cities.

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—Milt Schmidt, pudged into hockey when his mother wouldn't allow him to play football because it was too rough, is the craftiest veteran in the National Hockey League. He edged out Elmer Lach, another smoothie, for the accolade.

Sports writers and sportscasters of the six NHL cities gave the nod to the Boston Bruin centre today as a belated birthday gift. He was 33 on March 5, second oldest player in the league.

The oldest is the much cut-up Lach of Montreal Canadiens, whose birth certificate shows he was born in Nokomis, Sask., Jan. 22, 1918.

Other Smoothies

Six others were named—the ailing Max Bentley of Toronto Maple Leafs; the flashing Bill Quackenbush and Joe Klukay; Bob Goldham of Detroit Red Wings; playing-coach Sid Abel, Chicago Black Hawks, and Paul Ronty of New York Rangers, who didn't make the big time until 1947.

It was a two-way race between Schmidt, who has played all his big-league hockey with Bruins—from 1936 and interrupted by two years by war duty—and Lach, with Canadiens since 1940. Schmidt ended with a one-vote margin.

Both "Millie" and Elmer are great competitors and playmakers. Both are handy to have around when hockey starts on the fee and practically in any given situation—when their team is shorthanded, when the opposition is shorthanded and when the heat is on for sixty-minute scoring punch.

A couple of selectors said that Schmidt was better than the ice cuties of years ago—Frank Nighbor, one of the greatest defensive centres of all time with the old Ottawa Senators; Nels (Old Poison) Stewart of Montreal Maroons fame, and Newsy Lalonde, fireball Montreal Maroons oldtimer.

Lou Walter of the Detroit Times said that Schmidt's "great all-round ability, coupled with smartness" made him "superior" to the three old-timers.

Bobby Hewitson, Toronto Telegram sports editor and former NHL referee, said that Schmidt "has all the answers in a pinch" and is "as good" as Lalonde, Stewart and Nighbor. Baz O'Meara, veteran sports editor of the Montreal Star, gave the nod to Lach "on the say so of opposing players" and added that he "belongs" with the one-time cuties.

Sportscaster Ward Wilson of WHDH, New York: "Without him the Bruins are nothing." He added, however, that he would "take Nels."

Sue Falls, The Associated Press, Detroit: "He's a great shot maker and looks greater this year than ever as a playmaker."

More Supporters

Dan Desmond, Chicago Herald-American, picked Lach because he "knows all the angles, does everything well, is a good playmaker and certainly is a stabilizing influence on Montreal's young skaters."

Marcel Desjardins of La Presse, Montreal, said that Lach "is an inspiration to the team and to Maurice Richard; he has fed the Rocket consistently." Desjardins thought Lach compared "favorably" with Lalonde, Stewart and Nighbor.

Vince Lunny, Montreal Herald sports editor, called Lach and added: "He's the best veteran in the league, too." Other Lach supporters were Red Burnett of the Toronto Daily Star and Dana Morley, New York Daily News.

Stanley Cooper, 4th eye of sportscaster Foster Hewitt of CKFH, Toronto. "Max is small (five feet, 9½ inches and 165 pounds) and a guy who has gone as long as he has must be crafty," Hewitt said. He figured the Delisle, Sask., native was better than Stewart and Lalonde.

Sportscaster Frank Stare of CJAD, Montreal, sided with Hewitt, saying that "because of Bentley's size he must rely on deception to score."

Ben Olan of The Associated Press, New York, picked Quackenbush. "He's the solid man of a young Bruin team and knows all there is to know" about the game, Olan said.

Sportscaster Frank Fallon of WMEX, Boston, chose Abel and John Gillooly of the Boston Daily Record put the finger on Ronty. He described him as an "escape artist."

Galt Hawks, St. Mikes In Overtime Draw

GALT (CP)—Galt Black Hawks Tuesday night fought to a 3-3 overtime draw with Toronto St. Michael's in the fourth game of their best-seven semi-finals of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series. St. Michael's lead the semi-finals 3-1, one game tied.

A 40-foot backhand screened shot by Long John Sleaver at 17:55 of the third period gave the Hawks the tie.

The teams will meet tonight at Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto and will be back here Friday night.

Galt scored first after five minutes of play, when Minnie Stewart made no mistake on his breakaway.

Eight minutes later St. Mikes tied it up, Mike Ratchford beating Binkley on a beautiful play.

The Irish went out up in the second session. Bill Lee flashing the light on assists from Paul Bain and Murray Costello.

Then came Sleaver's tieing goal in the third.

It was typical clean playoff hockey, with only seven penalties. Galt had a great chance in the second with two Irish players in the sin-bin but couldn't capitalize.

See it—it's really new! No fewer than 33 new features in the body and chassis alone! Easier to park (no power steering needed here!) Wonderfully smooth-riding car...holds the road like a coat of paint (better balance is the reason!). And it gives you all the great economy for which the Minx is famous—up to 35 miles to a gallon of gas...plus top trade-in value.

Remember—seven factory branches and over 700 dealers in North America insure you expert service and factory parts wherever you drive.

See it—see the Hillman sedan, convertible, estate wagon. You'll love the Minx...and you'll love that civilized price!

Going abroad? See your dealer about the economical Rootes Overseas Delivery Plan.

BERTIE MEANWELL

WHEN MRS. MEANWELL ASKED BERTIE TO DRAIN A PUDDLE OF SLUSH FROM THE FRONT WALK, YOU'D THINK SHE'D ASKED HIM TO WALK UNDER LAKE SUPERIOR...

THESE RUBBER BOOTS DON'T LEAK, DO THEY? MAYBE I BETTER PUT ON MY HEAVY SOCKS, WHERE'S MY WOOLEN SWEATER? NO SENSE TAKING CHANCES. BAD TIME OF YEAR TO GET A CHILL. WHERE'S MY ETC., ETC.

TWO DAYS LATER THE TROUT SEASON OPENED AND "BEARD-THEM-IN-THEIR DEN" BERTIE WAS UP AND OUT AT DAWN.

AT THE CAPITOL — Randolph Scott and Patricia Wymore share the action and romance of "The Man Behind the Gun," Warner Bros.' new Technicolor outdoor production opening Thursday at the Capitol Theatre for its first Belleville showing. On the same program, Johnny Weissmuller in "Swamp Fire."

landing here by mistake in a rocket ship. They work feverishly to keep out of sight of humans until they can repair their ship and continue on their way."

The "visitors" accomplish their missions by using humans. Certain citizens of an Arizona town are hypnotized and instructed to do the visitors' will by telepathy. The visiting space travellers will be seen by the audience only in one brief, horrific flash. The shot is expected to draw a large response from movie goers, since the talk citizens of an Arizona town picture is in 3-D.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Today the wraps were taken off a super-secret science fiction film, the first in three dimensions. The picture has an unusual switch:

The creatures who arrive on earth from another planet are not invaders, but visitors. They happen here by mistake and work like beavers to get back home.

The picture is called "It Came From Outer Space," and it features Richard Carlson and Barbara Rush. It was filmed in its entirety with a "no visitors" sign on the stage door. Even the studio's press agent was not allowed on the set.

Now that the Universal-International film is completed, the studio is willing to talk about it. I chatted with Ray Bradbury, one of the most successful science fiction writer. He was author of the original story.

"I started from the premise that there will be conflict if the inhabitants of two planets meet," he explained. "My reasoning is this: If there is any life on other planets, it would be alien in habits and customs. It is doubtful if it has developed into similar that humans. Even if these creatures are intellectually developed beyond humans as that they have abolished war and conflict, there will be a shock when they meet earth people.

"The two races will be so dissimilar that communication is found. The result. So I envisioned creatures

AT THE BELLE—Edmund Gwenn and Patricia Neal eavesdrop on a fellow traveller's radio in "Something For The Birds", Twentieth Century Fox's new comedy, co-starring Victor Mature, showing continuing Today and Thursday at the Belle Theatre. Paul Henried and Lizabeth Scott are co-starred in "Stolen Face", gripping romantic drama, the added attraction.

There was the deal shown here:

NORTH
♠5 3
♥Q 9 8 3
♦A K 8 2
♣Q 10 7

WEST
♠10 9
♥J 7 6
♦Q 10 7 6 4 3
♣A 8

EAST
♠Q 8 2
♥K 5
♦J 8
♣9 5 4 3 2

SOUTH
♦5
♣K 6

The bidding should go like this:

South	North
1 S	2 D
2 S	3 NT
4 NT	5 H
6 S	Pass

In answer to four no-trump, five hearts is the convention signal for showing one ace and only one king. Even with one ace and one king missing, an expert south should try for a small slam in his suit.

The north jump to three no-trump is enough to encourage south into slam inviting ideas. And the general idea is that it should be in spades when the contract finally ends.

But, having felt his way along this far, at least one expert in the south decided to shoot for a top. Instead of ending in spades he went to six no-trump for the higher score it might pay.

The declarer got a break when the opening lead from west was a heart. Not only did he make his contract with comparative ease. He actually took all 13 tricks. Roll them lit.

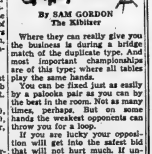
Raiders, Shrimps Win Y Games

The last game of the series of the Y. M. C. A. basketball house league was played last night when the Red Raiders and the Hot Shots crashed for first position in the series. In the last few seconds of the game the Red Raiders edged the Hotshots 31-28.

The second game between the Shrimps and the Aces was won by the Shrimps by default.

With last night's games the Red Raiders have captured first place with 18 points.

Hotshots are in second place with 16 points, Aces 3rd with 8 points and Shrimps fourth with 6 points.



Playoffs of the three teams with the highest scores start next Tuesday, when the Hotshots play the Aces at 4:30 p. m. The winners of this game play the Red Raiders the following Tuesday, April 7th, at 7.30 p. m. to decide the champions.

Line up:

A picked team from players participating in the House League travelled to Kingston last Saturday to play against another team of their age at the Kingston Y. M. C. A. At half time, both teams had 25 points each but before the game was over, the Belleville team taking advantage of their opponents weaknesses outscored them with a score of 75-51. After the game the Belleville boys were entertained by Kingston. Three members of the Y's Men's Club, Ed Littlejohn, Ted Woodley and Scott Denton, made the trip possible by driving the team to and from Kingston.

Where they can really give you the business is during a bridge match of the duplicate type. And most important championship are of this type; where all tables play the same hands.

You can be fixed just as easily by a palooka pair as you can by a pair best in the room. Not as many times, perhaps. But on some hands the weakest opponents can throw you for a loop.

If you are lucky your opposition will get into the safest bid that will not hurt much. If unlucky, the pups against you at the moment are likely to take a flier that gives you a bottom.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes, and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR THURSDAY, MARCH 26, 1953

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—May be working against time now, so be more than ordinarily careful. Be extra cautious. Be most mindful how you express yourself.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Watch out for the small things. Any step toward a more helpful program will benefit.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Nothing worth trying is worth skipping over lightly. Do what you must do well; makes for surer achievement. Double-check at times.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Be not dismayed at your faults, mistakes.. or those of others. Remain composed. Eyes ahead. Confidence in future!

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Better be a little slower than rush ahead and later have to retrace steps. P.M. rays more suited to new matters.

August 23 to September 22 (Virgo)—Evenness of purpose and disposition may be trying now, but it is required. Encouragement may be missing, but the future will improve your affairs.

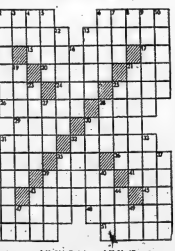
September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—May be dull or interesting day according to your viewpoint. But that is when to look for hidden advantages. Don't neglect health requirements.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Fine prospects for advancing your propositions, plans, activities. Romance in special favor.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Your status quo has an upward trend this period if you remain "on the beam." But avoid hasty decisions.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—Powerful influences at work for benefits that can be obtained this period through personal attitude and effort. Think before you act.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Vibrations encouraging; check personal guesses and opinions by studying, observing, inquiring of others. Tone down your thoughts.



February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Compromise ; only where principles are not to be marred, and where you can help bring about better conditions. Be extra alert!

YOU BORN TODAY: Your Mars planet is productive for many activities, but whole-hearted co-operation is invited for fulfillment. You are innately sociable, artistic and forceful. The Aries native living on the higher plane can attain in any profession or trade. Birthdate of: W. S. Van Dyke, motion picture producer.

Enter U.S. Waters, Fishermen Pay Fines of $1,012

HAMBURG, N. Y. (AP)—Five fishermen from Port Maitland, Ont., have been fined a total of $1,012.50 on a charge of fishing in United States waters.

James Hazelle Jr., Buffalo district game protector, said a party of seven game protectors boarded the Canadians' fishing tug on Lake Erie last week and confiscated 3,000 pounds of white fish. He said the tug was off the mouth of Catt'araugus creek near here.

The Canadians were identified as Leo P. Siddall, Elmer G. Hoover, William C. Woods, John D. Cotter, and Donald A. Green. They paid fines of $202.50 each Saturday before town of Hamburg peace justice Leonard H. Busch.

Hazelle said the confiscated fish was sold by the state to a commercial fishery for $750.

READ

READ — Mrs. M. J. Hunt is seriously ill in Picton home suffering a hemorrhage on Friday evening.

A new separate two-room school is to be built here in the near future.

Mrs. Annie Brennan, Rosemary and Gerald were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Coffey, at Lonsdale.

The many friends of Mr. Tim Murphy were sorry to hear that he was seriously ill in the Hotel Dieu, Kingston.

WHITE'S DISTRICT

Community Honors Recent Bride, Groom With Many Gifts

WHITE'S DISTRICT — On Monday evening friends, neighbors and relatives met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Jones to honor their younger son Donald, and his bride, with a miscellaneous shower.

Mrs. Jermyn Palmer acted as chairlady and after a few remarks to the bridal couple, seated under a pink-and-white and pink and white streamers, she called on Mrs. George Bilham to read the address, congratulating Donald and welcoming Lillian to the community.

They, assisted by his cousin, Miss Betty Westfall, proceeded to open the many gifts of china, pyrex, glassware, towels, tablecloths and other useful articles.

Donald and Lillian thanked one and all for their gifts and invited all to visit them in their home, "For they are jolly good fellows" was sung and bounteous refreshments served and a social time enjoyed.

WHITE'S DISTRICT — Visitors at J. C. White's last week were Mr. Richard Watson of Toronto and Mr. Harold Duncan of Todmorden, both of these men sold their 100-acre farms to be subdivided in new Yorkton subdivision.

Mr. Garnet Mansell of Toronto had dinner with his mother, Mrs. Violet Mansell.

On Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Mansell, of Toronto, visited their parents; also Mr. Reginald Henwood of Toronto, and Miss Nellie Martin, of Welland.

MARMORA

Canvass for Home For Blind Nets $536.66

MARMORA — The recent canvass for funds for the new Home for the Blind in Kingston, under taken by various local organizations under supervision of Reeve Irwin McCoy of Marmora, and Lake Township, resulted in $536.66 being raised for that purpose. This amount has been turned in to Mrs. F. E. Wells, treasurer, who has been the local representative of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind for some years.

The C.N.I.B., through Mrs. Wells, expresses thanks to all canvassers whose efforts resulted in this goodly sum being raised.

General at UN

Search For a Hero

By Thomas Hal Phillips

"Like all the rich, he had enough sin on his hands already. He kept my brothers out —they're football stars. And besides, I wanted to get away from it; and I didn't bring any of it with me, either. You know what I left with, after my ticket was bought? Two dollars and twenty-five cents. Got 90 cents left. If you think I'm lying, just remember you haven't seen me drinking any milk shakes."

"Money's nothing. Of course, I don't say you can't have some fun making ducks and drakes of it."

We finished dressing. David asked me to pull his blouse down over his shoulders, as if by that gesture he had let me into his world. "I'm going up and see the chief that's giving this exam," he said. "You want to go? He's a good guy."

"Not now. It's too early."

"I'll see you up there then."

* * *

I was early for the exam—eager I suppose. David came in with the chief and sat beside me. When all 29 of our platoon were there and seated, the chief efficiently distributed the papers, backs up, and gave proper instructions and proper precautions that both speed and accuracy were involved. Then "Now men, don't be scared of this thing. Just do the best you can. Remain in your seats when finished. Tomorrow at 0845 grades will be posted, along with your destinations. Ready? On the mark, ...go!"

I was the first to finish—I had not yet learned that one should never be first. But there was nothing to the test if you had read the Blue Jacket's Manual. The chief took my paper and kept eyeing me as if he thought I had smuggled in a spy. Occasionally he read a page, and finally called me to the front of the room.

"What kind of mind you got!"

"What kind?"

"Here. Read this." He opened a book— Dalton's Modern Seamanship. "Read last page there."

If the print is not too small I can look at a page and know what's on it—like looking at a face: all at once, not the eyes, then the nose, then the chin. As long as I can remember a part of it, I can remember all of it; when it goes it goes completely.

He closed the book. "What did it say?"

"Word for word?"

"Yeah."

"When bearings on points A, B, C are accurate, the fix will be accurate, and all lines will coincide at point F. If a triangle is formed, a less accurate fix will be determined by the centre of ..."

"What did the last sentence say?"

"Observe the bearing closely; if there is no appreciable change the vessel is steering a collision course."

"That's enough. Your paper's all right. I've always wanted to see somebody with a photographic mind. But how's come you ain't got no muscles?"

"Never had to work."

He took hold of my arm. "If you had some meat there, you'd be a whale in this navy. Where you from?"

"Mississippi."

"Maybe you got hookworm. Course you're not so lean. Hookworm makes you lean."

"I wouldn't know."

"You always had enough to eat?"

"Too much."

"Oh....You're the kid with dough?"

"Who told you that?"

"I got it straight now. This life's gonna be a little rough on you, but you pull through. That's all. List'll be posted tomorrow at 0945."

Just as I got outside I heard the chief say, "That kid's got a photographic mind and his old man's a millionaire."

The Texan said, "Yeah, you can tell he's filthy rich—won't spend a quarter for a milk shake.

* * *

I thought of the shock the chief would get when he opened my Service Record to record my grade and saw that my father laid ties and drove spikes for a living.

The next morning the list was posted. After I read it I hurried to the chief's office. He was drinking coffee, his foot cocked up on the window sill, the saucer resting on his knee, the sunlight on his wide, flush face. In the light, that way, it seemed that he should have been much more than a chief yeoman— a gentleman farmer looking out upon his land, a mill owner, watching his hundreds of workers rush to their jobs.

He did not move; he was looking out the window. "Maybe you not going nowhere."

"How come?"

"Soft spot if my heart, I got a kid nearly as old as you. I'm not gonna feed you to the wolves just because you got dough." He put the cup and saucer on the window sill and turned around. The light made his slightly gray hair look thin, made his heavy-set body seem rigid — all like a schoolteacher just before the end of the term.

"Kid, you'd be a whale if you had a suntan and a few more pounds up here." He hit his chest. "You gonna stay here with me till you get it. The quickest way is an hour down in Versailles every day, 1630-1730. There's a general grudge in this world against rich folks and good minds. I know because I got left out in both cases. When we change you up a little you can take what ever's dished out. Take this back to the galley. You'll have mess-cook duty this week." He handed me the cup and saucer.

I looked at him. "If you're keeping me here because you think I'm rich, maybe you ought to know my daddy is a hand on the railroad. He's not even a section foreman."

"You can't fast-ball me. A mind like you got don't belong to no pore boy."

"All righteisom Telaoin eatn After a minute I said, "All right you win. We're rich if you want it that way, but I want to get away from here."

He laughed again and shook his head. "You can't bribe me. I'm a perfectionist, see? I believe in perfection. I'm gonna make something perfect out of you. That's all I'm interested in in this world —perfection. Now with a little work in Versailles...."

BANCROFT

Canvass For Funds

BANCROFT — A campaign to raise funds in aid of the North Hastings Red Cross hospital was initiated last week. Canvassers will cover the entire community and outlying townships in an effort to raise a substantial sum sorely needed at the present for the maintenance of this modern and progressive institution which is as fine as any to be found in a comparable community. Treasurer for the drive is Mr. Chet Work.

The hospital was allocated a grant of $2,200 in the recent budget brought down by Premier Leslie Frost. The board of the hospital has found that much more will be needed to carry on the work of the hospital.

Mr. Cecil Wiggins has returned home and is recuperating following an operation at Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Foster were business visitors to Toronto last week.

Mr. Harry McCaw, Haliburton is visiting relatives in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Kabler, New York, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Baker of Hornell, N. Y., visited with Mr. and Mrs. William McGhee at L'Amable last week.

The many friends of Duncan Grant will be happy to see him back home after treatment in Toronto for injuries received in his unfortunate accident last December.

An estimated 800 persons from this district were in Belleville on Friday night for what proved to be the final hockey game of the year.

Miss Joyce Brown, nurse-in-training at Kingston General Hospital, is spending a three-week vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Brown.

Many persons from town attended the Sportsmen's Show in Toronto last week including Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Mather, Mr. and Mrs. Ted Maxwell, Fred Delyea and Mr. and Mrs. Blair Brunson.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Hannah have returned home from a trip to Malton and Toronto.

Mr. Henry Stewart is a patient in the local hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Sabine, Marmora, and son, Garth, were visitors to town last week.

Mrs. Lucy McGhee left on the week-end on a business trip to Toronto and Niagara Falls.

Mr. Vic Frederick, Peterborough, was a business visitor in town on Thursday.

Padre Goforth, M. C., and Mr. "Squib" Mowat of the H. and P. E. Regiment will be at the Armories on Thursday evening in connection with the compiling of the regimental history.

Miss Gladys Grayling, Peterborough, spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Grayling.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Broughton and children returned home on the week-end from a vacation trip in Florida. Mr. and Mrs. Broughton spent a two-week holiday there with Mr. and Mrs. Aub Winch, formerly of Bancroft.

MARMORA

40th Wedding Anniversary Highlighted by Surprise Party

MARMORA — Taking the form of a surprise party, the 40th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hannah, popular townsfolk, was celebrated at their home on Forsyth Street on Saturday evening.

A mock band led the parade of relatives and neighbors from the nearby home of Blake Ketcheson to that of the honored couple. Here Jack Grant, brother of Mrs. Hannah, carried out the duties of Master of Ceremonies.

A mock wedding was enacted followed by the singing of parodies of a nuptial nature on well known songs. Jack Grant then sang, "Only a touch of Thy hand, Dear Lord," and for an encore, "It is no Secret."

Pianists for the evening were Mrs. Gordon Bateman and Mrs. Milton Campbell.

The presentation of gifts to the honored couple included a ruby ring from the family to Mrs. Hannah, and that of a wrist watch to her husband.

The event celebrated took place at the Methodist parsonage, Moneagle Valley, on Tuesday, March 11th., 1913, Rev. Ernest Harston was the officiating minister with the attendants being Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Campbell.

The groom of 1913 is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Hannah and Mrs. Hannah is the daughter of Mrs. Wesley Grant and the late Wesley Grant, who moved from the Maynooth district in Marmora a little over 35 years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Hannah moved to Marmora 33 years ago. The former worked at Deloro for the past 30 years for a number of years and then decided to take up farming in the Bonarlaw district.

He returned to Marmora 13 years ago to go into the dairy business.

Of six children blessing the union, five are living today, namely Mrs. William Abrams (Violet), Ottawa; Frank, Marmora; Mrs. Gordon Bateman (Iris) Harold; Mrs. Doris McKaren, at home and Wilda, Reg. N., Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

Police Believe Victims Dead Since Sunday, Asphyxiated

SUDBURY (CP)—Two district men found dead on a sand-covered bathroom floor in a house four miles, east of here were identified by provincial police today.

The men, Mervyn Zinkle, 38, and Richard M. Llewellyn, 44, were found in crouched positions. Sand covered the floor and filled the tub and sink. The men were clad only in their underwear.

Police are puzzled by the sand. So far no explanation has been offered for its presence. An autopsy has been ordered to determine the cause of the deaths. One theory is that they were asphyxiated.

The men are believed to have been dead since Sunday. They were found Wednesday after repeated telephone calls from neighbors went unanswered, and police were called.

Wife Flying Home

The house belonged to Llewellyn. His wife, in Montreal for the last three weeks, is flying home today.

Zinkle is survived by his parents, with whom he lived, two brothers and one sister, all of Copper Cliff. Llewellyn was a machinist, came to Sudbury from Wales in 1929. He is survived by his wife and a brother Jack. In Sudbury, he had no relatives and one brother there.

Both Quiet People

"They were quiet people who didn't mix very much with the others here," Mrs. Carruthers said. "I didn't pay much attention when I didn't see them around."

Zinkle is survived by his parents, with whom he lived, two brothers and one sister, all of Copper Cliff. Llewellyn was a machinist, came to Sudbury from Wales in 1929. He is survived by his wife and a brother Jack. In Sudbury, he had no relatives and one brother there.

Both men served with the Canadian forces during the second world war.

Eggs Are Off Ration in UK

LONDON (AP)—Eggs came off the ration in Britain today for the first time in twelve years.

The Poultry Association celebrated by sending a dozen new-laid eggs to Prime Minister Churchill and the food and agriculture ministers.

Prices no longer will be controlled. The egg price now ranges between the equivalent of five and seven cents apiece.

Wildcat Strike Spreads in N.S.

NEW WATERFORD, N. S. (CP) Coal miners stayed away from another mine today as a crippling wildcat strike was literally affected nearly a third of Nova Scotia's 10,000 miners, threatened to spread across Cape Breton's coal fields.

Rejecting their union chief's "return to work" order at a meeting Wednesday night, miners refused to order locals and asked for support of their protest against suspension of 13 miners for refusing to follow company orders.

The top-produced No. 12 colliery of Dominion Coal and Steel Corporation closed Monday when the pit's working force of 1,200 stayed home. Maintenance men pulled out Wednesday, leaving company officials to operate the pumps to keep water from damaging machinery deep underground.

The No. 8 colliery's 1,200 miners joined the walkout Wednesday, and the single-shift No. 15, employing about 550 men, became idle today.

The 13 miners were suspended for refusing to work further down the coal face. Since they are paid on a tonnage basis, they claimed it was unfair to be ordered to another section where loading and other conditions might not be as favorable.

Freeman Jenkins, chief of the United Mine Workers (CCL) District 26, told the workers that the strike was illegal.

Old Baldy Loss Is Not Serious

TOKYO (AP)—Gen. Mark Clark, United Nations Far East commander, said today he does not think the loss of Old Baldy on Korea's western front is a serious blow, but "it is always serious when we lose people."

He told reporters there is no indication the Chinese gained from the shadows a spring offensive by the Communists.

Asked about a New York Times report that shiploads of artillery shells have been diverted from Korea to other parts of the world because ammunition is overstocked in Korea, Clark answered:

"I know nothing of it."

"We're now in good shape on ammunition," he added.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO(CP)—Synopsis: Cool air pushing over Ontario and Maritime Wednesday was halted by a disturbance which developed off the coast of Delaware and moved northeastward into New York State. Heavy warm air dilation encouraged in battle with the cool air along a front lying across eastern Ontario. With the warm air gaining ground rain is gradually spreading westward into central regions of Ontario. Widely scattered snowflurries will continue today in the cool air in northern regions.

Friday will be a little milder but skies will remain cloudy across most of Ontario.

COMMONS ENTERS ANOTHER ROUND ON POWERS ACT

Extending Bill Given First Reading Wed.

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons today will start another round of debate on renewal for another year of the emergency power the government can use without reference to Parliament.

A government move to renew the Emergency Powers Act for another year—from the end of March to May 31, 1954—has been before the House for more than a month. Opposition CCF and Social Credit parties also are opposed to extending the act, claiming it usurps powers that belong to Parliament and is not necessary in peacetime.

Discuss Bills

The Commons spent most of Wednesday's half-day session discussing a government measure to extend the right of citizens to sue the crown beyond the present limitations of bringing an action in the exchequer court on the grounds of negligence.

The measure would place the crown in the same position as private persons concerning liability for breaches committed by servants of the crown; give jurisdiction involving breach of duty with respect to ownership, possession, occupation or control of property; for the purposes of any law of federal motor cars and for civil salvage.

Army, Navy Guns Boom Out Salutes To Dead Queen

LONDON (CP) — Forty-gun salutes boomed out across Britain at noon today as military posts throughout the land took part in paying homage to Queen Mary.

The King's Troop of the Royal Horse Artillery, mounted fullbattle uniform, fired the London salute in Hyde Park, close to Marlborough House where the 85-year-old grandmother of the Queen died Tuesday night.

Others were fired at Edinburgh and Edinburgh castles in Scotland. All ships of the navy and army and naval air stations at home and abroad simultaneously gave the 40-gun tribute, firing each shot at one-minute intervals.

As the body of the Queen was moved from her home to the little chapel on the grounds, officials responsible for ceremony at half-staff in the bright sunshine. Gun carriages drawn by sailors who hold will keep watch over the coffin in the chapel until Saturday when it will be carried in procession to Westminster Hall, the historic meeting place of Parliament, for the lying-in-state.

REALLY ANCIENT

OSLO, Norway (CP)—The Paleontological Museum here has opened exhibition of the skeleton of a prehistoric reptile ever found in Norway. The ichthyosaurus was unearthed last summer in north Norway is the fossil of an animal estimated to be 120,000,000 years old.

Man in Custody Says He Is Not Harry Duguid

VANCOUVER (CP)—A 38-year-old man in custody here said Wednesday he is not Harry Duguid, No. 8 on the RCMP's list of most-wanted criminals.

The man, arrested when he attempted to break into a theater and then overpowered by police after a struggle, said he was born in Scotland. His name is Harry Duguid, Thornhill.

He made the claim in a prison interview.

Fingerprints taken after his arrest Monday were sent to Ottawa Monday. They will be compared with the prints of Duguid on file for the final decision.

Duguid was awaiting trial in Welland, Ont., county jail in 1947 when he sawed his way through two sets of bars and escaped.

Eager Lake Skipper 'Beats the Gun' In Opening Navigation at the Soo

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) Somewhat of an international incident was created here today when the freighter Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, owned by United States Coast Guard orders and sailed up the Sir Mary's river—three days before the waterway was officially opened to navigation.

News that Capt. A. R. Irvine, skipper of the Shaughnessy, had ignored coast guard orders that no ships enter the river before Saturday, spread rapidly as many radio operators monitored exchanges between him and Cmdr. A. Dahlberg of the coast guard shore station at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

Cmdr. Dahlberg ordered Capt. Irvine to dock for what he called "private conversations." But Dahlberg said an international incident was created here today when the freighter Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, owned by United States Coast Guard orders and sailed up the Sir Mary's river—three days before the waterway was officially opened to navigation.

It is not known whether the vessel, out of winter berth at Goderich, will lock through into Lake Superior or sit. Earlier reports said the ship would use the Canadian canal.

Meanwhile, the freighter Mohawk Deer, stuck all morning in ice in the lower St. Mary's river, 25 miles from the Soo, is reported to have freed herself and is headed for De Tour, Mich.

Rillington Place Murder Flat Gives Britons Horror Mystery Ranking With Jack the Ripper

By HAL COOPER

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard pressed grimly ahead today with an inch-by-inch search of the drab "murder flat in Rillington Place which already has yielded the bodies of four strangled women and one of them six months pregnant.

Police in all parts of the British Isles meanwhile were on the lookout for John Christie, dapper, 55-year-old pottery man who lived for 15 years in the seedy little tenement apartment in London's run-down Notting Hill district.

Recall Other Case

The gruesome discovery recalled testimony of a 1949 murder defendant who tried to link Christie with the strangling of his wife and child in the same house. Christie denied the accusations and the defendant, John Reginald Halliday, was executed.

George Dyer, Progressive Conservative leader, indicated, however, that his party is still opposed and will have more to say on second reading of the bill. The CCF and Social Credit parties also are opposed to extending the act, claiming it usurps powers that belong to Parliament and is not necessary in peacetime.

U. S. Planes and Artillery Turn Old Baldy Hill Into Smoking Mess of Blasts, Death

SEOUL (AP) — American planes and artillery turned Old Baldy into a smoking mess of blasts and death today after U. S. troops abandoned it to victorious Chinese.

All day long the western front hill received some intense fire as the Americans tried to root out the stubborn Reds who handed UN troops their worst beating since last summer driven off the Kumhwa ridges five months ago.

The U. S. 7th division pulled back its troops overnight, first dynamiting their trenches and bunkers.

The strategic fortress guarding the Imjin valley route to Seoul was held by Reds and death.

Squirm Under Guns

But even as the Chinese on Baldy squirmed under fire from guns, and bombers, ground force struck four Allied outposts about 25 miles to the northeast in the Mundung-Paamujong area.

An officer there said one attack reached the Allied trenches after heavy artillery fire. The Chinese stumped off after the counter-attack and the fighting was still hot three hours later.

There was no immediate report on the size of the attacks.

On Old Baldy the Chinese held tightly to the land they had swept from the crest of the hill. Counter-attacks Tuesday and Wednesday got nowhere.

U. S. big guns chopped up 300 Chinese trying to get to the peak. Both sides fought from bunker to bunker in the slugging match for the strategic height overlooking the Imjin valley gateway to Seoul.

The 8th army said 1,000 Reds lost 1,000 including 143 counted dead and 434 believed killed—in the first two days. U. S. casualties were not announced.

As dawn broke today U. S. planes began battering Old Baldy with 1,000-pound bombs. Artillery made the hill a mass of flames.

Nothing Could Live

AP photographer George Sweers, watching from a nearby hill, said: "It didn't look as if anything could live where we were."

But the Chinese were up there on the bare peak crouching in their wooden shelters probably deep inside bunkers and trenches that had stopped American and Colombian soldiers when the Red wave struck.

A Colombian officer, asked when the last Red counter-attack until they ran out of ammunition, said the Reds acted as if they had been doped. He said he found seven pills on some of the Chinese dead.

At dawn today the Americans were gone from the knob they held on the southeast quarter of Old Baldy.

They had dynamited their trenches and bunkers into rubble.

Then came the U. S. fighter-bombers — Thunderjets, Panthers jets and propeller-driven Corsairs, led another as Kathleen Maloney, a pretty, 19-year-old blonde with scarlet-painted finger and toe nails. She had been dead two to four months.

The other two victims—identities still unknown—were a brown-haired girl of about 25, an pregnant one, believed dead for about three months, and a fair-haired girl of about 45, dead three to four months.

All four had been strangled with a thin cord or wire.

Police are considering the possibility that the women were murdered for the small amounts of money they may have had in their purses.

The partly-clothed bodies of the younger women were crammed into a niche in the kitchen of Christie's ground floor lodging, concealed behind several thicknesses of wallpaper. A prospective tenant broke through the paper and discovered the corpses Tuesday.

Might Be Wife

Detectives unearthed the older woman's body from under the sitting room floor boards Wednesday. They said she might be Christie's wife, who left last year, leaving by neighbors around Christmas time.

Neighbors report Christie sold his meagre furnishings late in January. He was seen at the house as recently as last Friday.

They describe him as a "polite little man," always immaculately dressed and carrying a brief case, who never failed to tip his pearl grey fedora to a woman.

Scientist Guarded In Death

SAN FRANSISCO (AP) — The strange story of a trusted young atomic scientist, who died under close security guard lest he talk about secrets of the nation's A-bomb, continued today to baffle and fascinate, as disclosed Wednesday.

He was William C. Twitchell, 36, a native of Minnesota and project engineer in charge of the University of California radiation laboratory atomic material equipment.

His presence at the hospital was a secret, His treatment at the hospital was itself unusual as he was a civilian without army service.

A security guard was maintained for several days, it was learned, because Twitchell knew top secret A-bomb secrets. The guard was present in case the scientist should talk in his semi-conscious state.

Charged With Arson

KITCHENER (CP) — Laverne Quillen, 20, of Kitchener, was in custody in Goderich after a fire in a house on Victoria street South house here, was charged Wednesday with arson in connection with a fire in the house earlier this month, police said.

Already in custody on a public mischief charge, Quillen was to appear in Goderich in an earlier trial when a fellow roomer, Lucie Leclerc, was charged on charges of setting two of the fires.

The two appeared March 4 in the room occupied by Leclerc and a third followed a few days later. Quillen's custody waiting trial at that time.

Three Re-Elected

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP)— Walter P. Reuther and his three top aides in the United Auto Workers were re-elected without opposition Wednesday—a far cry from the union's early-founding early days.'

Back into office with President Reuther went secretary-treasurer Emil Mazey and vice-presidents Richard T. Gosser and John W. Livingston.

Reuther's nomination to his fifth term touched off a 30-minute demonstration marked by parades and dancing in the aisles.

BILL TO LEGALIZE SALE OF COLORED MARGARINE LOST

Only Four Members Support Legislation

TORONTO (CP)—The legislature Wednesday voted down a private member's bill to legalize the sale of colored margarine after Premier Frost and Opposition Leader Farquhar Oliver had opposed it.

Members did not have to show how they felt about the measure when it was defeated by a standing vote. Four members stood up to vote for the bill but it takes five to require a recorded vote.

The four members supporting the measure which would have repealed the section of the Agriculture Act which states the product must be sold in its colourless form: Albert Wren (Lib.-Lab.-Wentworth); Joseph Salsberg (Lab.-Prog.—Toronto St. Andrew).

In 1949 when two Labor Progressive (Communist) members, Mr. Salsberg and A. A. McLeod—both former MLAs—lost their deposit vote was taken. Several members spoke in favor of coloring margarine but voted against the motion because of its sponsors.

Other Developments

Opposition spokesman in the House expressed satisfaction at the government's bill forbidding the sale of edible oils in imperishable containers which resemble dairy products.

Mr. Ernest Jackson (CCF-Riverdale) said the bill would benefit Ontario municipalities more or less equally.

The legislature's legal bills committee suggested an amendment to the Highway Traffic Act which would require that judgments and settlements fund an estimated $60,000 a year.

Attorney-General Porter upheld the benchers of the Law Society of Upper Canada on their requirement of a two-year training under articles law students. Proponents of the University of Toronto's law school claim one year would be enough. Mr. Porter said he saw no reason to interfere in the controversy. He was replying to a question by Mr. Oliver.

Hosts Mere Uses

Mr. Wren, in introducing the margarine measure, urged a government commission to investigate from time to time more uses for dairy products.

Motion of Sorrow

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario legislature Wednesday passed a formal motion of sympathy and regret at the death of Queen Mary.

Addressed to Queen Elizabeth, the legislature's message to Her Majesty's most loyal and devoted subjects of the province of Ontario hereby express their regret to you" on the death of the Dowager Queen.

Premier Frost instructed that the address be engrossed, signed and forwarded to Queen Elizabeth.

Refugees Use Funeral Garb for Disguise

BERLIN (AP) — A group of East Germans who fled to freedom recently disguised as a funeral party, dressed in black and carrying huge wreaths, it was disclosed today.

The group, residents of a Russian zone village near Magdeburg, rode into West Berlin on an elevated train "spy ring" had confessed Greek authorities said him "from President Truman's...fund" for financing subversive activities in "the people's democracies."

Queen Elizabeth Thanks Parliment For Kind Tribute to Grandmother

LONDON (Reuters)—The Queen said today she knew all her people would share her grief at the death of her grandmother, Queen Mary.

The Queen spoke to the Houses of Parliament for messages of sympathy.

She told them her "beloved grandmother" was happy in the knowledge of the people's "warm regard and affection."

The text of her reply to Parliament, read in both houses by a court official, was:

"I thank you sincerely for your loyal and dutiful address expressing sympathy with me in the great loss which I and my family have sustained by the death of my beloved grandmother, Queen Mary.

"I know all my people share my grief for a great Queen who throughout a lifetime of devoted service was happy in the knowledge of their warm regard and affection.

"It is a consolation and comfort to me at this time of sorrow to have this further assurance of the devotion and sympathy of your people.

"(Signed) Elizabeth Regina."

Britain Prepares To Bury Beloved Dowager Queen

Express Says Death Cue For Duke to Return Home

LONDON (AP)—As Britain prepared to bury beloved Queen Mary, Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express said today the death of the regal matriarch is a cue for her eldest son, the Duke of Windsor, to return to England to live.

"Let the mourning end the exile," declared the leading over an Express editorial. The Duke is in England, having cut short a Florida vacation to rush to his mother's bedside when her fatal illness was first announced. The Duchess remained in Nassau. She has never been received at court since the Duke gave up the throne 16 years ago to marry her. Most observers consider Queen Mary—a stickler for conventions—at the bottom of the boycott. The editorial did not mention the Duchess, the former Wallis Warfield Simpson of Baltimore.

Moving Tribute

In a moving tribute to the Queen grandmother, who died Tuesday night at 85, Prime Minister Churchill declared she was loved and revered far and wide, as perhaps nobody has been since Queen Victoria.

"Queen Mary will long live mellow and gracious in all our memories and in the annals of a tumultuous time," Churchill told a year-old government chief said in a broadcast Wednesday night to the Commonwealth. The address, heard also in the United States, formed the last part of the Queen Victoria's reign."

Messages of condolence flowed from the royal court from throughout the world as preparations for Queen Mary's funeral Friday and the June 2 Coronation of her granddaughter, Queen Elizabeth went forward.

Buried at Windsor

The old Queen will be buried at St. George's private service in beautiful St. George's Chapel at Windsor Castle, the final resting place of English Kings and Queens since Tudor times. Her body will lie in state in the south aisle of the chapel beside that of her husband, King George V.

Before the service the body will lie in state in Westminster Parliament Hall adjoining the Houses of Parliament. It will be placed on the same purple catafalque that only 13 months ago held the coffin of her son, King George VI.

Queen Mary will be the first royal consort of sovereign to lie in state at the hall. For hundreds of years, the aged building—famous for its high-roofed, arched, hammer-beam oak roof—has been reserved for queens bound to reigning monarchs only.

TORONTO (CP) — J. M. Hartwick, president of Dominion Ice Cream Manufacturers, today said ice cream contains no edible oil or vegetable oil in the manufacture of ice cream.

He said enactment of bill 142 which, legislature is considering, is no way affect ice cream manufacturing in Ontario.

CONFESSES SPYING

LONDON (AP)—Tirana radio said today leader of an Albanian "spy ring" had confessed Greek authorities said him "from President Truman's...fund" for financing subversive activities in "the people's democracies."

Keeping All Eyes on Ball

CLEVELAND (AP) — As usual, there will be no shorts worn on Cleveland's municipal golf courses this summer, recreation commissioner John Nagy has decreed.

"It's unthinkable," he observed Wednesday in response to pressure from men and women who want their golfing cooler.

Golf, he said, "is a gentleman's game. We can't have a lot of potbellied, knobby-kneed, hairy-legged men running around in shorts. As for women, the men would spend more time looking at a pair of attractive legs than at their scores."

Burma Asks UN To Brand Chiang As An Aggressor

RANGOON (AP) — Burma in a surprise move Wednesday asked the United Nations to brand Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist China as an aggressor. Burma charged Chiang is maintaining guerrilla troops in the northeast wilds of Burma as the Red China frontier.

The report of the Nationalist Chinese in Burma is composed of soldiers driven out of adjoining Yunnan province in the final seizure of the China mainland more than three years ago.

In Bangkok today, Thailand Premier Pibulsongram said his government would let Chinese Nationalist troops in Burma withdraw to Formosa through Thailand on two conditions:

1. If the action is agreeable to British, American and Chinese Nationalist governments;

2. The Nationalist guerrillas be disarmed in Burma before entering Thailand.

Zellers Ltd. Buys Present Site On Front Street

Sale of the Front street property occupied by Zellers store to Zellers Ltd., was announced today by Frank Demenico, executor for the estate of the late Samuel Domenico, last owner of the property. The property was owned by the Domenico estate and the estate of the late "Tony" Morrell.

The amount involved in the sale of the property was not disclosed. The property which extends from Front Street to the river bank south to the old Cummins estate had been owned by the Domenico and Morrell families for the past 26 years.

Mr. A. H. Walsh, local manager of Zellers Ltd., store, said there was no immediate plan by his firm for a building or renovation program.

Mr. Walsh was transferred this week from the Peterborough store to Belleville. He succeeds W. H. Levis who also has been transferred to St. John, N. B.

Boy Is Rescued From Cold Waters Of Trent River

Campbellford — Billie Berthaud, 9, was rescued from the cold waters of the aqueduct, which channels Trout Creek into the Trent River on Sunday afternoon.

Billie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Bertrand, Bridge Street, W., was playing on the cement wall of the aqueduct near its entrance to the river, when he tripped on a stick he was carrying and rolled off into the water. Doug. Seymour, who was nearby, handed the drowning boy the end of a willow branch to hang onto.

Hearing the boy's cries for help, Alex Seymour, Don Guerin and Raymond Reid, all of whom live nearby, rushed to the scene. Holding the elder Seymour by the feet, while he bent over the high wall, they were able to pull the boy from the fast moving water.

He was none the worse for his experience after being taken home and given dry clothes.

Rapidly Increasing Skunk Population Looking for Food

Two, and even little cute, Moon captured the babies but the wise mother slipped out of his trap.

Since then the families of Petunia have caused considerable trouble, forcing residents to close part of her home, while the instigator tried to exterminate them.

The skunks seem harmless enough, but the people, the police included, seldom venture close enough to appreciate their potency.

The other night, Jack Orrill, a downtown resident, noticed two full grown skunks right in front of his unconcerned of his presence. He watched them parade along in the illuminated path of a downtown window heading toward the river. A riverside merchant was aware of them but a familiar odor hanging about his premises soon told the dedicated fact had unwelcome guests during the night.

Favor Chicken

Skunks favor chicken and it is thought that a decline in chicken fanciers in town has created the present situation. Skunks will range far and wide in search of something to eat.

Yesterday animal lovers felt sorry for a starving skunk that came to an untimely end with its head caught in a corn syrup can. The skunk, as it seems, got its head stuck in an open can in a pile of rubbish by the river. In trouble and needing help the helpless hunter headed for home on the other side of the Trenton-Glen Miller highway. He was hit by a car and killed as he wandered blindly across the pavement.

The consolation the skunk never saw what hit it, because the car still stuck to its neck even in death.

Farrars Extend Lead

In the last week of competition the Farrars extended their lead six other two points to take a stronger hold on the top position in the Trenton Businessmen's Bowling League. Nemtins and Weaver's are tied for second position, the former in second place and the latter in third spot.

As usual H. Ormshaw figured among the winners with the highest average for the week 240. Standings to date: Farrars 147; 42; Nemtins 142-47; Weavers 140-40; Trent Cleaners 129-80; Peach Kings 127-42; NuWay Cleaners 103-87; Postmarks 101-88; Vanness Eggs 88 83-107; Chorley's Lunch 82-107; Bond Clothes 81-108; Riverside Motors 79-110; Weese Rockets 77-122; Belairs 66-132; Plymouths 56-133; Wilson Dairy 52-137; Suburbians 46-143.

Checker Taxi Marks Two Years Of Safe Operation

They say the New York "cabbies" are "hackers" as blase Gothamites call them, are veritable hives of information. A check on the Broadway belt could give his fares anything from Sal Maglie's pitching record to what hairdresser suits the tresses of the star of "South Pacific."

The "Big Town's" taxi drivers have envious records, too. They can weave in and out of traffic with all the aplomb of a greased rattler. And their accident toll is next to nothing.

On a similar basis the Checker Radio Taxi of this city, can hold its collective head high. Its proud boast is that on March 21 this year its fleet completed two full years of safe operation. In that time it has had no insurance claims for accidents.

Two years ago the first radio equipped modern cars have handpicked drivers known for their courtesy, and knowledge of driving. They, too, join proprietor Horace G. Wright in proudly celebrating two years of safe operation.

"True," Mr. Wright said today, "we have had a dented fender or two but through no fault of our own. Careful consideration of the public safety has been more careful operation of cars has resulted in a record of which we are proud."

MISS MARY ANN COWAIN
Massey, Ont.

Former teacher and principal at Canadian public school, Miss Mary Ann Cowain, of Massey, Ont., died Monday at St. Joseph's Hospital at Blind River, following a brief illness.

Born at Algoma, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cowain, Miss Cowain was well known in the Canadian area, where she taught school for 30 years. She commenced her teaching career at Moneymore. She then came to Canniffton, where she taught the junior room for five years. She then became principal, a position she held for 25 years. After leaving Canniffton she taught at Flinton before going to Massey four years ago.

She was a member of the United Church.

She is survived by one brother, Hudson, of British Columbia.

MRS. SARAH ANN THOMPSON (Tweed)

Mrs. Sarah Ann Thompson died on Tuesday at her home in Tweed. She was in her 78th. year.

Mrs. Thompson died on Tuesday at her home. She was in her 78th. year.

Born at Thomasburg, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Latchford, she deceased had been a resident of the locality all her life. Mrs. Thompson had been ill for some time.

Her husband died seven years ago. She is survived by three sons: Earle, Dundas; Burton, of Hamilton; Harry with the RCAF in Winnipeg, and two daughters: Laura at home, and Anna at home. A son, Elmer, predeceased her nine years ago. Two brothers also survive: John Latchford, in Picton, and Robert Latchford, at Marmora.

Mrs. Thompson was a life-long member of Sandford Guild and the Woman's Auxiliary of St. James' Anglican Church. She was also a life member of the Women's Missionary Society of the United Church at Lodgeroom.

Interment was in St. James' cemetery.

Child Gives Parents Anxious Moments When Fire Destroys Dairy Barn, Wagons, Truck

Paul Smith, 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Smith, Grier Street, gave his parents and firemen a few anxious moments Wednesday when he could not be found as his grandfather's city dairy barn went up in smoky, causing a loss estimated at about $4,000.

When lad could not be located it was thought he might be in the burning barn but minutes later he was found hiding under his bed, where he had crawled after becoming frightened of the fire.

Firemen were unable to determine the cause of the blaze, which burned the small barn owned by Butler's Dairy on Grier St. Two delivery horses were led from the burning structure, but two wagons and a new truck went up in flames. Also lost was a large quantity of milk bottles and some baled hay.

Dairy workers in the nearby dairy were unaware of the fire at first. A neighbor woman rushed in saying the barn was ablaze. There was just time to get the two horses and the whole building was aflame.

Firemen were able to save a second barn situated only a few feet away but the sheeting of the structure was badly charred.

The fire was discovered shortly after the noon hour and with the arrival of the first fire truck a second call by Fire Chief Vance brought additional equipment to fight the flames. Only the fact that the slight wind was in the opposite direction saved the second barn and the dairy proper from damage.

Worker Killed, Six Injured In Tank Blast

TORONTO (CP) — One man was killed and six injured today when an ammonia tank exploded near a Canadian Industries Ltd. plant in eastern Toronto.

The injured men were taken to hospital. Some were in serious condition.

Early reports were conflicting and fragmentary. First word was that six men were hurt, a second cut the number to four and a third raised it to one dead and six hurt.

Window panes were broken in houses in the area, on Carlaw St. near Keating.

The tank was in an oppn field when it exploded.

Phone Directory For '53 in Mails

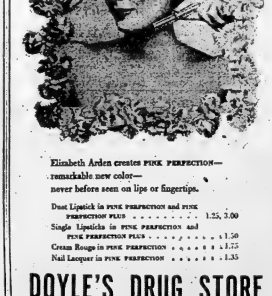
It is the 1953 Belleville directory, bound in a buff cover to distinguish it from last year's green-covered edition. The first copies were delivered through the mail to subscribers today.

Along with the new directory, each subscriber is receiving an extra bonus this year. That is a blue-covered "Telephone Numbers" book which enables local subscribers to compile a handy list of both the local and long distance numbers called most frequently.

Mr. G. Proctor, Bell Telephone manager here, said today that use of the booklets is expected to increase the proportion of long distance calls placed by number and to reduce the number of non-essential calls to information.

7,000 Changed Listings



Mr. Proctor pointed out that the new directory contains more than 7,000 new and changed listings. He suggests, therefore, that subscribers check any personal lists of telephone numbers they may have compiled before entering them in the new telephone numbers booklet.

Besides Belleville, the directory contains listings for subscribers in Trenton, Madoc, Napanee, Tweed, Marmora, Stirling, Wallington and surrounding territory.

An indication of the growth of this area is seen in the fact that it was necessary to print 22,030 copies of the directory to supply subscribers this year, compared with 20,365 in 1952. For Belleville alone, the number was 450 greater than a year ago.

Oshawa Airport May Soon Become Base for Flights

OSHAWA (CP)—Oshawa airport may soon be a base for international flights.

Airport officials Wednesday quoted federal authorities as saying that as soon as the city provides accommodation at the airport for a customs man, Oshawa will be made a customs port of entry.

George Slocum, airport manager, described the airport weather record as near-perfect. He said that Oshawa often is open for flying when fog has grounded flights at Toronto's Malton airport, 35 miles west of here.

At Ottawa, a customs department official confirmed that Oshawa will be made a customs port of entry when it provides office accommodation at the airport for a customs official. The airport—relatively small—would probably serve tourists and freight shipments, rather than scheduled passenger operations.

Temporary Truce Flag Raised In British Columbia Legislature

VICTORIA (CP)—Election banners are expected to be unfurled following a temporary flag of truce raised today over the British Columbia legislature.

The minority Social Credit government and the opposition which defeated it on the floor of the House Tuesday night will troop back into the legislature to vote money needed to carry on government and to pass bills which are free of controversy.

The House is expected to be busy with this legislation until Friday night. After that Lieutenant-Governor Clarence Wallace must announce his decision on the course which appear open to him.

The Other Choice

The other choice, and the one political observers feel is most likely, is for the lieutenant-governor to grant Premier Bennett's wish that the legislature be dissolved and a new provincial election called.

Premier Bennett announced Wednesday night following conferences with the opposition leaders that the House will sit until certain bills have been passed and members have voted six months' supply.

Likely date for an election would be early in June. Passing of supply for six months would mean another legislature session in the fall following an election.

The House didn't meet Wednesday, the day following Queen Mary's death, out of respect to the Royal Family. Of today's session, Mr. Bennett said: "All parties feel they have a responsibility to this province and this is an endeavor to carry out that responsibility."

The lieutenant-governor's problem stems from the fact that Social Credit and the CCF are so evenly matched numerically in the House.

The standing is: Social Credit 19, CCF 18, Liberals 6, Progressive Conservative 2, Labor 1, vacant 2. Total 48.

The Vancouver Daily Province quoted "authoritative sources" as saying the lieutenant-governor would refuse Mr. Winch's bid to become B. C.'s first CCF premier. From all indication party leaders are getting ready for an election. All appeared confident.

Social Credit was defeated 28 to 17 in a vote on a bill which would have changed the system for financing education costs.

Gang Up on Government

The CCF, Liberal and Progressive Conservative members combined with Labor member T. Uphill and one Social Credit rebel to defeat the government which came into power following a June 12 election which saw the defeat of a Liberal administration.

On previous occasions since the session opened Feb. 3 the balance-of-power Liberals have voted with the government, saying British Columbians didn't want to shell out $750,000 for another election. This support was greeted by jibes from the Social Credit benches.

Defeat of the government has shelved, temporarily at least, plans to tax profits of logging and mining companies, reduce taxes on restaurant meals and car licences and reform provincial liquor laws. Scores of other measures were also held back.

At the time of the defeat the legislature hadn't voted a cent to carry on government for the year which starts April 1 and had passed but one of 83 bills. It granted $100,000 in flood relief to Europe.

Pleads Guilty To Six Charges Of Entry, Theft

A series of six offences involving breaking and entry with theft or attempted theft which occurred in the city and district in recent months was cleaned up in county magistrate's court today when James Kennedy 34, of this city, pleaded guilty to the charges and was remanded for sentence.

Kennedy was arrested two weeks ago in Toronto on a warrant issued by Inspector Clair Hayes of the Belleville Police Department and when apprehended was in possession of articles stolen in Toronto. He was charged by Toronto police with shop breaking and on conviction was given three years in the penitentiary.

After sentence in Toronto he was returned to Belleville yesterday by Inspector Hayes and Detective Harold Reid to face charges here. Kennedy had been released from penitentiary on Nov. 22, 1952, after serving a three-year term.

In court today before Magistrate T. Y. Wills, Kennedy pleaded guilty to entering Saragar's Tire Shop and stealing a filing cabinet and money; entering Belle Cleaners and theft of a $600 cash register; breaking and entering with intent at Bill Deline's Tire Shop; breaking, entering and theft at the A. C. Broad residence on Grier Street; theft of a camera from the car of Fire Chief Gerald Vance; and breaking and entering with intent at Vivian's Garage at Shannonville.

Many of the articles stolen were recovered by police. The cash register was found abandoned in the weeds near the C.N.R. roundhouse, while the camera was recovered in Toronto.

Inspector Hayes was able to connect Kennedy with the break-in and issued a warrant for his arrest, tipping Toronto police of as to where he might be located.

DEFEAT IS A TRIUMPH

The defeat of a government in Parliament, or in a Legislative Assembly, is usually a disastrous affair, but the defeat which the Social Credit government in British Columbia met this week was something of a triumph for Premier W. A. C. Bennett.

Ever since the legislature opened in the coast province early in February the whole strategy of the Social Crediters has been to put themselves in a position to be defeated—the sooner in the better. The divided opposition groups which are in the majority in the assembly were quite as determined not to upset the government.

This paradoxical situation arose from the provincial election last summer which gave the Social Crediters a bare majority of one in the legislature over the C.C.F., with the Liberals and Conservatives holding the small balance of power. It was generally conceded that a new election would be forced and that another vote would see the Social Crediters given a comfortable working majority.

While the remnant groups of the old line parties were bound on principle to avoid giving any support to the socialists in opposing the government, they were finally caught this week in Premier Bennett's trap. A week earlier the six-man Liberal group voted to a man in favor of the Social Credit budget in the face of taunts from Mr. Bennett that they were "hypocrites". This time, however, on the issue involved, education grants the Social Crediters managed to align the three opposition groups against them.

The premier had announced that he would regard defeat of the education bill as a vote of non-confidence. When it was defeated he went immediately to the lieutenant-governor and asked for dissolution. But close behind him was C.C.F. Leader Harold Winch requesting the right to form a government. And in the light of the fact that he had the assurance of support from the lone Independent in the assembly, he had a pretty good case.

The situation involves an interesting constitutional problem in the lap of Lieutenant-Governor Wallace. He would be wholly justified in asking the C.C.F. leader to go ahead. On the other hand he is well aware that a socialist government would almost certainly meet defeat on the first vote it called. The likelihood is that he will grant dissolution and permit Mr. Bennett government to go to the people for a new mandate.

While the lieutenant-governor is making up his mind the government carries on, but reports are that all groups are in readiness for an immediate election. On the appeal that the Social Credit party is the only safe alternative to socialism Premier Bennett is confident that he can win handily. And political observers think the chief contest in this view. The premier and his experienced supporters in the legislature are former Conservatives. When the voters of British Columbia went to the polls last summer they were not voting on party lines. They went to defeat an unhappy coalition of Liberals and Conservatives and voted for new men, rather than a new party.

THE DREADFUL TEMPEST

The disastrous storms and floods in Britain and the Low Countries a few years ago have prompted the London Times to call the "dreadful tempest" in 1703—quite the worst disaster in British history.

"No natural disaster before or since," says the Times, "had given such a mortal blow at Britain." It began in the darkness of a late November night with a new moon and a prodigious tide. The tide was "a mercy for which the world will ever be grateful," for it thankfully saved many vessels which would otherwise have been driven on sandbanks and destroyed.

As it passed it left seven men-of-war, and several hundred craft of the merchant service were lost. The great ships, being well provided with anchors and cables, "rid it out, though in great extremity, expecting death every minute."

This was a tempest, says the Times, and those ashore knew it. "Evelyn lamented that Wotton was 'wood Town no longer' His trees lay all one whole continents fallen in battle. Two thousand fell on his land and four thousand oaks in the New Forest Cranbourne Chase and the Forest of Dean were fellow sufferers. Elms, including some said to have been planted by Wolsey in St. James' Park, were flattened all over the country."

Perhaps the most remarkable escape of its took with the man who had devised it and its crew. The Registrar of Eton, who was sleeping in a garret near Ludgate Hill, knew nothing of the storm until he found himself afloat in his bed in the Thames. Church steeples went down like ninepins. King's College Chapel lost some of its pinnacles. Cattle some twenty miles from the sea could not eat the grass that had got too strongly salted.

So great was the disaster, says the Times, that "Parliament voted—a rare thing at that period—that the families of the drowned seamen should be relieved."

The spirit of truth and the spirit of freedom — they are the pillars of society.—Henrik Ibsen

HIS WAY

He never let his care disturb his joy when it was time to play.
He never let the morning sun behind the clouds of yesterday.
He never let the bad in men blind him to neighbors fine and good.
He did his share of grieving but he laughed as often as he could.
Because one man had played him false he didn't say all men are base.
He frowned on what he thought was wrong yet met the good with smiling face.
He didn't talk about the pain he'd had when he was feeling sick.
Nor make of life a tragedy because he had some woes to tell its type.
He lived his life from day to day; met what he found without a whine.
Was grieved when grief was his to bear was happy when his skies were fine.
He fought when there were wrongs to right and toiled when there was work to do, made the most of what was good, and kept his troubles

At a meeting of the city council the matter of paving Front Street was left in abeyance for two weeks in order to receive a petition from the property owners as to the kind of pavement they desire. A recommendation from the market committee that the city manage the market instead of leasing it was adopted. Mayor Wills informed the council that the plan showing house numbers is now complete and information with regards to the number by citizens may be obtained from the city clerk. THE PACKSAK

By GREGORY CLARK

When industry improves a product, the question arises: is it improved from the point of view of the consumer? Or from the point of view of the manufacturer? The typewriter on which I am writing these words is an improved model over its predecessor, a machine of the same make. True, the new model has several new gadgets on it. But the type, the small metal faces of the letters which are attached to the bars that fling the letters up against the paper, falls off. Right in the middle of the job, the r or the e simply breaks loose and falls off.

Then the second time, I took the machine down to the agency to have it repaired.

"My old one," I informed them, "never did anything like this. I carried it through the war, abused it cruelly, beat out millions of words on it. Yet it never got its type."

"Ah, well," exclaimed the repair man. "This is the improved model. In addition to the improvements you can see, such as a far more efficient return mechanism, and new and prettier and numerous other important devices, the manufacturers discovered an improved way of manufacturing these type bars. Formerly, the type and the arm to which each letter was attached, were made by hand, a laborious process. This new system allows them to be soldered to the type arm. It is a much easier method of manufacture . . ."

"Did the price go down?" I enquired.

The price, of course, had gone up.

In our competitive economic system, it stands to reason that the first consideration of the makers of everything, from soup to typewriters, is the improvement of their product in order to compete with their rivals in business. But almost equally as very next consideration is the improvement of the means of production in favor of the manufacturer, making it simpler, easier and cheaper for him. Now and again, this second consideration moves up into first position. I have bought articles of merchandise, all the way from safety blades to motor cars, that obviously were the result of "improvements" in the interests of the manufacturer.

The fact is, the buying public is the inexhaustible guinea pig of industry. Every day, in everything we buy and use, we are the objects of intense scrutiny by engineers, chemists, business men, who keep tab on how much improvement we can take, and way or the other.

Letter to the Editor

Wants Positive Action On Dairy Problems

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

As a dairy farmer, I greatly appreciate the letter in another column under the heading, "Dairy Industry Needs Support," and written by C.E.F. of Toronto, in a few interesting paragraphs his city friends not only what is played knowledge that the native dairy industry was far from economically sound; he also pointed out that the time was ripe for positive action by our political authorities to come up with remedial measures.

I feel that Canada's Minister of Agriculture, the Honourable J. Gardiner, is creating a seriously wrong impression when the nation's press carries statements in which he states that farmers had the highest income last year in our nation's history and this with the least necessary work.

What would a board of directors of any company in this city think of its financial statement if the secretary-manager called the gross receipts the net income?

I ask this absurd question to submit to your consideration that agriculture's gross annual income bears no more relation to its net returns than that the normal inflation of gross receipts and net income in any other business enterprise.

All readers will accept as fact that Canada has practically lost the great cheese export industry with the U.K., and our bacon markets with the U.K., faces an embargo on certain milk products in the U.S.A.; that Canadians buy and eat a spread other than butter, and that most nutritious food for humans in the world is made by churning the cream in the milk-butter the by-product necessary for children's brain growth.

Being present at any central market when cattle are being offered for sale will, I think, convince anyone that Hastings County's fine dairy herds are not the equals of what they were before these above markets were lost. One even wonders if the Holstein breed remains as a common and universal breed.

Let us study, let us make a conclusion—but why conclude? It isn't it one world today? Hasn't let propulsion clinched that organization isolation would be dangerous for us, if we become a community of the best feed people in the world? At any rate, I take that view and agree with the Honorable Charles H. L. Kennedy in his remarks: "It will never agree with the continued production of food as long as hungry men are given either a lack of food as long as hungry men are given either."

The Ontario Federation of Agriculture in discussion at its annual meeting last January found its delegates divided into two irreconcilable groups. One group believed that the only course for our agriculture to follow is to produce only for the known market. With them in this group was Agriculture Minister Hoke. He said, "You can't produce more than you can sell here or elsewhere, it would ruin us all."

Another group took the idealistic view that we are now our own best market. Leader of this group, I believe that Canadian statesman, the late George Bernard Shaw's words: "After contemplating the world and human nature for eighty years I have come to the conclusion that I am out of step with the present darkness and distress rather than with the light which I have been taken by Jesus had He undertaken the way of a modern practical politician."

Professor Burton S. Keirstead of McGill has a constructive solution of this nature at the above convention—and I made this suggestion: He said, "Great Britain, even though weakened by a decade of shipping losses, agrees to the extent of $100 million annually to purchase Canadian products and supplies."

Mr. Editor, I should like to have your views at a later date on our position as it exists in our nation's economy—not our borders

Harold F. Gurty, President of the Hastings County Federation of Agriculture.

Not Even A Horse

(Blair Fraser in Maclean's)

This anecdote is a bit out of season now, but I only heard it in the winter.

Paul Martin, Minister of Health and Welfare, went holidaying in the West Indies during the Christmas recess. He intended to return to Ottawa after New Year's, but had such a good time that he remained for only a little longer. He cabled his deputy minister, George Davidson, to ask if anything important was coming up. On Friday, January 2, he got

Says the Archbishop

(Ottawa Journal)

So three rousing cheers for the archbishop of Canterbury, who takes time off from Coronation arrangements to strike a stout blow against the ugly-looking (and sounding) words that have a tendency to creep into the English language.

The Archbishop's particular hate is for "ugly words ending in 'ization'" — he cites as horrible examples "hospitalization", against which The Journal has inveighed frequently for many months, and "derailization" which says His Grace, is supposed to mean the elimination of rats. And his Coronation ritual he is substituting "enthroning" for th: older, and less euphonious, "inthronization."

A close relative of these monstrosities is the word "finalized"—and only a step away is the dreadful "finalization"—which has been used frequently in business letters. Names of organizations, or abbreviations of such, particularly washerwomen, day-laborers and those whose occupation exposes them to cold and damp."

Now I don't purpose to waste my time arguing with any one who has always exposed to cold and damp causes or predisposes to any kind of joint disease. But, further say that every kind of joint disability that Ben Told or Mrs. Sumner or Cliff Johnson Kiddem might call the rheumatis is as widely or more widely prevalent among those who have never been exposed to cold and damp.

Why?

The coffins of the Tsars," says The Times, "are a fitting symbol for the people to see that they had died peacefully in their beds with the victims of foul play."

This is interesting. It will be agreed that there is a much, indeed more, reason to continue the Coronation with new dictatorships as under the old.

IODIN DEFICIENCY WITHOUT GOITRE

There's no accounting for the funny notions many physicians cherish today—notions conceived by doctors great and near-great in the days of Hippocrates, e.g. For example, the notion that foods from which acids and may be derived cause "gout"—whatever that may have been in the golden days when the eminent physicians just pronounced diagnosis and nobody ventured to check it by chemical test or other method of precision — because no such methods had been developed.

On a par with the uric acid nonsense—which a few obstinate old timers still gain off on their credulous customers — was the funny notion, so beautifully expressed or implied by the great Dr. Osler when he wrote in his famous Practice that chronic rheumatism, whatever that may be, is "most common among the poor, particularly washerwomen, day-laborers and those whose occupation exposes them to cold and damp."

Now I don't purpose to waste my time arguing with any one who has always exposed to cold and damp causes or predisposes to any kind of joint disability. But, further say that every kind of joint disability that Ben Told or Mrs. Sumner or Cliff Johnson Kiddem might call the rheumatis is as widely or more widely prevalent among those who have never been exposed to cold and damp."

GOD AND THE WASTE-PAPER BASKET

A visitor once found Phillips Brooks, famous Boston preacher and Bishop, sitting at his desk in his study and nervously pounding a fist into the palm of his other hand. When the visitor inquired the reason for this excitement, Brooks replied, "I get my ways in a hurry, and God never hurries."

Friends recently returned from Europe told me that they had seen a fine old castle, formerly a palace, built centuries before the days of our own continents came to the surface millions of years ago, submerged, came up again, and then experienced erosion for millions of years more, to realize that God hurry.

last exposed to cold and dampness as it is almost people who are constantly exposed. Called arthritis nowadays, but that is no curiosity notwithstanding. Eh? What's that? It you really want to get your opinions of the nature of the rheumatis you may slip me two shillings and a stamped self addressed envelope for the booklet The Ills Called Rheumatism, Remember, you don't have to believe anything I say about it if you think you know more than an ordinary doctor does.

Growing youngsters, especially girls in their early 'teens, who mope, feel too tired to work, play or study, appear pensive or moody at a time of life when they should be cheerful and active.... Many mature adults have lost pep or ambition, a tendency to drop off in a doze at any time or in any place, although they sleep long hours every night, put on weight, have slacker flesh, have a dry, sallow skin, lustreless, dry, falling, prematurely grayed hair, In some instances even a melancholic outlook which, to their friends, is not different from their former cheerful disposition....

If you want about goitre, you will notice, because, as already mentioned in previous piece), most persons who suffer from iodin deficiency present no sign of goitre.

Slowly, being we grow slowly. We look at our children and wonder how and when they will ever grow up and have some sense. Slowly, day, perhaps in mid-adolescence, they make some penetrating observation, some good advice, or face a tough situation and handle it successfully, and we know that these youngsters have been growing—growing slowly, but growing.

We all should like to hand the world a fine article. Normally I always have one ready for Him, but I better grow than to be tragically presumptious. God listens to my prayer. He has wastepaper baskets ready for our timid rebellions. God is never in a hurry.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE LISTENER

One of the most famous of the world's sculptured pieces is that one by Rodin—the Parisian called "The Thinker". As we look upon it it is a thing of power and reproduction, we are stimulated to think. Thinking is the responsible for the progress and advancement in knowledge. We have had ever the centuries. If people had not thought things out we would have stagnated long ago.

Next to "The Thinker," how I would place "The Listener." He could easily be the twin brother of "The Thinker." What a mass of useful knowledge we learn from merely listening! In a house or people always have my eyes upon the listener, not the talker. His very interest is evidence of his deep thinking. The interesting person in a group or trains in the club car is the one who listens, saying nothing, here your eyes from him.

I was on my way to Washington once and listened to the talk of many men. A man from Texas engaged in brief talk the man next to him, but he apparently learned nothing, so asked for his card, which was given to him. When he had left the car the man by him got to me about the card and asked if I knew whom he was. "Certainly," replied he is Sam Rayburn, Speaker of the House."

While covering one of the national political conventions, I was sitting one night all to my many thrilling discussions by famous men. I recall a great allegorical evening in Chicago, where I was addressed by a noted woman writer, and two or three others, engaged in talk into the small hours of the morning. It was brilliant talk, but what impressed me most was a man who leaned his chair against the wall and just listened. He was William Allen White!

The listener is always turning over a heap of knowledge. I talk near him goes on. He is blanting many a discovered even in that soil of silence. His thoughts are on an intellectual harvest later on. The listener I rns more than the talker or reader. He also makes a valuable

Quebec Farmers Busy Turning Sap Into Syrup

By KEN STEWART
Canadian Press Staff Writer

QUEBEC (CP)—Spring on Quebec farms is the time for thousands of farmers throughout the province to busy themselves turning the sap from 20,000,000 maple trees into sugar and syrup for sale at Easter.

Quebec, the country's top maple sugar and syrup producer, has built up a tremendous business from its many maple groves, scattered through every county except Abitibi and Saguenay—from the Ottawa valley to Gaspe.

Last year their yield was more than 2,750,000 gallons, valued at more than $10,000,000.

This year, however, experts are not sure that the crop will be as good. They say the winter's scanty snowfall and poor tapping weather are signs the crop may be poor. Warmer days and colder nights are needed to bring about a good run of sap.

Some trees in the western part of Quebec have already started producing—but in small amounts—and officials are hoping that a late snowfall, such as the one in April 1947, might occur and provide ideal tapping conditions.

The 1947 crop yielded 3,157,000 gallons of syrup valued at more than $11,000,000.

With spring and the maple season comes something which has been a tradition for almost 300 years—sugaring parties — when whole families go into the woods to the sugar camps to stuff themselves with sweet, sticky sugar and taffy.

But unlike past years, sugar parties now are generally hardly harder on the pocketbook. Farmers charge from $2 to $3.50 a head to city-dwellers who want to go to a party.

Besides the 20,000,000 producing maple trees there are another 30,000,000 trees which have remained untapped in the province.

Tapping of all 40,000,000 trees might have a strong effect on the local market, knocking prices down to almost rock-bottom, but more maple products could probably be exported.

Biggest sap-producing area is in Beauce county, on the St. Lawrence river south shore, where more than 2,500,000 trees are tapped each year.

House Approves Formal Expression Of Deep Sorrow

OTTAWA (CP)—A solemn House of Commons Wednesday approved a formal expression of "deep and heartfelt sorrow" to Queen Elizabeth in the loss of her grandmother Dowager Queen Mary.

The leaders of the four political parties in the House paid oral tribute to the beloved Queen and then stood in silence for a moment with other members.

The "humble address" was passed with hushed unanimity and then sent to the Senate so it could become a joint message of condolence.

The Senate approved a similar message shortly after and stood a minute in silence.

At an earlier morning meeting, Cabinet discussed the death of Queen Mary and is expected to declare a month-long period of mourning.

Mr. St. Laurent told members the loss of Queen Mary was "a personal loss to all Canadians and to all the Commonwealth . . she won all our hearts. Her great charity and loyalty will never be forgotten."

George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, said Queen Mary "was very dear to the Royal Family and to all of us."

M. J. Coldwell, CCF leader, said the death cuts the last royal tie with the Victorian era. The Queen had been revered as "a great lady, a wife, mother and Queen."

Solon Low, Social Credit leader, recalled meeting Queen Mary briefly in 1948 and being impressed "w her warm humanity, the keenness of mind and regal bearing of a woman, then 80 years old.

U.S. in Urgent Need of Uranium Committee Told

OTTAWA (CP) — The United States is in urgent need of more Canadian uranium for atomic bomb production, the Commons atomic energy committee was told Wednesday.

W. J. Bennett, head of the publicly-owned Eldorado Mining and Refining Company, told the committee bluntly that the "prime objective" of Canadian uranium development is to feed more of the fissionable material into American atomic bomb production and added:

"It is in the national interest that every possible effort should be made to speed up and increase the deliveries of uranium.

Mr. Bennett told the difficulties of mining uranium ore in the subzero temperatures of Canada's north but announced that new production opening next month in the northern tip of Saskatchewan will more than double current ore output and that eventually developments of other nearby claims may triple the mining rate.

Port Radium mills about 180 tons of ore a day, Ace Mine in the Beaverlodge lake development will open production in April with about 500 tons a day. The ensuing area is expected to be in full production by next July, and Mr. Bennett said that while milling will start at the rate of 500 tons a day, "the mining plant is designed to handle an ultimate capacity of 2,000 tons a day."

"Production of uranium from the Ace Mine will be approximately 40 per cent greater than the present rate of production at Port Radium," said Mr. Bennett.

In addition, Eldorado this year will make a thorough exploration by land and air of a new block of claims staked out in Saskatchewan's Lake Foster area about 150 miles south of the Beaverlodge developments.

The Belgian Congo still was the world's leading source of radium and uranium. Now there was "every indication," said Mr. Bennett, that production "elsewhere" would equal and perhaps surpass that of the Congo.

PHONY EXPERT

Better Than the Jeep?

The military jeep achieved the reputation of travelling over just about any terrain, but here is what is supposed to be an improvement on the jeep. Developed by the U.S. navy, it's called a roll igon, and is said to be able to travel over sandy beaches, ice and snow, where a jeep would flounder. The secret of its mobility is the size of its pneumatic tires — four feet in width and two feet high. — Central Press Canadian.

BILL TO LEGALIZE

He said legislation affecting dairy products "does not seem to relate to the needs of the dairy industry or the oleomargarine interests, but rather as to how it (the legislation) will affect the urban and rural vote."

Mr. Frost said if the dairy industry were to slump the 500,000 persons supported by the industry would no longer be able to buy the products of the town and city and the standard of living in the province would decline.

Mr. Oliver, a farmer until a year ago, said the farmer buys all he has in protected markets and sells most of his produce in open markets.

He said the edible oils bill, which received second reading, would give "reasonable" protection to the dairy industry and would give the edible oils industries "a chance to get on an equal footing and compete with dairy products."

The bill permits the sale of peanut butter, mayonnaise and similar products but bans the sale of any product resembling a dairy product which contains any fat or oil other than that of milk.

W. J. Grummett, CCF house leader who represents Cochrane South, said he supported the measure "wholeheartedly."

The municipal grants bill, given second reading Wednesday, would provide unconditional grants to all Ontario municipalities starting at $1.50 per capita for villages and townships with less than 3,000 population and running up to $4 for larger cities.

"In the case of the cities, the ratio of the unconditional grant to the municipal levy is 7.18 per cent; in the case of towns it is 7.44 per cent; in the case of the villages it is 8.07 per cent and with the townships it is highest at 10.41 per cent.

"In consequence of their comparatively low per capita expenditures, the basic grant of $1.50 per capita to communities with populations under 2,000 will mean more to them than $3 or $4 to the largest urban or metropolitan areas."

A government amendment to the Highway Traffic Act which would have limited costs to 20 per cent in judgments of more than $500 was passed out. The new amendment would authorize that in cases defended by the minister of highways the minister be authorized to settle any such cases where the circumstances warrant settlement. At present all cases must go to trial involving payment of costs, including counsel fee at all trials.

The proposal by Attorney-General Porter would reduce the overall amount of costs paid out of the fund by permitting the minister to negotiate settlement in the same manner as an ordinary litigant or an insurance company.

The minister's position would be safeguarded by the establishment of an informal committee of experts to approve proposed settlements.

W. N. Nickle (PC—Kingston) who last week blasted the high costs of the fund, indicated Wednesday he was satisfied with the amendment. He estimated it would save the fund more than $60,000 a year in interest. An expert predicted the saving would be even greater.

Mr. Robert Marsh, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Marsh, Foster Ave., who is hospitalized in Kingston General hospital for a period of six and one-half weeks, is now convalescing at home.

Contact Club Plans Coronation Service

At the recent meeting of the Contact Club of Christ Church there was a large attendance of energetic members ready to busy themselves at the work meeting.

During the short business session, conducted by the president, Florence Lennox, final plans were made for the reception to be held next Sunday after the confirmation service. Refreshment convener, Joan Taylor, will be in charge.

The work meeting was devoted to preparations for the forthcoming Coronation Kermis. All the corners of the parish hall became centres of activity, with Doreen Mills in charge of making aprons; Joan Taylor, dolls' clothes and stuffed dolls; Thelma Saunders, handicrafts; Catherine Rosiek, knitting, and Frances Rogers in charge of embroidery.

These hand-made articles will be just a part of the many other attractions being planned for the Coronation Kermis.

In the pleasant atmosphere of the social period, Canon Creegan presented a farewell gift to Grace Young, a Contact Club member of long standing, who is leaving Belleville shortly. In expressing her thanks Mrs. Young said she hoped to be back sometime.

Women's Activities

COLLEGE HILL W.A.

The March meeting of College Hill W.A. was held in the church hall on Wednesday afternoon with an attendance of 23 members and three visitors.

The worship service was given by Jean Thomson, Marion Sproule and Mary Bailey.

For the March meeting each member was to bring in some thing for the fish pond. There were also some tea towels and cups and saucers turned in.

It was decided to have a spring tea to be held 13th. May.

Energetic Club Attends Recent 'Preaching Mission'

The Energetic Club of Holloway United Church attended the "Preaching Mission" held in Bridge Street United Church on Friday evening for the devotional portion of their regular meeting.

On returning to Holloway Street Church, president, Frank Wilson, conducted the business session.

Ross Dryden then took charge and the following program was presented. Several numbers on the accordion by Mr. C. Tillbrook were thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Mr. A. Lennox showed pictures he had taken while on his visit there.

Refreshments were served by the group in charge.

The thanks of the club to all taking part in the program and to Margaret and Rose Dryden and their group for the delightful evening was expressed by Lloyd Townsend.

The "Tattler" was read by Vivian Oram and the meeting closed in the usual manner.

STIRLING

Bride-to-be Feted With Many Gifts

Stirling—Last Monday evening, Mrs. Frank Potter was hostess at a well arranged miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Willy van Leeuwen, a bride of the month. She was assisted by Mrs. J. Villeneuve, Mrs. O. Dalrymple, Mrs. W. Bentley and Miss N. Montgomery all members of a sewing circle patronized by the guest of honor.

An address was read by Mrs. O. Dalrymple after which the numerous gifts arranged on a beautifully decorated table were presented by Mrs. O. Dalrymple and Mrs. Potter. The bride-to-be very graciously replied, after which refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

TART REFIT

LONDON (CP)—Rt. Hon. E. Hutchinson, parliamentary under-secretary to the war office, told the House of Commons one of the shortest and greatest letters I have ever seen" came from a soldier's wife who had been asked to move from married quarters. She wrote: "Dear sir, I remain, yours truly."

FORMER COLLEGE BURSAR

TORONTO (CP)—Elliot Grassett Straiby, 66, former secretary and bursar of Trinity College, died Wednesday night a few hours after suffering a stroke. A native of Barrie, he was appointed secretary and bursar of the institution in 1937 after spending many years in the business field.

After the closing of the meeting an Irish contest proved interesting, given by Marion Sproule with Alice Storms being the winner.

Refreshments were served by those in charge. Eva Jinkson, Annie Letman and Hattie McMullen.

Alcohol Problem, Role It Plays in Lives of Today's Citizens Topic at W.C.T.U. Meeting

The March meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union was held at the "Y", with the president, Mrs. R. Farnsworth in the chair.

A welcome was extended to all and reference made to Education Week, observed on March 1-7, when teachers throughout the province are honored. Readers ask what the schools are doing about the alcohol program. Many remember learning about alcohol and the human body and many testify how their first inspiration to shun strong drink came from these lessons.

Changes in the curriculum caused three studies to become a secondary consideration. Effects of that lapse are clear today and a new concern has been aroused concerning the effect on the school generation today.

Alcohol Problem

The studies at Yale University have aroused educational leaders of North America and a fresh appraisal of the alcohol problem is seen with growing interest.

Since the use of alcoholic beverages can become an integral part of American society public education must include an interpretation of the laws these beverages play in the lives of today's citizens.

In Canada, the province of British Columbia was first to give serious consideration to alcohol education, introducing a full curriculum some five years ago. Recently Ontario has undertaken definite study of the problem.

The devotional service was taken by Mrs. J. Coulter, who brought an inspiration from James, first chapter. The message to the church is that day is also appropriate today.

Mrs. George Foster, in reporting on the Department of Peace, spoke on the opening of the seventh general assembly of the United Nations.

Twenty-two of the 60-member nations attending included women in their delegations, the largest number to date. Two women head their country's delegates, from Indian and Czechoslovakia. One woman was reporter of one of the committees of the assembly.

"Buried was the bloody hatchet
Buried was the dreaded war club;

Buried was all the warlike weapons,
And the war cry was forgotten.
Then there was peace among the nations."

What a challenge for peace.

Miss Clara Anderson, in reporting for the Travellers' Aid, stated a total of 14,000 persons were served by the association last year, and of these 800 required considerable social help.

Mrs. A. R. Fisher presented the financial budget for the year.

Mrs. Wm. Vandervoort had charge of the clip sheet "Alcohol and the Home." The education of public opinion in good citizenship is a primary purpose of the W.C.T.U. There are laws against juvenile drinking, but it requires a strong, informed public opinion in support of law enforcement.

A clipping from the abstract of laws says "no person shall knowingly sell or supply liquor to anyone under the age of 21 years; also no parent or guardian having the care, custody or control of a child under eight years of age, may enter licensed premises unless the child is under competent care.

Recently a Guelph mother was fined for leaving her infant alone while she visited a beverage room. A fine of $10 and costs, $24.00 in all, was imposed on parents who left a child of four years in a grill with strangers while they went to a beverage room. Many similar cases are known.

Let everyone agitate for widespread scientific alcohol education.

St. Andrew's W.M.S. Sponsors Attractive Afternoon Tea

Yesterday afternoon the Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church sponsored an attractive tea and sale of home cooking at the manse, 271 George Street, which, in addition to other church meetings elsewhere, was well attended.

Mrs. J. G. Hornsby, the hostess, and the president of the society, Mrs. J. Craig, received the guests, welcoming them, after which they were received by the ladies in the tea rooms, Mrs. Linksten and Mrs. Fisher, who also added further friendly greetings by kindly word and infectious smiles.

The tea room was invitingly lovely with its long tea table appointed with an exquisite drawn work linen cloth from India, having a border of linen Maltese crosses centred with delicate inserts of fine medallions in drawn stitch, the whole surrounded by tiny squares of spider-web fineness. At either end were the gleaming, copper tea urns and accompanying services, one from Scotland, the other, originally from Norway, used by four generations of the hostess' ancestors, and in the centre a lovely bowl of copper filled with yellow daisies, and wild-weave bracket sprays, and branches of pussy willows, while intermingled here and there were little purple and yellow-daisy pansies, and lacey asparagus fern. Tall, turquoise candles in copper holders added a charming accent to an already charming picture backgrounded by a window of pink, and purple African violets.

The tea room hostesses were Mrs. Welr, while those presiding at the copper urns included: Mrs. I. L. Moore and Mrs. McCullough, Mrs. W. Mantle, Mrs. Mrs. D. Fleming. Those who served the dainty sandwiches, and tiny cakes were: Mrs. G. Shaw, Mrs. M. Harlow, Mrs. R. Arnott, Mrs. F. Parsons, Mrs. Elliott, Mrs. E. W. Pigden, Mrs. Powell, Mrs. D. Sheir, Mrs. McKay, Miss M. Macintosh and Mrs. Hall.

Those replenishing the plates: Mrs. R. Mantle, Mrs. Mrs. D. Mrs. G. Wallbridge and making the tea, Mrs. R. Thomson, Mrs. Farnsworth, Mrs. Harvey and Mrs. Bell.

Delicious Home Cooking

In an adjoining room was the home cooking table and the candy table, the first in charge of Mrs. W. Mills and Mrs. J. Millar, with its array of delicious date bread, golden-crusted buns, luscious raspberry tartlets, little chocolate cakes topped with mounds of white boiled icing, a pink-iced angel cake, little cakes with pale green, pink, white and chocolate icing topped with whole walnut meats, cups of baked beans, lemon pies with golden meringues, taffy tarts, and pickles, and centring the whole, a gorgeous Easter cake with yellow icing topped with four shredded coconut nests having colored jelly bean eggs in pink, and blue, yellow and white.

The candy table with its little boxes of maple creams, chocolate fudge, both plain, nut-topped and nut-mixed, and divinity fudge, sponsored by the C.G.I.T. girls, offered a counter attraction to the delectable confections so many of which met with ready purchasers.

A dainty and attractive tea bringing much credit to the conveners, Mrs. H. Yorke and Mrs. D. Kane, to the gracious hostess, to the president of the W.M.S. and to all who assisted in the preparation and success.

Hot Cross Bun Time Is Here

By MARY MOORE

Little cave I if I'm criticized for repeating (I keep telling myself),

I'm afraid I've given you this recipe so many times before that you will wonder if I'm stuck in a rut.

I just can't improve on it. Maybe some other bread expert's members can though. If you do please let me know. But I dare not tamper with it for your letters tell me that you like and want to see it again now.

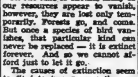
But gals, remember to buy fresh yeast. Don't rummage through the cupboard and discover an old package of yeast dated 1953, and expect it to raise these buns in 1953. Buy fresh yeast.

EMMA'S HOT CROSS BUNS

Buy bread flour. If your grocer does not carry it you will have to settle for all-purpose flour. Sift it and measure 3½ cup. in top of the double boiler heat 1½ cups milk to scalding point. Soak 1 package dry granular yeast in ¼ cup lukewarm water with 1/2 teaspoon sugar for 10 minutes. then stir it. Measure and mix 1/4 cup sugar, 2 teaspoons salt and 4 tablespoons shortening. Pour hot milk over them and stir until ingredients dissolve. (If you want to use compressed yeast crumble it into the warm mixture at this stage and add 1/2 cup tepid water, instead of using granular yeast and soaking it in the lukewarm water.) Add soaked and stirred granular yeast to warm milk mixture and stir in. Now stir in 2 cups of the sifted flour, and 1 unbeaten egg and beat well with a spoon until batter is perfectly smooth. Add remaining flour and 1/2 cup cleaned and dried raisins or currants, 2 teaspoons grated lemon rind and 1/2 teaspoon freshly grated nutmeg. Mix well. This dough may be stored in refrigerator for 2 days if you wish. Turn dough into greased bowl, brush lightly with melted butter or shortening or salad oil. Cover lightly if to be stored. It may be used at once without chilling. Cut dough into 24 parts on lightly floured board, shape into balls. Place evenly in rows in 2 buttered or oiled 8 inch square pans Cover with a towel, let rise in warm place if possible—about 80 deg. Fahr, being sure pans are out of drafts. They should rise until doubled in bulk —about 1½ hours (or 2 hours if temperature is about 72 or 75 deg). Now with a sharp pointed knife cut 1/2-inch deep crosses in top; let rise 10 minutes longer. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr, (a hot oven) for about 15 to 18 minutes. Cool on cake rack. The traditional frosting for this is made by simply adding water or milk to confectioners' sugar (icing sugar) until it is thin enough to spread. Trace this in the cross-cut when buns are cold.

Now some of you might want peel in your hot cross buns so here is another recipe which is good and true and a great favorite.

HOT CROSS BUNS NUMBER TWO (with peel)



Put in a measuring cup 1 teaspoon sugar 1/2 cup lukewarm water, 1 package of (fresh) granular yeast (or a crumbled yeast cake). Let stand 10 minutes then stir. Meanwhile sift into large bowl 4 cups sifted bread flour, 1½ teaspoon cinnamon, 1/2 teaspoon each cloves and allspice. Add to this dry mixture ¾ cup washed and dried raisins, 1/4 cup mixed peel. Mix, then make a deep well in centre. Mix the yeast mixture with ¾ cup lukewarm water, 1/4 cup sugar, 2 tablespoons very soft shortening (or cooking oil.) beaten egg. Pour this into the well in dry mixture and beat until batter is smooth. Smooth the top, brush with oil and cover tightly. Let rise until double in warm place out of drafts. Shape into buns, and place on greased pans. Let rise in warm place until double again. Cut cross in top. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. about 18 or 20 minutes. Five minutes before removing from oven brush with mixture of 2 tablespoons sugar and 1½ tablespoon hot milk to glaze them.

DIES UNDER FARM WAGON

KINCARDINE (CP) — Six-year-old David Gordon Moore, Huron township, died in hospital here Monday of injuries suffered when he was crushed under the wheels of a farm wagon taking him home from school. Son of Mr. and Mrs. David Moore, the youngster fell from the wagon the front and rear wheels of the vehicle passing over his head.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

By WINIFRED E. WILSON

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

HARASSED BIRDS

At one time or another many of our researchers appear to suffer, however, they do not lost only temporarily. Forests go, and come. But once a species of bird vanishes, that particular kind can never be replaced — it is extinct forever. And so we cannot afford just to let it go.

The cause of extinction seem to fit into two groups: the unavoidable and the avoidable. Sometimes the development of the country encroaches, unavoidably, on certain bird life, so that it comes near to extinction. There our Canadian Wildlife Service makes every effort to save the remaining few and, if possible, bring about their increase. When the danger is avoidable, it is the object of the service to prevent extermination by educating the public and, when necessary, by legislation. Each province has a Dominion Wildlife Officer, who reports to the chief of the service.

Just now Canada is common with the United States, has two special problems: the survival of trumpeter swans and whooping cranes. Other countries have their own difficulties. The beautiful white swans, owing to great care, are now somewhat on the increase. In 1935 the population was reported to be 73, whereas ten years or so later it passed the 500 mark. The Canadian birds do not migrate beyond our border, but summer in northern Saskatchewan and Alberta and winter in southern British Columbia. Shortly after Queen Elizabeth's Canadian tour our Wildlife officers were asked to trap seven trumpeter swans to be sent to her, but actually only five could be had.

About 28 whooping cranes now exist. A few of these spend the summer in the northern part of our Prairie Provinces, and in winter join the rest in the bird refuge in Texas. In spite of all warnings, two were shot dead during the 1952 fall migration.

Franklin gulls feed on grasshoppers, woodpeckers destroy injurious insects, hawks and owls prey on rodents, seed eaters consume weed seeds. Why should any of these birds be killed? We are all urged to make a special effort to save Canada's wild life.

In 1917 the Migratory Birds Convention Act went into force to protect birds from avoidable depletion or extinction. The last amendment was in September 1952. Only certain species of game birds may be hunted, and only at specific places and times. There are many other restrictions, as bag limit. However, migratory birds pass from one province to another, but actually only five could be had.

WHITE'S DISTRICT

WHITE'S DISTRICT — There was a good attendance at the Sunday School on Sunday morning with Miss Joan Shoemaker as pianist. Mr. Clifford Rush, missionary superintendent, took charge and gave an Easter talk on missions, dealing with Crucifixion of Christ and the new life. There were two birthday donations for missions. Miss Audrey Bowers favored with a solo, "Once Again Dear Lord We Pray," accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Donald Bowers, who also played for the closing hymn, "The Way of the Cross Leads Home."

Justice Minister Answers Question For Noseworthy

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Minister Garson said Tuesday a plan to allow magistrates to set a date for settling fines is about as far as the government feels it should go towards instalment payment.

He told a special Commons committee studying a revision of the Criminal Code that a magistrate may direct that fines be paid "forthwith at a time to be fixed."

Mr. Garson made the statement in reply to J. W. Noseworthy (CCF—York South) who said that a number of organizations have urged the committee to institute instalment payment.

Mr. Garson said there is the danger of the police courts becoming cluttered with the business connected with instalments and dealing with persons who fall behind.

However, a magistrate could set a future date at which a fine must be paid so as not to work a hardship on a person without immediate cash.

F. D. Shaw (SC—Red Deer) appealed to the committee to consider the question of paying compensation to persons who serve a prison term after being wrongly convicted. He mentioned the case of Ronald Power, 21-year-old Nova Scotian, freed after serving 10 months of a five-year robbery term.

Power was convicted last year in Toronto when he was wrongly identified by witnesses as a partner in the theft of a wallet containing $50. Later, police picked up Cass Martin, who resembled Power and found the wallet in his possession.

Power appealed and new evidence brought his release Feb. 12. Martin escaped from St. Catharines jail Aug. 21 while awaiting trial on charges of automobile theft. He is still sought by police.

Mr. Shaw said that in such a case the person loses his income during the time spent in jail and "many other things besides."

Mr. Garson said the federal government had no responsibility in the Power case. In his opinion, the provincial government already had the right to make compensation by order-in-council.

Inserting a provision for compensation in the code, he said, raised a constitutional issue.

Jobless Await Spring Opening

In the week ended Feb. 21 there were 4,513,000 persons who worked a full week and 179,000 persons without jobs and looking for work. In the comparable week ended Jan. 24, covered in the last previous report, there were 4,533,000 persons working and 187,000 out of work and seeking jobs.

The figures are estimated by the bureau of statistics, based on a sampling of the labor force, and made public in a joint release by the bureau and the labor department.

Employment remained at its seasonally - low winter levels in such activities as farming, logging, construction, transportation and related manufacturing industries, the report said.

The Forin Carmel Young People's Union recently held a successful "Farmers' Banquet" in the Sunday School rooms of Foxboro United Church.

The attractive tables were appropriately and artistically decorated and bountifully supplied with appetizing food.

After everyone had eaten, the following toasts were proposed: To the Queen, by president Vernon Slaughter; To the Church, by Kay Homan; To the Mothers, by Jimmie Reid; To the Fathers, by Carol Stewart, and were replied to by The Rev. Giffin, Mrs. S. Homan and Mr. Larue, respectively.

George McLean favored with two Irish songs in his native brogue, and Gerba Joslin led a sing-song with more Irish favorites. Jean Churchill gave a vocal number, "Danny Boy," accompanied by Mrs. Price.

During a sing-song of spiritual choruses, led by Joan McCurdy, Kay Homan, assisted by Marilyn Parks, Joe Harvey, Charles De-Mille and Marvin Reid assembled on the platform and conducted a most inspiring worship service, bringing the enjoyable evening to a close.

Freighters Move Early on L. Huron

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) Four freighters moving up Lake Huron toward the mouth of the St. Mary's river east of here are expected to arrive there Friday night. They are the Buckeye, Benjamin Fairless, Gordon C. Leitch and Thomas Shaughnessy.

The vessels will not be allowed to enter the river until Saturday. Only daylight navigation is permitted in the spring season.

The ice-breaker Mackinaw passed through the Sault Ste. Marie ship canals here today. She is headed for ice-jammed Whitefish Bay, the only barrier between the Sault and the Lakehead.

MARMORA

Many Attend C. W. L. Regional Meeting

Marmora — With representatives attending from sub divisions of Stoco, Tweed, Madoc, Stirling, Belleville, Campbellford, Deseronto and Havelock in addition to Marmora, the regional meeting of the Catholic Women's League held in the Sacred Heart parish hall, Marmora, on Sunday afternoon proved an unqualified success with over 90 ladies being present.

The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. J. A. O'Neill, director of the Marmora Sub Division.

A cordial welcome was extended the visiting ladies by the president, Mrs. W. A. Shannon.

Mrs. Charles Cook, as regional convenor occupied the chair. Having extended greetings, she gave a brief historical outline of the church in whose hall they were assembled. Mrs. Wilfred LeSage, Tweed, convenor for Our Lady's Missionaries, spoke for support for their labors. Next Mrs. J. A. Paquet contributed a pianoforte solo to the pleasure of all.

Mrs. C. J. Brennan, Deseronto, convener of finance appealed for funds for the National Committee.

Little Cathie Jones daintily presented corsages of roses to Mrs. Cook and the visiting ladies, after which Misses Patricia and Anne Clairmont delivered the gathering with a pianoforte duet.

Extends Greetings

As a guest of honor from the Peterborough diocese Mrs. Smith extended greetings and expressed thanks for the invitation to be present. The diocesan president, Mrs. R. P. McGrory of Prescott gave a fine address in which she outlined business procedure and also mentioned that the brief prepared for Ottawa regarding undesirable literature had received some consideration.

Miss Mary Hughes moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. McGrory. Rev. J. A. O'Neill then introduce Monsignor S. J. Byrne, Diocesan Director, who in a brief speech, commended the C.W.L. on their work, and paid a tribute to Father O'Neill for his supervision whereby so excellent a parish hall had been provided the parish.

Pictures of Rome

Monsignor Byrnes then showed pictures taken by himself on a trip which he made to Rome and other parts of Europe to the interest of all present.

He was thanked by Mrs. Chas. Brady of the Marmora Sub Division. Mrs. C. J. Brennin, on behalf of the guest Sub Divisions thanked the Marmora ladies.

On behalf of the latter, Miss Bernadette Warren presented Monsignor Byrne with a gift.

For this auspicious event the tea tables were decorated with multi-colored tulips and mauve and yellow candle tapers.

Mrs. John Crawford poured tea, and delicious refreshments were served before the gathering dispersed.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Sopha attended the funeral of the latter's mother, the late Mrs. David La Force at Almonte on Tuesday.

Mrs. Ernest Shannon who was stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage while at mass on Sunday, is seriously ill in St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough.

Approximately $200 half of which was donated by the employees of Deloro Smelting and Refining Company Limited, and the other half raised through a canvass in the village will be forwarded to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind towards the erection of the new home in Kingston.

Reeve C. H. Bukard supervised the canvass.

FRANKFORD

FRANKFORD — A popular young Frankford man, one of the village's most eligible bachelors, has come up with one which has mystified the whole community. This past week, in attempting to drive from Hamilton to Toronto, he apparently lost his sense of direction, and quicker than you could say "is the road to Toronto?" he found himself in Niagara Falls . . . and without a bride at that! It is understood that offers from friends have included everything from topographical maps to gyro automatic pilots.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Duncan and family of Batawa spent the week-end with relatives in Locust Hill and Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Carman Westlake and family of Batawa, visited Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Sharpe in Hilton, and Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Huycke at Morganston, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Rowe and daughters visited Mr. and Mrs. R. D. McDonald in Campbellford, on Sunday.

Messrs. Francis Murphy and Don Couture, and Mrs. Don Couture spent the week-end in Montreal, where they visited Mr. and Mrs. Russell Hogg.

Mrs. G. Vandervoort, Mrs. Minnie Holder and Miss Florence Hatfield spent Sunday in Trenton.

Mr. Arthur Duncan was the special speaker on Monday evening at the Kinsmen Club joint meeting in Kingston.

Mr. and Mrs. Mac Wilson and family and Miss Connie Elliott spent Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Everett Elliott and sons in West Huntingdon.

Mr. and Mrs. S. McCrea, of Tweed, visited Mr. and Mrs. Preston Chase on Saturday.

Word has been received that Gordon Huycke is progressing favorably in Trenton Memorial Hospital.

Mrs. Dan Frost has returned home after spending the winter in Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lohnes called on Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lohnes, Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Mervin Dafoe and Bill spent Sunday tea hour with Mrs. Helen Whitney and Wayne.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Johnson returned home after spending a week visiting friends in Toronto.

The sympathy of the community goes out to the Stricker family in the loss of a beloved wife and mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stuckey spent Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Bob Cawley and Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Gawley in Marmora.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Patrick of Batawa, visited Mr. and Mrs. Charles Patrick on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Andrews and family spent the week-end with relatives in Peterborough, Oshawa and Toronto.

Miss Joan McCrea spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. McCrea, in Tweed.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Miller and daughter, Mrs. Elgin Payne spent Saturday afternoon in Cobourg.

Mr. Reay Johnson of Camp Borden, spent the week-end with his family.

Mrs. H. Whitton is visiting friends in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Carlisle and family spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. L. Murdoch, in Madoc.

Mrs. Ellen Kelly visited her daughter, Mrs. James Sheridan, in Napanee, over the week-end.

Mrs. Ernie Chard and children visited her mother, Mrs. Garth Siegley, in Trenton, on Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Cooper returned to her home in Bloomfield after spending several weeks with her daughter, Mrs. O. Leavitt.

Mr. L. O. Blow, of Toronto, spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Carlisle.

The C.A's of Frankford Full Gospel Tabernacle held their regular meeting in the church on Friday evening at 8.00, Rev. G. Pierce, pastor, welcomed everyone. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Twill, of Wooler, were in charge of the meeting. Mr. Twigg led the song service.

Reg. Solmes favored with a vocal solo, "Jesus Gives Me A Song." Mr. Pierce made the announcements. Mrs. Twigg brought a stirring message from Isaiah, 50, and Romans 3, speaking on "determination in our hearts, to succeed for our Lord." Without a vision, the people perish.

W.M.S.

The W.M.S. of the United Church held their regular meeting on Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. H. J. Madill. Quiet music was played by Mrs. Leslie Frost.

Mrs. Morrow, the president, took charge, and offered much food for thought on "Who Is Our Neighbor?" With Africa only 30 flying hours from Canada, one must realize that they are indeed neighbors.

Mrs. Dickson took charge of the program, the topic being, "Means Of Grace." A portion of Scripture on the theme was read from Matthew 22, Mrs. Bonded read Ephesians 3, and Mrs. J. Johns from Acts 1, emphasizing grace, service and fellowship. Mrs. Mallory gave a "Temperance" reading. Mrs. Waller Morrow favored with a beautiful vocal solo, "The Church By The Side Of the Road."

Royal Tour Film

The Frankford Branch of the Canadian Legion will be showing the film "The Royal Tour" on Monday evening at 7.30 in the auditorium of the Frankford Public School. Please note the change of place. Everyone is welcome. There is no admission charge, but those wishing may make a donation to the Legion to defray expenses. If necessary, the film will be shown a second time, should the school be too crowded to accommodate everyone.

Messrs. Milford Macaulay and Holt Madill took Arthur Southworth for a drive Sunday afternoon. Friends in Frankford were glad to see Art out of the hospital for the day, and every hope that he will be soon back in town to stay.

The Frankford Branch of the Canadian Legion is making plans for a suitable celebration for the village on Coronation Day. It is hoped that a large fireworks display may be staged, and also special services in the Memorial Park.

The sympathy of the village is extended to Mrs. Milford Macaulay and her brother, Peter Houle, in the loss of a beloved step-father, this week in Timmins.

Not Responsible Claim

John Diefenbaker, Progressive member for Lake Centre and a Saskatchewan lawyer, urged that federal liability be extended to include victims of miscarriages of justice in provincial courts.

Justice Minister Garson said the federal government could not be responsible in such cases. The provinces had jurisdiction over their own courts and any provision for recourse must be made by the provinces themselves.

Mr. Diefenbaker welcomed the extension of federal liability but said it should allow claimants to take all their cases to the provincial courts. The bill provides that only those cases where claims are under $1,000 shall be heard in provincial courts. Others go to the Exchequer Court of Canada.

Should Have Recourse

Mr. Diefenbaker mentioned two Northern Ontario men sentenced to death for murder and later freed by the Ontario Appeal Court on the ground there was no case against them. Persons such as these, who suffered the agony of coming close to the gallows, should have recourse to the Crown.

The federal government should be responsible. It appointed the judges who tried such cases. Parliament should make a provision that there could be recourse to the federal government.

Convicted by Jury

John Dickey, parliamentary assistant to Defence Production Minister Howe, said Mr. Diefenbaker was asking the federal government to underwrite provincial liability in administration of justice. In the case of the two Northern Ontario men they had been convicted by a jury, not a judge.

Mr. Diefenbaker interjected that "the judge didn't realize there was no case and left a non-existent case to the jury." That was a reflection on the judge because judges were only human and sometimes erred like everyone else.

Mr. Garson said provincial courts were under provincial jurisdiction. Cases in those courts were generally launched by provincial or municipal officers, though in cases where the RCMP launched prosecution on behalf of the Dominion there would be question of federal liability in case of a miscarriage of justice.

But, said the minister, it would not make for federal-provincial harmony if the federal government investigated the handling of a particular case with a view to reimbursing a wronged person. That was a provincial responsibility.

CALLS FOR AGREEMENT

BONN (AP)—Chancellor Konrad Adenauer called on the Soviet Union Tuesday to agree to unification of Germany and release about 300,000 German war prisoners he says are still being held in Russia. Such moves, the West German chancellor said, would prove Russia's expressed desire for peace.

BRITAIN PREPARES

Her body will be taken to the hall Sunday in procession from the chapel in the grounds of her London home, Marlborough House.

Plans Announced

Plans for the funeral were announced Wednesday night by the Earl of Scarborough, the lord chamberlain. At the same time, he disclosed that the Queen ordered court mourning only until April 25. No order was issued for public mourning.

Thus the mourning period will be over well in advance of Coronation Day and arrangements for that ceremony will remain unchanged—in accordance with the Queen grandmother's wishes.

In his broadcast tribute, Churchill said that the old Queen "died in the knowledge that the crown of these realms worn so gloriously by her husband and by her son and so soon to be set with all solemnity on the head of her granddaughter, is far more securely based on the people's love and the nation's will than in the sedate years of her youth when rank and privilege ruled society."

Steadfast in Opposition

The view that Queen Mary, steadfast in her opposition to royal divorce, was largely responsible for the court ban on the twice-divorced Duchess of Windsor was widely held. However, she was known to be very fond of her eldest son, who frequently visited her in London.

The Express, whose Canadian-born publisher is zu old friend of the Duke's, long has urged a relaxation of the barrier and the return of Windsor. It noted that during the years since his abdication, "it was always his mother he came to London to see."

"Now that the last link with earlier days is gone," the editorial adds, "the Duke may feel he has less need than ever to visit London. Perhaps he may wonder whether he is wanted by the people. Let the Duke doubts if he has them, he dispelled. Politicians may have shown bitterness toward him but the people never did and do not now. Their affection for him is abiding.

"It is the deep, earnest desire of the nation that he should not only continue to visit Britain but that he should make his home in this land that gave him birth."

One recent happening has been construed in some circles as a sign the barrier to the Duchess may be coming down. Almost three weeks ago, the Princess Royal, Queen Mary's daughter and the Duke of Windsor's sister, posed with him and the Duchess for photographers in New York. The Princess and the Duke then were en route to their ailing mother's bedside.

Another London morning newspaper, the mass-circulating Daily Mirror, launched a savage editorial attack on the BBC for cancelling Wednesday's scheduled broadcasts of horse races, light music and variety numbers.

Accusing the BBC of being "overwhelmed by a great event," the Mirror declared it would never have occurred to Queen Mary "that our respect and affection and our grief at her passing would be put deep into effect if the BBC—on the assumption that life, and even sport, goes on."

Here's Good Advice For All STOMACH SUFFERERS

This Man Had Sick, Burning, Upset Stomach, Became Very Nervous, Irritable, Got Headaches, Rheumatic Pains. Tells How Synions Helped Him. Recommends It Highly.

Here is good advice for all sufferers from stomach trouble. Synions Herbal Compound has helped thousands of men and women suffering from weak, nervous, upset stomach. It may well be just the means of helping you, too. Mr. John Fleischmann, 315 Edinburgh Street, London, Ontario, tells his experience with Synions as follows:

"My stomach kept giving me trouble and I was very nervous and kept getting worse as time went on.

Couldn't Eat

"After awhile I was having so much pain with gas and burning in my stomach that I had no appetite to eat my meals. What little I did eat soured in my stomach afterwards. There would be a burning pain in the pit of my stomach and sometimes I'd have attacks. I became very nervous, irritable, got splitting headaches and had to be taking laxatives all the time. Sometimes I would get pain in my back, limbs and shoulders.

First Real Relief

"The things I was taking didn't seem to be doing me any good, so after a friend told me about Synions I decided to try them. Now it can be said that this medicine has given me the first real relief I've had from these troubles. I can eat again without having all that distress afterwards. I have no more headaches and sleep nights and I certainly feel different. Indeed I am so pleased with the way Synions has helped me that I feel you're interested and have more energy.

"I have recommended Synions very highly to anyone suffering as I did."

How it Acts

Synions is made from 18 of Nature's Finest Herbs and Roots and acts on the stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels, improving their action. It helps to neutralize excess acids and impurities from the system and promotes better assimilation of food for increased strength and energy.

Synions is sold and recommended in Belleville by DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

The Greatest Story Ever Told

Chapter 33

IT IS FAIR!

"In all three testimonies," replied the high priest, in a shrill voice, "the witnesses agreed in one essential point: they all say three days, do they not? Is not that agreeing together?"

Joseph smiled disdainfully.

"That is reasoning for a Roman, but not for a Jew," he replied. "I remind you again, Lord Caiphas, this man is on trial for His life. He is entitled to every protection the law affords."

"It is my duty and yours to be active on His behalf," Joseph returned. "Yes, Caiphas, as I told you before, you have not made out a case against this man. Furthermore, I see a witness over there anxious to be heard. Let us hear him."

Caiphas turned brusquely. Standing near the prisoner was a stout, pale man, eyes shining with extraordinary brilliance.

"I asked," he faltered in a querulous voice, "that the questions be put to me. I have already been before the Committee".

With patience that lacked all grace, Caiphas applied the ritual to the stranger. His name was Benjamin, alas of King David Street.

"Well, Benjamin, what have you to testify here?"

Benjamin sank to his knees, picked up the dusty robe of the prisoner, and kissed its hem.

A Hush in The Room

"I was blind," he said. "He put some clay on my eyes after mixing it with His spittle and when He took the clay off, I was healed."

Caiphas shook his finger in the face of the witness.

"Get up!" he barked. "You are not here to tell fairy tales! What do you really know?"

"One thing I know," reiterated Benjamin. "Once I was blind and now I see."

There was a hush in the trial room; something in the manner of this witness filled them with belief. They turned to look at Jesus with new interest. Could it be possible . . .

"There is no value in such an interruption," he complained angrily. "No value whatsoever. We are not here to decide whether this accused man is a physician or is not a physician. The question is clear enough: is He, or is He not, a blasphemer?"

"You have yet to prove it," said Joseph.

A vociferous shout from the assembly reinforced the objection. Caiphas saw then, if he had not realized it before, that not he nor his great father-in-law, nor anyone else, held the ancient tribunal of Israel in his pocket. These judges were not to be ruled except by law.

As the confusion grew, another of the judges, Nicodemus, stood up from among the elders and clapped his hands for a sign that he wanted to be heard.

That Is The Law"

"Mark you this, my lords," Nicodemus declared. "If you attempt to limit the blasphemy charge against this prisoner to the subordinate charge of prophesying, how can you ever prove the man a false prophet? You can't possibly do it until the Temple is destroyed. If, then, Jesus of Nazareth fails to rebuild it in three days, then and then only if He proven to be a false prophet. That is the law, my Lord, and we are bound by it."

And as Nicodemus sat down, Joseph of Arimathea rose again.

"My lords," he said, "I propose that we dismiss Jesus of Nazareth here and now, and let Him go His way!"

As Joseph of Arimathea sat down, he saw many approving headshakes. And yet there was certainly no majority for conviction. Only momentarily disconcerted, Caiphas again lifted his ringed hand, Annas having just left his side.

"My lords," began Caiphas, "it is true that under our law the least discord between the evidence of witnesses is held to destroy its value in so solemn an issue as we are now trying. However, this does not mean that the entire case again this prisoner can be thrown out on these technical grounds. Moreover, we have more evidence to bring, a charge, that this man claims to be the Messiah all Jews have waited for, the Christ. That is His abominable crime and now He must answer for it."

"Wait!"

Both Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathea were on their feet, clamoring to be heard.

"You are changing the very ground of the accusation during the course of the trial!" shouted Nicodemus. That is unjust. I believe it is illegal."

A Voice of Authority

Before Caiphas could attempt an answer, old Annas rose again and took over. Very straight he was, in his physical slightness, standing in the vast public chamber, the incarnation of the elder statesman, the voice of authority and experience.

"Let us hear no talk of injustice in his honorable court," he began crisply. "Nor of illegality. We are here to exercise our best talents in trying a man accused of the worst crime we know—blasphemy. The accusation that the prisoner pretended to be the Messiah is merely a further count in the indictment. It is fair. It is just. It is legal. Caiphas, your witnesses."

No one cared to challenge this opinion; Annas was their supreme, most respected, and powerful adviser.

The new witnesses were called: Simon, the web-toed watchman from the Watch Tower of David; Ezra ben Tobeth, the one with the sweet singing voice; and Challi of Bethany, a neighbor of Mary and Martha. They slapped their thighs, or raised hands, according to preference, and to them were put the regulation questions. Then they gave their evidence.

And more than before it became clear that something was amiss.

For Simon testified that Jesus had called Himself the Son of God, but Ezra swore he had called Himself the Son of Man. And Challi declared that he had once heard Jesus ask His disciples how public men called Him and what they said of Him; Challi had overheard Him inquire if men thought He was the Christ.

No Case Yet

Caiphas was in the same dilemma as before; beads of angry sweat glittered on the cheeks of the high priest and rolled down his trembling chin, rivulets of his whiskers are he bowed to consult Annas.

"Joseph of Arimathea is right," the old man whispered. "You have not been able to prove a case against Jesus. And yet, my Lord Caiphas, having gone this far, you have got to prove a case against Him."

"And quickly, too," added Caiphas, "or someone will say it is time to end the trial and go home."

"Nicodemus is getting ready to do that now," said Annas. "He is the kind of man who likes to make a speech. He will offer some quillet of a technicality, because that is what he is, a quibbler on small points, subtleties, and nice distinctions. Hang and burn such a man! But let him talk! By the time he finishes and sits down, I will have thought of a plan."

Job Chances Lost by Concern Of Prospective Employees For Selfish Interests of Security

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A prospective employee — especially a young one — should be more interested in what his contribution to the employer will be than in the firm's pension plan, G. K. Shells of Toronto, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, said Wednesday.

Speaking to the Finance Club of the University of Western Ontario, he outlined "what the average Canadian employer likes or dislikes to find in the Canadian university graduate who comes to him for a job."

Wants Graduates

The employer is not favorably impressed, said Mr. Shells, "by the young man of 20 or 25, whether he be university graduate or not, whose chief concern seems to be the degree of 'social security' which he can count on if he manages to remain in the employ of that particular company for the next 45 or 50 years.

"We get some of them just like that—almost before they get their hats off, they want to know all about the company's pension plan.

"The executive may be very proud of his company's pension plan, but his reaction to a feverish desire to learn all about any retirement scheme is: 'This fellow has no confidence in his own ability to get ahead—he's already, mentally, on pension.'

"The average employer is very happy to explain all these matters — but in their proper sequence. He just doesn't like to feel that before the prospective employee has even discussed what contributions he can make to the company, he wants to know all about what he can get out of it. . .

"Many employers report that, during the very first interview, they have been asked by graduate applicants: 'How long is the training period before I can expect an administrative position.'

"Such applicants obviously have the conviction that a university degree is automatically an 'open sesame' to a top managerial post. Unfortunately for the university graduate—fortunately for others—this is not the case . . ."

He urged graduates to take advantage of company training courses for potential executives. They needed them a lot more than the man who came up the hard way and who is likely to be their rival for that administrative position.

Mr. Shells said the initial salary which graduates receive "has in it more of the elements of an investment by employers in their future 'capabilities than it has of payment for current services rendered.

"The question of who shall rise to top positions is not one which can or will be decided by your employer—that's up to you!"

Keeper of Pound Is Charged With Cruelty to Dogs

ALLISTON (CP)—James Walsh, a 67-year-old pound keeper at nearby Tottenham, appeared in court here Tuesday, charged with cruelty to animals in connection with the death March 10 of two dogs at Tottenham.

Police said Walsh bagged one of the dogs and beat the other to death with an ax after they were left with him to be placed on a farm.

Alliston is 40 miles north of Toronto.

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian government Wednesday showed sharp annoyance at the latest United States squeeze on dairy imports and prepared to fire another round of protests at Washington

But there still was hope among some officials that President Eisenhower will take action within the next few months to lift the trade-hampering curbs. The curbs will be eliminated automatically unless the legislation under which they are kept alive—the U.S. Defence Production Act—is renewed before next June.

Meanwhile, Trade Minister Howe told the Commons in reply to Hazen Argue (CCF—Assiniboia) that the government already has forwarded three "strongly-worded" protests on the restrictions, the latest within the last four weeks.

"The government will continue to protest as effectively as diplomatic procedure will permit," he added.

The American dairy restrictions have been under the government's eye for many months. It brought the latest annoyance was the U.S. agriculture department announcement Tuesday, banning all imports of dried milk products effective April 1.

Canada, other dairy exporting countries in Europe and New Zealand have taken the stand that all of the U.S. dairy import restrictions contravene the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Canada has reserved the right to take retaliatory tariff action against American products, but so far hasn't done so.

St. Laurent Extends Canada's Condolences To Royal Family

A life that spanned over 60 years of public and personal tragedies, ended with the death of Queen Mary who would have been 86 on May 26. Although more than 16 years have passed since she shared the throne with George V, she never ceased to serve her country and the Commonwealth. Many Canadian servicemen and their families will always remember the kindly and active interest the Dowager Queen showed in them during two world wars. Her great trials won her the love of her people. The abdication of her eldest son Edward, now the Duke of Windsor, was a severe blow to her as a mother and a believer in the validity of the theory of noblesse oblige. In the war another son, the Duke of Kent, was killed in plane crash. Perhaps the most severe blow, however, was the death of King George VI a little more than a year ago after an operation for cancer of the lung. It was her dearest wish to live long enough to see her granddaughter Elizabeth crowned Queen next June if only to see the coronation procession past her window, as the cortege of her son had done — a happy last memory blotting out a sad one. But that was not to be. When informed of her death, four generations of Britons who knew and loved her as the proud symbol of royalty, paid their tribute. Through the Commonwealth, with its 573,000,000 people, flags were dipped and minutes of silence observed. Similar expressions from other chiefs of states poured in to her monarch-granddaughter at Buckingham Palace. Canada's Prime Minister St. Laurent said: "Her Majesty's death will be a personal sorrow for Canadians and indeed for all the peoples of the Commonwealth. The wide extent of her work and influence can be measured by the universal admiration with which she was regarded. Her sympathy, kindness and graciousness over so many years had won all our hearts." Above, the coronation of a second son, George VI, after Edward's abdication, found her still the regal figure she presented at her own. Members of group are Princess Royal, Duchess of Gloucester, Duke of Gloucester, Dowager Queen, King George VI, the Queen Mother, Duke of Kent, now deceased; the Duchess of Kent, the Queen of Norway. In front stand Princess Margaret Rose and the present Queen, then Princess Elizabeth. — Central Press Canadian.

Three Top French Political Leaders to Visit Ottawa Following Talks in Washington

OTTAWA (CP)—The prime minister, foreign minister and finance minister of France will visit Ottawa next Sunday and Monday at the invitation of the Canadian government.

Prime Minister Rene Mayer, accompanied by Foreign Minister Georges Bidault and Finance Minister Maurice Bourges-Maunoury, will come here after talks in Washington with President Eisenhower and officials of the United States government.

It is believed the visit will largely be in the nature of a courtesy call that will allow the representatives of the two countries to renew acquaintances and discuss problems of mutual interest.

It is not known here whether the visitors will have any particular matter to raise, in the absence of such informat on, arrangements have been made for them to meet with Prime Minister St. Laurent, External Affairs Minister Pearson, Finance Minister Abbott and Production Minister Howe.

Mr. Mayer, then defence minister, and Mr. Bidault, finance minister at the time, both attended a meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in Ottawa about two years ago. They have met Canadian cabinet ministers at other NATO meetings.

Reference possibly will be made during talks to stability world conditions, particularly those in Europe and to relations between Canada and France as members of NATO.

The visitors will arrive from Washington at noon Sunday. They will be welcomed by Prime Minister St. Laurent, members of the cabinet and senior government officials.

They will be guests at an informal reception there.

The first item on the agenda Monday is the placing of a wreath by Mr. Mayer at the National War Memorial. Discussions with Canadian government officials will follow.

Mr. Mayer and his party will be the guests of Governor General Vincent Massey at Government House. Later, the visitors will give a press conference at the French embassy and be dinner guests of the Canadian government.

They will fly to New York early Tuesday.

Minister Declines Call

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Rev. H. S. Rodney Wednesday declined a call to the largest Presbyterian church in Canada, to stay with his St. Thomas congregation.

When the call to St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Windsor, was placed in his hands, Mr. Rodney covered his face momentarily to hide his sobs. Then in a voice broken with emotion he said:

The call to the Windsor church bore the names of 1,582 members of the congregation, and 30 adherents.

IN ARMY CONTINGENT

SARNIA (CP)—A Sarnia man, RQAIS Robert C. Scott, has been selected to accompany the Canadian contingent representing the Canadian Army at the Coronation June 7, it was disclosed Wednesday. A member of the 31st Field Regiment RCA (reserve), he will be one of 600 officers and men from active and reserve units across Canada, to make the trip.

Chrysler Reduces Price on Certain Types of Cars

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The Chrysler Corporation of Canada, Ltd., announces Wednesday price cuts ranging from $17 to $62 on "certain" of its passenger cars and trucks.

A. J. Shaw, vice-president in charge of sales, said the new price scale will become effective March 26.

Reductions on the four-door passenger car models will be: Plymouth Cambridge $24; Plymouth Cranbrook $41.60; Dodge Crusader $26; Dodge Regent $29.30; Chrysler Windsor Deluxe $47; Chrysler New Yorker Deluxe $62; Desoto Firedome $50.

IN THE RED

WELLINGHAM, England (CP)—The 70 inhabitants of this Norfolk village will face a tax increase of eight pence to cover the cost of last year's council elections—$15. It is estimated the debt will be cleared just in time for the 1957 elections.

Signs of Spring

Spring is in the air — the rhubarb is shooting up; the bees are buzzing; the moths are flying outside the winds wat night; the cat had kittens; the birds are fighting to see which gets the nest; the cows are coming in; the horses don't want to come in; the frogs are croaking; the pussy willows are out; and the farmers are thinking of getting their grain ready for seeding. (The trees begin to show, and the bull-rushes out!)

Arnold Meyers' oil paintings are on display at the Odeon Theatre, Trenton.

Mrs. Ernest Kennedy and babe have returned to Toronto after spending four weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Stickle and sister, Thelma.

CONFESSIONS OF A CONVERTED T-V HATER...

BY BRUCE WEST

To be perfectly frank and earnest, I didn't start hating TV right away. At first I was just a little suspicious of it, that's all.

I guess I started suspecting it down in New York several years ago while watching the telecast of a speech by the President of the United States.

As I recall, he was speaking about the State of the Union. I understand this is a pretty serious matter. But there was the President distinctly—well, fairly distinctly—floating what appeared to be a hula dance while discussing the Red Menace and the abundant crop of corn out in Iowa.

The next time I got a little doubtful was the day I watched the big Blizzard during the World Series in 1945. It's a recorded fact that there wasn't a flake of snow fell on New York that day. It's in the book. But if you were to believe this lying contraption, the natives of the jaded junction of Manhattan should have been wading around in snowdrifts up to their withers.

As I said before, that was a few years ago and there has been a lot of changes made since then. The performers no longer wiggle unless they're supposed to and when they do it looks downright pleasant. And there's no more snow on the screen than you'd see on a summer's afternoon in Bermuda.

Just the same, it was when TV started getting good that I started actively hating it. This was shortly after TV came to Canada and my best friends stopped speaking to me.

It got so bad that no one who owned a television set would give you a civil word. I dropped over to one TV owner's house six times to pay him back the ten I owed him and never got up enough nerve to offer it to him. Every time I coughed he'd wave me off huffily. When I visited another friend one evening his wife invited me to have a cup of tea and then poured it into my vest pocket while watching Milton Berle.

Well, a while ago I got a Crosley. I figured the wife and kids might get a kick out of it. It wasn't that I was interested myself, you understand. It was just that I was outvoted by the family.

First night it was hooked up I happened to sit down in the living room. I wasn't really looking, I was just resting my feet. But next thing I knew I was sitting there being hypnotized by the galloping eyebrows of Groucho Marx.

Two days later the postman arrived with a special delivery, registered letter and I told him to just move me over carefully and put it in my hip pocket. It wasn't long after that that my aunt spent three days with us. They tell me she was looking quite well.

Well, I might as well admit that my set has become a theatre, a cooking school, a sports arena and an amazingly clear picture window looking out upon the wide world in general. I haven't seen a movie for ages. Almost forget what pop corn smells like. And no one has sat on my hat for weeks.

The fights seep so real that the time Kid Gavilan landed a straight left on the button of Chuck Davey I couldn't get back to my feet until the count of nine. And the hockey games have the kind of authenticity that almost makes you duck the puck.

And there are other considerations. Now-a-days, when I draw a spell of baby-sitting at our place, I just plunk her down in front of the TV and check her every half hour for humidity.

But don't ask me whether television is here to stay . . . all I know is that every time I sit down in front of the thing, I am.

3,051 Marriages Performed By Magistrates

TORONTO (CP)—A total of 3,051 marriages have been performed in Ontario by magistrates and judges since the passage in 1950 of an amendment to the Marriage Act to permit civil marriages, Attorney-General Porter told the legislature Wednesday night. He was replying to a question by W. L. Houck (L—Niagara Falls).

This represents 3.3 per cent of the total of 102,724 marriages performed during that period. Percentages for the other provinces where civil marriages are permitted are: British Columbia 8.1 per cent; Alberta 6; Saskatchewan 4 and Manitoba 1.9.

Another Blaze Hits Nfld. Town

CORNER BROOK, Nfld. (CP) — A $200,000 fire ripped through a fire-blackened business block in this west coast Newfoundland paper town Wednesday night, destroying a restaurant and shoe store. There were no injuries.

The fire was in the same block where 17 buildings were destroyed by a December fire which caused $1,000,000 damage.

Appreciated Tribute

TORONTO (CP)—Premier Frost practically suggested Wednesday night that the legislature's one Communist member join one of three major parties in the legislature.

"A man with your talents and ability," he told J. B. Salsberg (Lab.-Prog.—Toronto St. Andrew) would be well employed in constructive effort in one of the three parties here."

He said Mr. Salsberg devoted his time to destructive criticism.

Mr. Salsberg appreciated the compliment but felt that continual criticism of government measures was necessary.

The exchange took place while Mr. Salsburg was criticizing amendments to the government's Toronto area annexation bill.

Believes Tourist Trade Doubled In Three Years

OTTAWA (CP)—Senator J. J. Duffus (L—Ontario) said in the Senate Wednesday that he believes Canada's multi-million-dollar tourist industry will double in the next two or three years.

Senator Duffus, honorary president of the Ontario Tourist Association, said during a continuing debate of the tourist trade that Ontario's tourist facilities soon will be taxed to the limit.

"It is my conviction that with the improvement of highways, the unprecedented expansion in our Canadian economy and prosperity generally in both Canada and the United States, Ontario will be crowded with tourists to an extent which will tax our accommodation to the limit.

"In my belief, our tourist trade will double in the next two or three years."

Must Keep Prince Off the Road For 12 Months

COPENHAGEN (Reuters) — A traffic cop can't pinch a member of the Royal Family in Denmark, but police got orders Wednesday to keep Prince Rene off the road for 12 months anyhow.

The order had to come direct from King Frederick because royal personalities are exempt from ordinary law.

Prince Rene de Bourbon Parma, the King's cousin by marriage, had a few too many cherry brandies recently police said, and:

1. Backed his car into another on a crowded Copenhagen street,
2. Drove off in the other direction and crashed into the side of a second car,
3. Swung around and zoomed down the street into a third pile-up.

Police rushed up to untangle the jam, collared the driver, then stepped back smartly when they found he was the prince.

Embarkation Parade

RSM. Herb E. Fournier, 32, youngest regimental sergeant-major in the Canadian army, calls his men for their final parade before leaving Canada for Korea. His unit, the 81st Field regiment, Royal Canadian Artillery, left its training ground at Petawawa, Ont., to join the 25th Infantry Brigade in Korea. RSM. Fournier has been in uniform since he was nine, when he signed on as a bugler in a militia reserve unit in his native Kingston, Ont. He joined the permanent army artillery at 14. — (CP Photo.)

Canadians Tourist Spending Jumps To $336,000,000

OTTAWA (CP)—With all government financial barriers eliminated, the Canadian tourist dollar raced out of Canada in 1952 at the fastest pace in history, leaving the rate of foreign tourists spending in Canada far behind.

The result was a terrific boost in an unusual deficit in Canada's international tourist account, leaping to $60,000,000 in 1952 from $6,000,000 in 1951, the bureau of statistics reports.

These were the first deficits in Canada's tourist history and compared with such surpluses as $49,000,000 in 1950, $62,000,000 in 1949 and a peak of $145,000,000 in 1948.

Big factors in the historical reversal were the high level of Canadian prosperity, the Canadian liking for American holiday spots, lifting of government travel restrictions in 1951, and the jump in the value of the Canadian dollar on foreign exchange markets.

For the first time, too, Canada's neighbor with a population of with a population of less than 15,000,000 dropped more tourist dollars in the U.S. in 1952 than did visitors to Canada from her southabout 180,000,000.

Total Canadian tourist spending in the U.S. and other countries jumped to a record $336,000,000 last year, up $56,000,000 from $280,000,000 in 1951 and more than quadrupled from the 1939 total of $81,000,000.

Spending in Canada by foreign visitors increased only $2,000,000 to $278,000,000 from $274,000,000 in 1951, but still below the peak of $285,000,000 in 1949.

Most of Canada's tourist dollars swept into American pockets, but spending overseas was up, too. Canadians dropped a record $294,000,000 in the U.S., a jump from $246,000,000 in 1951, but the total American spending in Canada remained unchanged at the 1951 level of $258,000,000.

One Man Killed, Three Injured In Collision

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—One man was killed and three others were injured in a car-truck collision at Ilderton sideroad and No. 4 highway Tuesday.

Police said Cloutier was driver and the other three passengers in the car which was southbound on No. 4 and in collision with the heavy van driven east on the sideroad by Walter Hoope, 35, of Indianapolis, Ind. Hoops was uninjured.

Slovak Society States Opposition To Communism

PORT COLBORNE (CP)—The supreme assembly of the Canadian Slovak Benefit Society, holding its annual meeting, recorded its opposition to Communism and its stand "on the side of our democratic form of government here in Canada."

The assembly represents 63 adult branches and 22 juvenile centres across Canada. Members attending the meeting include: president John Lipovsky, Port Colborne; Joseph Ustupsky, Sarnia; Andrew Regjar and Michael Martan, Timmins.

Smith Subpoenaed

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Cecil Smith was subpoenaed Tuesday to appear before the police commission Thursday to elaborate on charges he made last week that he was the victim of a "police shakedown."

Smith said Monday he would not appear voluntarily but would testify if subpoenaed and given protection of the court under the Canada Evidence Act. He said his police record shows 87 convictions during the last 30 years and he felt certain elements of his testimony would involve him in criminal charges.

Crown attorney Bruce J. S. Macdonald, a member of the commission, said Smith will be granted such protection.

83,246 Houses Started in 1952 Says Minister

Annual report of the Crown-owned Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, tabled Tuesday in the Commons by Resources Minister Winters, disclosed there were 83,246 houses started in 1952 compared with 68,378 in 1951. The 1952 rate was about par with that for 1950.

Greater availability of mortgage money, materials and labor were given as reasons for the increased construction activity last year. Stable prices also were cited as a factor.

The corporation said "there is reason to believe that this high level of starts may continue into the year 1953." But it warned that availability of mortgage money and of serviced land "will become increasingly important as a brake upon house building at higher levels."

New Farm Union Urges Production

ORANGEVILLE (CP)—The Ontario Farmers' Union, organized last December on the lines of similar groups in the Prairie provinces and now claiming a membership of 2,500, came out Tuesday in favor of all-out farm production.

The OFU at its first annual meeting announced that Communists were barred from its ranks; asked a delegation to seek a public inquiry by the provincial government into the effect of imitation dairy products; and for further executive action resolution on the subject of gasoline tax rebates for farmers; called for all-out production to feed the hungry; named its first complete slate of officers and echoed many of the views of other farm organizations.

Malan Expected to Retire From Office Even if He Wins Next General Election

By ASTLEY HAWKINS

PRETORIA (Reuters) — South Africa expects to see a new prime minister come to power soon whichever way the general elections go April 15.

Dr. Daniel Francois Malan, 78, leader of the ruling Nationalists party, is considered likely to retire from office before the end of another five-year term if the country re-elects his government.

Nationalist followers are confident of returning Malan to office. But they are not so sure that he could be expected to carry the administrative and political burdens of the country another five years.

Their guess is that Malan, with his party and policies safely returned to authority, would step down in favor of either his finance minister, Nicholas Christian Havenga, 70, or the Nationalists' "strong man," Johannes Gerhardus Strydom, 59, minister of lands.

Helped Elect Malan

Havenga, as leader of the now defunct Afrikaner party, helped the Nationalist party put Malan into power in the 1948 elections and could reasonably inherit the government leadership.

Strydom, leader of the Nationalist party in the important Transvaal province, would be the choice of supporters who already talk of him as "the first president" of their proposed South African republic.

Some observers here feel Strydom's supporters could not long remain patient with the leadership of Havenga whose political career is based on firm respect for the South African constitution.

Extreme Nationalists cast doubt on the legality of parts of the constitution.

Dr. Theophilus Ebenhaezer Donges, 52, Malan's interior minister, was once considered their presumptive to the prime minister. But his chances were dimmed by the failure of the Nationalists' plan to turn Parliament into a "high court" to override "test case" decisions.

Fist of Stormy Bills

Precedence might now be given to the key figure of the last pre-election parliamentary session, the 6-foot, 7-inch justice minister, Charles Robberts Swart who has piloted through some of the most controversial legislation ever debated in the South African Parliament.

Two new bills aimed at combatting native defiance of segregation laws wrote Swart's name across the world's newspapers early this year.

Strauss, one-time private secretary of Field Marshal Jan Smuts who promoted his political career, was for the last five years, been criticizing the Nationalists for their "unconstitutional" methods.

Under him, his followers say, South Africa might find a less explosive compromise in the racial crisis and regain some of its lost prestige abroad. But some doubt his powers as a rallying figure against the Nationalists.

Two New Politicians

One name often mentioned with the future of the United party is Sir De Villiers Graaff, 39-year-old lawyer and farmer who spent most of the Second World War in an Italian prison camp after being captured at Tobruk. An Oxford university graduate, he has quickly got a promising political figure since entering Parliament in 1948.

Also supporting the United party is Group Capt. A. G. Malan, an fighter pilot of the Second World War, who now leads the Torch Commando, an independent organization founded by ex-servicemen to get the Nationalists out of office.

North America Fast Winning Race Against Time

OTTAWA (CP)—An official statement indicated Tuesday that North America is fast winning its race against time in setting up a radar shield.

Its implications were that 90 per cent of the construction work on the joint Canadian-American network in Canada is finished.

The statement didn't, however, embrace the really vital part of the network—the electronic apparatus that would search out hostile planes that might transgress.

It was given to the Commons defence committee by R. G. Johnson, president of the government's Defence Construction Ltd., which does general construction work for the defence department.

"We have negotiated and supervised a number of projects being constructed for the account of the U.S. government. These contracts, which are all on a cost-plus-fixed fee basis, are now approximately 90 per cent complete."

There was little doubt that his reference was to the U.S. radar stations being built on Canadian soil and the indications are that Canadian stations are even farther advanced in general construction.

There is no public indication, however, as to how far advanced the installation of radar gear is but the RCAF has said the network should be fully or largely in operation late this year.

Color Television Available Now But Few Sets Can Receive It

WASHINGTON (AP)—The president of the Columbia Broadcasting System said today the question of color television has everybody puzzled and that it's up to the federal communications commission to "get this question settled once and for all at the earliest possible moment."

The statement was made by Dr. Frank Stanton, called before the House of Representatives commerce committee as part of its inquiry into why color TV is being kept off the market.

The communications commission already has approved the CBS color television system, but Stanton said filings are so much up in the air that it would be "wholly unrealistic" for his company to go ahead with color telecasts and the manufacture of color TV sets.

A partial government ban on the manufacture of color television sets is expected to be lifted soon, perhaps even today. The national production authority was meeting to consider taking such action.

Under the CBS system, color telecasts could not be received in black and white on sets now in use. This is called "incompatible."

If NBA lifts the ban, manufacture of CBS system sets could begin at once.

The situation is clouded, however, because the Radio Corporation of America says it has developed a "compatible" system, one in which color telecasts could be received in black and white on ordinary sets.

"QUALITY AT FAIR PRICES"

Combining His Ties With Shirts Simple, Says Tie Foundation

Neckwear is more important than ever in the spring fashion picture with the revival of colored shirts in stripes, checks tern in suits, shirts and ties poses and plaids for business wear. Co-ordinating color and pattern a new problem for the average shopper.

What to wear with what is the question.

"Some basic rules in assembling fancy shirts and suits with ties so the connecting link are 'pointed out by the Men's Tie Foundation.

The suit is the basic unit of a wardrobe. Use it as a guide in selecting shirts and ties.

Fancy shirt colors can be matched or contrasted to the s. If the shirt is matched to the suit color (blue shirt, blue suit) pick the tie color to contrast or highlight the suit and shirt color. If the shirt is constrasted (grey shirt blue suit pick up the suit color as the principal color accent in the tie.

Try to avoid small patterned ties with checked shirts, the Foundation suggests. They tend t. give too "busy" an appearance to a checked shirt. Wear, instead, to a checked shirt. Wear, instead, to a checked shirt. Wear, instead,

Variety Is Spice Of Sportswear

Many an otherwise conservative man welcomes the opportunity to give full sway to his flair for color and his urge to individuality in variety in the choice of his sports wear. This Spring, he will find the sports wear style stage lavishly set with a bright array of styles and colors to spur his imagination and give wide scope to his tastes.

Gayer and lighter in tone are the colors featured in the new Spring sports coats, which present a fascinating variety of fabric patterns, including plaids, checks, stripes and herringbones.

Favored among the fabrics are soft, lightweight tweeds, shetlands and cheviots, together with woollens and worsteds with strong surface interest. This is achieved by the use of slubs and nubs which create an impression of depth in the cloth and enhance the richness of the color effects.

Adding to the attractiveness of the Spring fabrics picture are the specialty fibres, notably cashmere and mohair, which come both alone and in blends with wool which create completely new fabrics. The orions, dacrons and other man-made fibres with wool are looming large on the style scene.

New Style Profiles

Among the new styles bowing in for Spring is the one-button sports coat model. Created in California, this newcomer is reported due to give the more conventional two- and three-button models a strong run for top honors.

Style touches that will identify the new sports coats as "definitely 1953" are the ticket pocket, side vents, pleated back and leather-covered buttons.

Fancy waistcoats will continue to grow in popularity this Spring. Tattersalls will lead by a wide margin. Plaids and solid colors and tartans will also be frequently seen, along with some striped reps and checks.

As to slacks, flannel will continue to share honors with wool gabardine in the top-favorite brushed, with the various man-made fibres and blends sure to claim a healthy slice of the market. Many new and novelty fabrics, such as cotton sharkskins (cool, light, yet tough and durable), chambrays, denims and lightweight pure silks will add to the diversity of the fabrics line-up.

Sweaters Colorful

For active sports, the always popular pullover will feature a wide variety of designs, including diagonal stripes and multi-colored patterns of Scandinavian flavor together with diamond patterns, hunting themes and other novelty effects. As usual, solid colors will continue in strong favor in the pullovers.

Wool fabrics will retain their popularity with sports participants, even in the warmest weather. Because the wool fibre can absorb 30 per cent of its weight, without feeling damp, it tends to eliminate unpleasant "clammyness" when a man perspires.

The sleeveless sweater will be offered in both pullover and button-front versions. Sweaters-vests will feature plaids, tattersall checks and small stripes.

The lighter Spring shades — tan, yellow, soft gray, light blue, light green and medium red — will be widely seen in sleeveless and full-sleeved pullovers as well as in cardigans and turtle-neck models.

Patterns Come Out On Men's Rainwear

The news in men's rainwear, for Spring, are the patterns adopted by otherwise conservative styles.

Tweedy motifs, glen plaids and small checks can all be expected to be seen with increasing popularity on stormy weather days.

These patterns will be featured on such classic rainwear styles as the coat with set-in sleeves and a fly front. Often this style is designed with a zip-in lining that makes it adaptable for wear through all seasons of the year.

Other raincoat styles featured for Spring, include the belted military trench coat; raglan shoulder button-through models and fly front coats with raglan shoulders.

He signals style for Spring in a two-button model in light brown all-wool flannel with closely placed dark brown hairline stripes. Suggested by Wool Bureau.

Brighter clothes for men are a Spring certainty. Indicative of the trend is this handsome topcoat of a grey-beige all-wool tweed with many nubs of clear yellow. The full-cut coat has raglan sleeves and the new balmacaan collar. Suggested by Wool Bureau.

Hats Go Lighter In Tone, Weight

Because of the deft styling and the appealing softness of lines which the designers have put into men's hats for this Spring, it begins to look as if the "1953 Easter Parade" may well turn out to be a "Men's Hat Parade."

Narrower brims and smaller, more tapered brims will be prevalent. Bright, smartly patterned bands will give hats an extra dash of color and style. Subtle color treatments are adroitly blended with the new lighter color tones.

Traditional favorite of young men all over the country is the telescope model, but sure to go places this Spring. It is considered perfect for the youthful face because it never gives that "too much hat" look that young men dislike.

Shoes Accent Cool Comfort Lighter Weight

Soft, informal shoes take on new appeal with foam, crepe-type soles. They are available in lined and unlined soft, glove-like leathers with "spineless" designs, without counters or toe boxing, in casual styles ranging from moccasins to slip-ons and ties.

Such new designs, as the Envelope Fold, that has a smooth unseamed look from toe to tongue; the Tobacco Pouch, on hand with a variety of soles and detailed with a drawstring around the plug; and the Tassel Oxford, a sophisticated version of the moccasin, place their styling accent on comfort and simplicity.

Leathers, too, emphasize cool comfort. For this season, mesh is much in evidence combined with smooth leathers. Soft, brushed leathers and leathers with reptile prints, like simulated ostrich prints, are also abundant. And for warmer weather days, there are many all fabric shoes to be had, such as linens and denims as well as fabrics combined with leathers.

Unusual styling details presented for Spring include colored weltings, often matched by the facing, and brushed leather laced oxfords in bright colors like rust. Often these brushed leather oxfords are trimmed with reptile prints or smooth leathers and come in matching colors or contrasting tones, such as cream beige with brown, grey with black or even red with maroon trim.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

TOUGH ONE!

A sticky ice surface — a goal that punctured the seal-net, but was disallowed—a lacksadaisical first-period display and a frenzied third-period effort that was "too little and too late", mixed with some borderline officiating, and you have the story of the Hawks' defeat in Dixie last night.

The Hawks were down 4-0 at the end of the first period and at this point they lost the services of Ross Hermiston, whose leg gave out and he was through for the game. They scored one in the second and had the Dixies 4-2 shortly after the third period opened. But the Flashers flashed back with two goals to make the count 6-2 and then the Hawks took over. They suddenly found their stride and had the Dixie pervaders on seat edge with their speed and trickiness. They slammed home three goals, two of 'em in 29 seconds, but they couldn't come up with the needed pair to win.

The Hawks claimed a puck bored through the centre of the net and even the Dixie goal-judge flashed his light. Came the argument but it was no soap. Fair-minded Dixie fans agreed with the Hawks that the goal was scored.

But the Hawks came up with one of their poorer displays in the first heat and thereby hangs the story. The teams are back here on Saturday night, and the Hawks won't be fooling. The sixth game will be played in Dixie next Monday.

TRENT VALLEY HOCKEY

The Trent Valley Hockey League, which claims the honor of being the oldest district loop extant, is once again tossing the populace of two centres into near-frenzied excitement as two teams battle for the honor and glory of championship and the Bata Trophy.

From more or less close observation, the league has had a successful season, despite the fact the weather man turned nary but a friendly countenance on its operations for a greater part of the season.

At the moment Campbellford and Wellington, northern and southern division champions respectively, are engaged in a battle for titular honors that is not only producing near "season-busting" crowds in Memorial Arena but also the best brand of hockey seen in Valley playoffs in years.

If the series goes the full seven-game route, observers estimate over 9,000 fans from Wellington and Campbellford and the district will have witnessed the struggles.

The highlight of these battles thus far, and there is no reason why it should not continue, is the sincerity and boisterousness of the hometown fans of the squads. The arena shudders, rocks and creaks with the roars of the faithful every time a goal is scored or a "near miss" occurs. Even an occasional fisticuffing exhibition breaks out among some of the visiting firemen but generally there is little damage done.

At the same time it's "a wise head that keeps a still tongue," especially if your location in the rink is among those of supporters of the opposition. In the heat of battle you're liable to lose a hat, a few molars, or have your shins barked. And the "knock-off" is just as liable to come from a member of the fair sex as well as the other. For the gals, believe us, take their hockey just as seriously as do the ordinary males.

The titular series opened on Tuesday night with the Greenshirts of Campbellford, being returned the winners by an 8-4 score. Tonight the teams resume hostilities and a hard-fought battle is predicted with the Dukes of Wellington going all out to hand a Waterloo decision to "Admiral Nelson" and his merry men of the Campbellford navy.

TWO CONCLAVES TONIGHT

Tonight two important meetings get under way with the Belleville Minor Baseball Association holding forth at Zimmerman's Centre at 7.30 and the Belleville District Softball Association sitting at a special conclave in the city hall council chambers starting at eight o'clock. All this and hockey, too.

President "Cy" Barriage, of the softball laddybucks, said today he was sorry his meeting clashed with the minor baseball get-together, but tonight was the only date he could get the meeting locale.

It is hoped that enthusiasts of both sports will attend their respective confabs in goodly numbers. Both meetings are important affairs, and will have more than a passing bearing on the success of the season's activities.

Phil Watson Suspension, Fine Said Reason for Withdrawal; Will Play for Memorial Cup

MONTREAL (CP)—The running fight between the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and its suspended Quebec branch — simmering for some time—flared anew with the announcement of the withdrawal of Quebec Citadelles junior hockey team from the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association.

Frank Byrne, Citadelles' owner, announced Wednesday the Citadelles have returned to the CAHA fold and been given a berth in the Memorial Cup sectional playoffs.

George Dudley, secretary-manager of the CAHA, said at Midland, Ont., the Quebec team had been reinstated and will meet the winner of the current Memorial Cup playdown between Timmins-Porcupine Combines and Northside Franklins. They are champions of the Northern Ontario and Manitoba districts respectively.

The withdrawal by the Citadelles came in the midst of their Quebec junior-senior series with Montreal Canadiens. Quebec leads the best-of-nine series 5-1.

President Martin Conway of the QAHA says he has not been officially advised of the withdrawal. Byrne said he made the application for reinstatement to Mr. Dudley said it had been made "some days ago." Conway says he will suspend the Citadelles from the QAHA when he is notified of the withdrawal of the team.

The Quebec decision to withdraw followed closely a two-game suspension and $200 fine levied on Citadelles' coach Phil Watson by the QAHA following a ruckus in the last game of the junior series last Sunday.

Byrne said he is 'not interested in junior hockey after this season, and said he thought Conway was "unfair" in suspending Watson and calling for a "peace bond."

Wings Seek Playoff Records In Game With Bruins Tonight

By the CANADIAN PRESS

The Stanley Cup playoffs have barely started, but Detroit Red Wings are back at their old habit of rewriting the National Hockey League record book.

The Wings entertain Boston Bruins tonight in the second game of a best-of-seven semi-final, with a 7-0 victory under their belts and two NHL marks within their grasp.

At Montreal, the Canadiens will take on Chicago Black Hawks, whom they edged 3-1 in the opener of their best-of-seven set Tuesday, but both clubs will settle for a victory in that series.

Two Marks

For Detroit, a shutout over the Bruins would establish two records — a 10-game playoff winning streak and a string of four playoff shutouts for goalie Terry Sawchuk.

The Wings started both streaks last spring, when they walloped to the tune with a minimum eight-game effort against Toronto Maple Leafs and the Canadiens. Sawchuk blanked the Montrealers in the last two games of the five-game third whitewash at the Bruins' expense Tuesday.

That leaves Terry tied with Frank McCool, now a Calgary sports writer, who blanked the Wings three times in a row in 1945 to gain the Leafs in a Stanley Cup victory. The Wings already have wrested the record for consecutive playoff victories from the 1946 Canadiens, who ran up eight straight.

The Bruins, with a record of just two wins in 15 meetings with Detroit this season, hope to stage a comeback similar to the scare they threw into the Canadiens last season when they forced the favored Montrealers to seven games after dropping the first two.

At Montreal both clubs took things easy Wednesday. Canadien coach Dick Irvin gave his regulars the day off while Sid Abel put the Hawks through a light skating drill. Both clubs reported themselves free of injuries for the second game.

Tosses Out Foe Players

KITCHENER (CP)—Coach Maxie Silverman of Sudbury Wolves had spectators ejected from the Waterloo Arena Wednesday as the Wolves went through an hour's workout. They included two members of the Kitchener - Waterloo Dutchmen. The workout was in preparation for tonight's opening of the all-Ontario senior hockey finals here.

Silverman declined to predict the outcome, but said his team will make a real showing.

The Wolves play here tonight and Friday night and return home for three games next week.

'Early Mist' Favored For Grand National

LONDON (AP)—Early Mist, an eight-year-old to be ridden by one of England's top jockeys, remained a slight favorite Wednesday for Saturday's running of the Grand National steeplechase at Aintree.

The jumper is a 100-9 shot in a field expected to number 37. He will carry 158 pounds and will be ridden by Bryan Marshall.

Meanwhile, owners and trainers continued to show concern over the condition of the famous two-mile course, baked hard by five weeks of dry weather. Trainers fear it will split a horse's hoof or jar loose his shoes after a jump.

Kid Line Sparks Manitoba Jrs.

By AL VICKERY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

ST. BONIFACE, Man. (CP)—Three kids playing their first season of junior hockey may be the difference in St. Boniface Canadiens losing the Memorial Cup or just also-rans.

The line, centre Cece Hoekstra and wingers Don Poole and Al McDonald, provided the spark which gave Canadiens their first Manitoba junior championship since 1938.

Canadiens open their best-of-seven Western semi-finals at the Lakehead tonight against Fort William Canadiens, Thunder Bay champions. Both clubs are farm teams of Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League.

The Manitoba champions are packed with three and four-year juniors, who have taken a new lease on life while playing with the kid line.

The line finished one-two-three in the individual scoring in the Manitoba Juvenile League in 1951-52, the first time the kids played as a unit.

McDonald topped the juvenile scoring with 35 points in 20 games, Hoekstra was second with 30 and Kosyk third with 28.

Barrie Flyers Oust Toronto Marlies; St. Mikes Defeat Galt for 3-1 Lead

By the CANADIAN PRESS

It would have to be seen to be believed.

The final buzzer sounded in the Barrie Arena Wednesday, Toronto Marlboros lost the game 6-3 and their best-of-nine semi-finals of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series with Barrie Flyers on the ice ice strode Staff Smythe, Marlies' manager, grinning from ear to ear, to shake the hand of Flyer coach Hap Emms.

It was an awful site; two bitter hockey enemies giving each other the glad hand. But it was the sporting thing to do, and the partisan Barrie fans were pleased that the feud ended that way.

The two ice warriors crossed swords as soon as the 1953-54 season began and the tempo of the battle increased as the schedule ran its course. Marlboros appeared to have the edge for most of the season but in the late stages the Flyers dusted up the point ladder and finally booted the Toronto Juniors off the top perch in the final standings.

The semi-final series, originally set at a best-of-seven, but later extended to a best-of-nine, opened March 4 with a 2-1 victory for Barrie. Marlies won the second 3-1 in overtime, but the Flyers blanked the Toronto lads 4-0. The Marlies took the series 2-2 in the fourth game with a 6-3 win and then the Flyers took over second three straight triumphs, 1-0, 3-2 and finally 6-3.

Emms can give his boys a rest until the best-of-seven semi-finals between Toronto St. Michael's and Galt Black Hawks is decided. The Collegians downed the Hawks 9-3 Wednesday night to take a 3-1 lead in the series, with one game tied.

Barrie scorers Wednesday night were Ove Tessier, second leading scorer in the league, Tony Poeta, Don McKenny, Johnny Marian, Doug Mohns and Skip Teal. Bill McCreary, Charlie Burns and Louis Bende counted for the Marlies.

Jack Caffery, St. Mikes centre, paced the Irish with three goals and two assists, Les and Dick Duff each picked up pair and the others went to Paul Knox and Butch Ratchford, Frank Bonello, Hec Lalonde and Pete Kawalchuk scored for Galt.

St. Mikes travel to Galt Friday for the sixth game, Saturday they return to Toronto.

Araujo Whips Teddy Davis

CLEVELAND, O. (AP)—George Araujo kept himself in line for a promised lightweight title shot by winning a unanimous 10-round decision over outclassed and bleeding Teddy Davis in a nationally-televised bout Wednesday night.

Fave Tony La Branch scored it 7-2-1, Judge Herb Williams 8-2 and Judge Charlie Bill 7-3, all in favor of Araujo.

Dixie Flyers Edge Hawks 6-5 To Even Junior B Series At 2 Games Each

Spot Foemen Four in First But 3rd Period Rally Too Late In Rugged 18-Penalty Game

By CLAUDE D. TICE

A disputed goal, which would have favored the Hawks, a complete reversal of form from the middle of the second period to the final bell, was not enough for the Belleville Black Hawks to pull the game out of the fire in Dixie last night. The Flashers tied series at two games each in the junior "B" semi-finals by winning 6-5. The fifth game of the series will be played in the Memorial Arena on Saturday night with the sixth back in Dixie on Monday evening, if the two teams are tied at that time the seventh and deciding game will be played next Wednesday in this city.

Last night the period scores were 4-0 for the opposition, the Hawks scored their only goal in the middle frame and then swarmed all over their opposition to knock in four tallies, sandwiched in between two by the Flashers. In a desperate attempt to pull the game out of the fire, Don Barrett, coach of the Hawks, pulled Barclay from the twine with a minute to go and the crowd at the command act on the edge of their seats for the remainder of the game's duration's end. The Hawks secured the draw and the win, but not either but in the scramble he missed the open net and that was the end.

Ontario Champion

Disputed Goal

Minutes before this occurrence, the Hawks, battling for the tying goal, were robbed of it by the officials. Halstead, who played his heart out in the final ten minutes, netted the red light went on by the goal judge supposedly for high stick, but the officials said no goal. From the press box it looked as if there was a hole in the net, hit the backboard and rolled to the side of the net. The referee's was on and every member of the local dress argued long and loud for the allowance of the marker but it was to no avail.

In the first period, the Hawks looked very bad. They did not skate, they did not backcheck, and they did not cover up inside their own blueline. Instead of trying to dump the puck out of their own end, they tried to stickhandle it right out, but the loss, in poor condition, did not warrant this type of play with the result the boys were continually trapped and Barclay was set up time and time on the four that beat him. Incidentally "The Turk" had them in the game in the first frame. He made a number of good saves and all off from close in, and many times the shots on his citadel were screened. In the second frame the type of play was changed, the Hawks began to skate, and the series has shown so far, that the locals can outskate the Flashers, took the play away from the opposition and although only one goal was scored, the Hawks had a distinct advantage. In the third period they regrouped all over the Flashers and Therrien's goal in the first five seconds lit the fire. A double penalty hurt and the Dixie boys scored two, which put the game further away but the Hawks again came back to take advantage of opposition penalties and scored three without a return and were pressing on end.

The eighteen penalties, evenly divided, were all of a minor nature and were rather chippy for an important game. The officials ruled sternly in some instances and then threw the book out the window on others. Therrien was the high marksman for the locals with two markers, while Jacklin, Hall and Gilmour netted the others. Casey, Gover, Jones and Halstead with two were the assisters on the markers, Gordaneer and W. Webster were high for the winners with two tallies each. Bancardo and Reynolds getting the others.

Ice Was Sticky

The ice was soft and sticky and mitigated against the wizardry of Jacklin, Therrien, Gilmour, Gover and others. These boys are all good stickhandlers and their type of particularly overtaking the rubber and the Flashers took advantage of every minute, especially in the first frame. The Hawks can win the series but they must display the type of play they exhibited in the last thirty-five minutes of the game to come out on top. The team have more cohesion, better plays and are as well coached, but they must maintain top speed from bell to bell.

There is no doubt if the disputed goal had been given in their favor they would have won the contest and wrapped up the series on Saturday night, because the Flashers were fading fast and the fans were about ready to pour

Refuses Judgment Against 'Sugar'

CHICAGO (AP)—A federal judge refused Wednesday to enter a default judgment against Sugar Ray Robinson, former middleweight boxing champion, in a $300,000 antitrust suit.

Judge Philip L. Sullivan declined to rule on the motion pending learning the boxer had made a deposition sought for several weeks.

The suit against Robinson and 11 other defendants, including the International Boxing Club, Inc., was brought by Barney Feller of Cincinnati.

In addition to damages Feller seeks an injunction to prevent the defendants from what he alleged is the monopolization of the presentation of title boxing bouts and contracts for televising the bouts.

Feller's suit stated that he had been hired by the Foundation for Boxing, Inc., a Cincinnati civic organization, to promote a benefit fight in September, 1951, between Robinson and Rocky Graziano, another defendant. Feller alleged the IBC halted the match.

Blackpool, Bolton Cup Finalists Both Beaten

LONDON (Reuters)—Blackpool and Bolton Wanderers, who will meet in the finals for the Football Association Cup in May, both lost home games in the league schedule Wednesday.

After a hard-fought win in the Cup semi-finals Saturday, Blackpool went down by the only goal of the game, scored by Cardiff City. Bolton, lacking its international centre-forward, Nat Lofthouse, suffered a 5-0 trouncing from Preston North End.

Preston's win from the team to the top of the first division table. They are level on points with Wolverhampton Wanderers but have a better goal average.

Tottenham Hotspurs and Everton, defeated Cup semi-finalists, also failed to win. Manchester United polished off Tottenham 3-2 and Everton fought Fulham to a 3-3 draw.

Hornets Sting Hershey Bears

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A third-period goal by Bob Solinger gave Pittsburgh Hornets a 2-1 victory over Hershey Bears Wednesday night as the Hornets opened defence of their Calder Cup championship of the American Hockey League.

Pittsburgh tallied first as Chuck Blair slipped a 25-foot shot past the net while Hershey's Lorne Ferris was in the penalty box.

The winner of the Pittsburgh-Hershey series will play a best-of-seven series with the victor of the series between Cleveland and Syracuse.

Applies For Junior Franchise

QUEBEC (CP)—Jack Latter, president of Quebec Aces, said Wednesday he applied late last year for a franchise in the Quebec Junior International Hockey Association primarily to develop players for his Quebec Senior Hockey League club.

The application is expected to be opposed by Frank Byrne, owner of Quebec Citadelles, Quebec junior team.

Latter said he felt there was room for two clubs here provided both gave good hockey to the fans.

Sport in Brief

OSLO (CP)—Some fans and sports writers here think the Russians may be the best hockey players in the world. The Canadians, they say, run a good second.

The question of whether the Russians are better players than Canadians is being strongly debated here since a Russian all-star team has trounced Norway's national team, 10-2 and 8-0.

The Russians defeated Norway 7-0 and 5-1 in Moscow earlier this month.

The sports writers agree the Russians are playing a game totally different from most West European and North American teams.

They are technically skilled players but don't go much for body-blocking. Their passes are always accurate.

Hockey has been played in Russia for only six years. The Russians stick close to the rules.

While the general practice in western countries is to rely on physical strength as well as technical skill, the Russians don't go in much for the rougher tactics.

Some writers feel the rougher Canadian would break up the Russians' game and crush them by sheer force. But there are others who think the Russians might be too smart.

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP)—The Eastern Canada Memorial Cup semi-finals between Timmins-Porcupine Combines and Northside-Frankling will be completed in Cape Breton. Combines won the first game of the best-of-seven series. The next one and is to be played tonight and Thursday. The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association agreed to the games being played in Cape Breton rather than switching to a Combines site as first planned.

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Interprovincial Football Union announced Wednesday the signing of Tom Stolhandske, University of Texas all-American end. The 21-year-old Stolhandske was the No. 1 draft choice of San Francisco 49'ers of the National Football League and has established himself as a great pass catcher.

VANCOUVER (CP)—The provincial government has given a big boost to the British Empire Games to be held here in 1954. Before the government fell in a House vote Tuesday, the cabinet approved two extra days for the Games, one this year—Coronation Day June 2 and Aug. 4—with all profits to go to the general games fund.

LINCOLN, R.I. (AP)—Fritz H. Becker of Phoenix, Ariz., trainer of the three-year-old colt, Who Knows, which won the fourth race at Lincoln Downs Monday was suspended Wednesday. A report of the mesma I'll have two comparatively-weak outfield spots with Henry in centre and Don Mueller in right.

"I've just got to wait and see. If Davey Williams' back comes around it looks as though we'll say—that I'll play him at second, Al Dark at short and my rookie, Daryl Spencer, at third. That's my lineup today, but you'll notice that Hank Thompson is still in playing centre."

Likes Tight Infield

A few moments later this no longer was the case. Manager Ferris Fain, the Chicago White Sox new first-baseman, threw a jolting block into Williams to break up a potential double-play at second and hurt the little guy's back all over again. He was replaced by Nanny Sanford, and the next time Fain came to bat—he nearly had his head taken off by one of pitcher Dave Koslo's fast balls. Anyhow, to continue with Durocher's troubles:

"Those two days of rain in San Francisco last week set us back badly. We were just rounding into shape and I was able at least to see what some of my boys could do. Now I've got to change all my training routine and it will take another two weeks to get back where we were."

'Lip' Is Amoanin These Pre-Season Days 'Pennant a Pip if We Have Willie Mays'

By GAYLE TALBOT

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—"If the army and let me have Willie Mays back," said manager Leo Durocher of New York Giants, "I would have been ready right now to tell you we would win the pennant. I would have been willing to put it down on paper. Now I just don't know."

The game's loudest manager was trying, as best he could, to explain why problems are now facing him following together a line-up which will stand the best chance of overhauling Brooklyn in the coming National League race. He put his cards on the table.

"With Willie in centrefield we would have been all set," he said.

"Bob Thomson likes to play third base better than centre, and he's his better when he's there. I'm still going to try to keep him there and play Henry Thompson in centre."

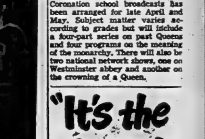
It was suggested to Leo that his pitchers preferred to have the best flychaser available out there in the open spaces.

"Nuts to that," he said. "Pitchers also like to have a good man at third, a tall, rangy fellow like Bobby who can knock down those drives and field those bunts. I want myself a tight infield, even if it

Goodies, Oshawa Series All Even

Flying along at the peak of their form, the Kingston Goodypears defeated Oshawa Truckers -2 to square their senior 'B' group finals at three games each. The game was played in Oshawa last night. The seventh and deciding game is scheduled for the Kingston Community Centre on Saturday night.

The Goodyears flashed back in more or less sensational style to smash through for two straight victories after trailing the series 3-1.



NAVIGATION OPENS

OWEN SOUND (CP)—The Sir Thomas Shaughnessy opened the 1953 navigation season here Wednesday when she docked at the Lakehead. The Shaughnessy, always one of the first lake freighters to clear from this harbor, is commanded by Capt. A. R. Irvine. The vessel is owned by the Mohawk Navigation Company Limited.

PLAN SCHOOL BROADCASTS

TORONTO (CP)—Education Minister Dunlop announced Wednesday that a special series of pre-Coronation school broadcasts has been arranged for late April and May. Subject matter varies according to grades but will include a four-part series on past Queens and four programs on the meaning of the monarchy. There will also be two national network shows, one on Westminster Abbey and another on the crowning of a Queen.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Her name is Jocelyn Brando, and she's the sister of the much-publicized Marlon. Here for her first movie role, as Glenn Ford's murdered wife in "The Big Heat," she has firm words in defence of her brother.

"Marlon is a fine actor and a very interesting person," she remarked between movie scenes. "I would like him as a good friend, even if he weren't my brother. As a matter of fact, we are good friends."

Really Not Sloppy

"That's why I get so mad at some of the things I read about him. His clothes, for example. He's not as sloppy as he is made out to be.

"Since he has become a star, he dresses much better."

After a shaky start, Miss Brando is beginning to like the experience of making movies. She was the first in the family to go on the stage, Marlon following her example when his attempts at schooling and other work failed. Her first role was in a show called "The Cross," which lasted all of a week on Broadway.

Stage Understudy

Her first lengthy run was in "Candida," but the engagement had its drawbacks. She was understudy to Dorothy McGuire, and the star was blessed with unfailing health.

Jocelyn finally got a chance to go onstage, but not to replace Miss McGuire. Producer Harry Kleiner, buying the mother role, fell ill. The actress playing the sister took over, and Jocelyn portrayed the sister. Jocelyn was about a foot shorter than the actress she replaced, and Miss McGuire giggled because of it all through the performance.

Miss Brando's next big part was in the movies, the only woman in "Mister Roberts." She said she didn't seem too out of place, since the stage manager and the goat in the show were also female.

AT THE DRIVE-IN

"Fort Defiance" in Technicolor

Ben Johnson, a Civil War veteran, comes west to kill Dane Clark because the latter deserted under fire and caused the annihilation of Ben's company. Arriving at Fort Defiance, Ben strikes up a friendship with a young rancher, Peter Graves, who is blind. Graves and Dane Clark are brothers. Then Ben is told Clark was killed while attempting a bank robbery. He goes into partnership with Graves on the ranch, but this harmonious life is threatened with the arrival of gunfighters led by Cray Woods, who also seek to kill Clark. Next Clark, not dead at all—returns, slays two of the gang and gets into a terrific fight with Ben. Subsequently Ben, Clark and Gene Eiglt of a Navajo attack; then, in a showdown battle with Woods, Clark and the gunfighters are all slain.

AT THE DRIVE-IN

"When in Rome"

A young parish priest Van Johnson, journeys to Rome during the Holy Year. His roommate on the voyage is Paul Douglas, a hardened criminal. To escape the law when the ship docks, Douglas steals Johnson's clothes, passport and money, and disguised as the priest journeys with other clerics to a monastery. Later Johnson encounters Douglas and tells him he must turn him over to the police despite his belief that no man is beyond salvation. Subsequently Douglas announces a plan to redeem himself by making a pilgrimage to four churches, and Johnson goes with him on the mission. They become separated, and Johnson unwittingly gives the police a clue to Douglas' whereabouts. Douglas eludes capture and Johnson finds him at a monastery where the convict has joined the order and is now a man of God.

LOCAL PROTESTS BAN

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Local 880, Teamsters, Mechanics, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen and Helpers Union passed a resolution Wednesday protesting the ban against colored magazine. The resolution, which was forwarded to Donald Brown, Liberal member of Parliament for Essex West, says the law barring yellow coloring in margarine was "unfair and unnecessary" and asked for its repeal. The local has 2,000 members.

AT THE McCARTHY — Dan Dailey and Diana Lynn are starred in International's Technicolor "Meet Me at the Fair". Two fantastic new hits highlight the new film directed by Douglas Sirk, now playing at the Odeon McCarthy Theatre.

Two more hearts were cashed, landing in dummy from where a spade was led. South finessed the jack and then ran three more spades on which dummy was able to dump a small diamond and two clubs.

South was now left with his two clubs, a diamond, and a spade. West clung to his club ace and his three highest diamonds. Dummy had his three best diamonds and club queen when south led his last spade.

West was squeezed. If he let go of his club ace, the south club king was good. So, west gave up a diamond. The south diamond was taken in dummy for three diamond tricks. Opponents got nothing.

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Against a small slam in no-trump it does not seem wise to start out with an opening lead of your only ace. After all, it looks like a good trick any time. But when you do not do so, it often happens that you live to regret it. As in this deal:

♥ Q 9 8 3
♦ A K 9 2
♣ Q 10 7

WEST
♠ 10 9
♥ J 7 6
♦ Q 10 7 6 4 3
♣ A 8

EAST
♠ Q 8 2
♥ 4
♦ J 8 5
♣ J 9 5 4 3 2

SOUTH
♦ 5
♣ K 6

South would be in a contract of five or six spades. In the bidding he can learn that opponents have an ace and a king. But an expert player would no doubt try a ruffing slam in spades anyway.

However, at least one of the duplicate teams in this match took chances with a bid of six no-trump. It would have been a tough contract with a diamond lead. Unlikely to make against proper defence.

But, west decided not to start out with an opening lead of his club ace. Or with a diamond that was bid by north. Or a spade that was bid by south. So, what was left?

He decided to master mind himself into the lead of a heart and chose the seven of that suit as his starting point. Whether or not this choice has any backers, it turned out bad for his side.

Dummy covered with the eightspot, east forced with the king, and south won with the ace. The ace of spades was cashed and a heart from south was finessed with dummy nine when west

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR FRIDAY, MARCH 21, 1952

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Fair outlook for you who work hard. Whether conditions are pleasing or not, a smile will dial advantageous ones that could upset possible gains.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Aspects suit now, well planned proportions. Be direct; don't allow little obstructions to hinder you.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Advantages will pop up all day. Be willing to exert for achievement. Your special talents are in demand. Promotion there!

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Propitious for business proclivities. Be definite; know what you are about and others will respect your say-so.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Stop, think! A practical philosophy is optimism plus reason. The optimist sees many possibilities that the pessimist often misses.

August 23 to September 22 (Virgo)—A day appropriate to set apart for outward expression of the fine inward faith and charity that characterizes the true Virgo native. Please do that.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Avoid drastic changes, unnecessary travel. Day tops for quiet activities, a personal check-up. Be mindful of health, family needs.

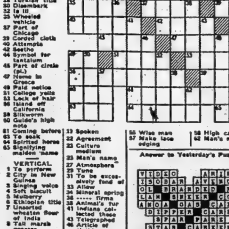
October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Be stress cautious, if you work with machinery, tools, in dangerous places. Be sure to take time to reflect on best possible course.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Instead of extremes, take sensible middle road and outcome will be adequate compensation. Accept others' foibles; traits with sensible tolerance.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn) — Encounter little difficulty if you don't carry a chip on your shoulder. It may be trying at times but common sense and decency command it.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Sensible planning and tactics now will keep you out of trouble later. Set aside freer hours for minor matters.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Practice is a must today. Avoid anxiety, overstrain; seek time for recreation, family, friends.



YOU BORN TODAY: your planet Mars is significant of force, ambition. You are usually on the positive side, able and a leader. You do well when in business on your own or teaching others. Avoid hasty decisions.

Search For a Hero

By Thomas Hal Phillips

XIII

The chief, Victor Wheeler, went with me the first day. He assigned me to mirror 33, bay 2ht out bar bells, dumbbells, kettle bells, iron boots, and a sewing bell, and showed nine exercises. "On Monday - Wednesday-Friday you do six exercises, Tuesday - Thursday - Saturday three. Heavy day, light day—see?"

I said I understood.

"Do each exercise in three series, 15 times to each series. You understand?"

"Yes."

"I pick 15 because that's divisible by five. Now don't count from one to 15 — that makes it a lot harder. Count: one-two-three-four-five . . . easier that way; slip up on yourself, that's the idea. Then make like you forgot one, make like you miscounted, and do an extra one. That'll be 16. Pretty soon you'll be doing 17, 18 . . . Got the idea?"

"I think I've got it."

"You know, you're not so bad except you're wide. And when you get through each time, go out and lie in the sun. But not too long. Did you know you could be court-martialed for getting too much sunburn? . Well, you can."

The room, Versailles, was in the basement of building G. It was a long room, rounded at one end, and in centre was a huge square column. On all sides of this column and on the walls of the room were three-by-five-foot mirrors, 49 of them.

The commander was always at mirror 38, until the middle of the second month when he missed a day. The following day he said, "You can't make progress if you miss training. Now yesterday — you'd think it wouldn't matter, but I can tell the difference. Everything feels two or three pounds heavier. But I couldn't get here yesterday. Sometimes it seems like things work exactly contrary to everything you're determined to do."

Some days we talked for 10 or 15 minutes; some days he never said a word. I always let him begin the conversation; but with bare feet, shorts, and naked belly rounding out, he never seemed to object.

* * *

The whole first week of September passed and I didn't see the commander. Then one day I was sitting at the small table, which was my desk, stapling sets of regulations for mess-cooks when the commander came down the hall and stopped in the doorway. In his neat khaki gabardines he looked quite distinguished, well proportioned, not at all like the man before mirror 38. I got up quickly, though he made a motion as if I should not be disturbed.

"To me the commander said, "How're the workouts?"

"I'm still at it, sir."

"I've changed to the mornings. I believe it's better—for me anyway." The commander left.

"What does he do around here?"

The chief stared at me. "You let off him, see. He's a good Joe and don't think he didn't get it poked at him. He's got a right to be a little cuckoo. That man used to have a division of destroyers in the Pacific, an expert in tactics. And something happened; he let some Japs cree the T on him. They finished off four of his six cans. He's now in charge of minor equipment here. He spent the last 20 years on a ship. Now he's here, stuck. They won't let him leave."

"They won't let me leave either—you or somebody."

"A man's desire leads to nothing but destruction, especially for himself. You hate to go down to Versailles—that means you're building something. The commander wants to go down there —that means he's destroying something or trying to. Do you get the idea?"

"Not very well."

"The Navy is run on the basis of what might happen; I've had 14 years at sea—cruisers, cans, one battle wagon, and I know. Always be sharper tomorrow than the day before. I'm a perfectionist; that's the only thing that matters in this world: perfection. Your brain's idle, that's your trouble. Tomorrow I want you to talk to me about books. You ever read 'War and Peace'? If you ain't you go read it—because you've got to tell me what it's about. All my life I heard about that book but never had a chance to read it, or was too dumb. And me married to a high school English teacher. I'm gonna surprise her with some knowledge."

* * *

In the afternoons, then, we talked about books, I absorbing what I said as if I knew about all books and all authors. Many of the other books I read for the first time in the U.S.C., where I wrote themes for Wallace.

The first theme was called "A Man Named Victor." "I didn't hear right away from Wallace but William wrote: "He got an A — but would have got an A+ except he can't even copy. Why don't you play fair and tell me once? I sent one for William called "The Art of Being Honest" along with one for Wallace. To Wallace wrote back, "Let's have no more of that old music, brother. We've got the same teacher and he's dumb but not that dumb. unreasonable optimist. We're He's always talking about current events and one day he cried in class while he was talking about the Armistice and the bells rong-ing all day in the town where have to go to war. If you were he lived. William done need no so not so all-fired selfish, you'd tell help the way I do and besides your sugah-pie the same thing."

If he did you ought to know he's asked Mefi down to the first football game. Our pictures are going to be in a copy of The Gridiron soon.

XV

We sailed on Dec. 12, Bert and I, and three others from the 0'! platoon. We were put aboard the Liberty Ship, 400 soldiers and a-tiers in one hold, and 19 officers in a stateroom a little larger than a pantry. I remember that we stood on deck, in the rain, and watched until there was not the faintest glimpse of land. Bert said, "Take a good look, we're not likely to see it again. Soon as we land in Germany we'll have to whip Russia —ce haven't got sense enough to let them whip each other." He pounded my back. "You're an I don't have a sugah-pie.

"Perish that stuff. I've read her letters."

"Is that so?"

"Certainly. Every time you leave them lying around—how can I resist a love letter?"

"Another mistake for you. That situation has resolved itself into a Platonic affair."

"Freud did away with Platonism."

"Well, she prefers my brother. He's a hero."

"Hah! Like yesterday. 'When you wrote that you could not come home, all the color of this beautiful autumn was suddenly gone and I felt winter for the first time,' Freud or Plato? Answer me that. She writes much better than Tepe, but then I've always told Tepe she didn't have any sense."

On the 29th day of our voyage we anchored in the outer harbor of Pellville, North Africa. The sun was warm and the hills around the town were spotted w.ih green patches, as if the sun shone through a green mirror.

Declares Canada Could Not Stop One Russ Plane

TORONTO (CP) — A former post-war commander of two RCAF auxiliary fighter squadrons here said Thursday the air force, with its present resources, "could not stop one Russian bomber intruding over 30,000 feet in broad daylight unless it stumbled into the Quebec area."

Wing Cmdr. Richard H. Rohmer, 29, who won the Distinguished Flying Cross in operations in support of the Normandy landings in 1944, said in an address to the Canadian Progress Club that Canada is defenceless to an air attack.

"After the billions of dollars have been spent, after years of so-called preparedness, except for three Sabre jet squadrons under training to go to Europe under NATO, Canada could not put up a single modern aircraft in its own defence."

"There are no fast-moving RCAF jet fighter squadrons guarding the Canadian North," he said. "The Russians know that, the RCAF knows that, the government knows that. The only people who don't know are the Canadian people, because they are being told by 'experts' in Ottawa that there are such squadrons.

"It is high time that the people of Canada were told the truth about themselves and their existential defences."

Wing Cmdr. Rohmer, a 1951 law school graduate now associated with a Toronto law firm, retired March 31 from command of Toronto's No. 411 auxiliary fighter squadron.

Woodstock Man Is Lost at Sea

WOODSTOCK (CP) — Twice escaping death when he was transferred from ill-fated British submarines, William Brown, 37-year-old son of Mrs. Margaret Smart of Woodstock, was lost at sea when torpedoes overboard by a gun recoil during practice drills in the Mediterranean.

An intensive air search was made for the accident aboard the submarine HMS Trump, said reports from Valetta, Malta, but no trace was found.

Mr. Brown was transferred from the submarine Affray just before it was torpedoed and sank and subsequently was transferred from the submarine Truculent just before it sank in the Thames estuary with 80 men aboard.

PLAN BIG SHOP CENTRES

PORT CREDIT (CP)—Two shopping centres costing $4,000,000 will be built on the Queen Elizabeth Highway near Dixie road, it was announced here. One centre, containing 35 stores, will have parking facilities for 1,000 automobiles. The second centre will have a theatre, supermarket, 35 stores and parking facilities for 2,000 autos. Dixie road is nine miles west of Toronto.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) — Synopsis: A disturbance in the Lake Ontario-England coast sweep warm, moist Atlantic air westward into Southern Ontario Thursday. Overcast skies and rain spread over the Great Lakes regions. The disturbance, although weakening, is moving very slowly in a northwesterly direction. As a result there is little relief in sight of the wet weather. Showers are expected to continue in southern and central regions of Ontario today and Saturday. Widely scattered snowflurries will change to showers this afternoon in northern regions.

The sharp contrast to this unpleasant weather in Eastern Canada, the Prairies are enjoying sunny skies and moderately warm temperatures.

COMMONS PASSES SPECIAL POWERS ACT EXTENSION

All Opposition Parties Oppose Passage

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's controversial measure to extend its emergency powers for a year has been given third and final reading by the Commons and now goes to the Senate for ratification.

After hearing criticism of the move from opposition groups, members Thursday night voted 107 to 50 to adopt the bill extending the Emergency Powers Act from next May 31 until the same date next year. All opposition parties opposed passage.

The vote came after Prime Minister St. Laurent moved the provisions of the bill, which gives the cabinet wide authority to legislate without consulting Parliament, are as necessary for security as Canada's defence programs.

Measure Criticized

George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, and M. J. Coldwell, CCF leader, were among those criticizing the measure Thursday. Earlier, it had been criticized by Solon Low, Social Credit leader.

Just before passage of the bill, the government accepted by voice vote an amendment suggested by the progressive Conserva t vs. that removed a provision for continuance beyond May 31, 1954, when the bill would be put to the Houses of Parliament.

Mr. St. Laurent said he hoped the emergency powers will never be used, just as it was hoped the A-bomb and H-bomb in Europe will never be used. But the government felt that, for the security of Canada, it should have powers to act promptly.

Deals With Riot Order

Dealing with the one secret order passed under the act—and which has been under opposition fire—Mr. St. Laurent said it was passed in July, 1951, and deals with combined security action with Canada's NATO partners.

The bill will also continue in force for the security of Canada and her associates the power to show it to opposition party leaders. But he did not think they would want to see it.

Without the secret order, the minister said, Canada and her allies have been a gap in arrangements for concerted security. It had enabled Canada to do what "all the governments of the NATO countries have been trying to do" and was doing it to their satisfaction and benefit.

Mr. St. Laurent said he does not like secret orders. But there were times when they had to be used and must be taken.

Mr. Drew said his party has opposed emergency powers in the past and will continue to do so. It did not think the legislation was needed because any necessary powers could be obtained by law.

Under the proposed measure, he said, Parliament would up and money spent without reference to Parliament. Arrests could be made for contravention of orders made under the legislation.

The current legislation could not be compared with that of 1951, nine months after signing his wife's name to a family allowance cheque. "Many people have suffered because they won't invoke work," the magistrate said.

NINE-MONTH BETH

KITCHENER (CP)—Magistrate J. E. Hill, Kirkpatrick sentenced Charles Langstaff Thursday to nine months in jail for signing his wife's name to a family allowance cheque. "Many people have suffered because they won't invoke work," the magistrate said.

Bitter Over Losing Position Man Climbs 300-Foot Tower But Induced Down by Police

TORONTO (CP)—A television sound-effects man, bitter because he was fired from his job, climbed 300 feet up the CBC's giant television tower and threatened to jump.

He came down about two hours after he began his arduous ascent because of his love for his pretty brunette girl friend.

Joe Lacosse, fired Thursday from CBLT, the CBC's Toronto TV station, was on his way up the lattice work of the 460-foot high tower by 10 a.m. He climbed the ladder and eased himself up the girders to the 1,000-foot level platform where he got on the stairs.

About half an hour later Doc A. Woodley, 40, district lineman, he came closer Lacosse yelled: "Get back or I'll jump." Woodley then notified police.

Police Start Rescue

By 11 p. m. the dangerous rescue operation was under way. Floodlights lit up the 900-foot metal structure set back about 200 feet from downtown Jarvis Street in a corner in front of the CBC's new TV building. Seven firemen held a 12-foot net, every time it came down a 1,000, held back by a police cordon, stood silently, f a c e s skyward, watching the drama unfold above.

Two firemen, two detectives and two uniformed policemen climbed up the ladder in the centre of the lattice — orange — coloured structure. Lacosse threatened to jump. Then he began throwing pieces of metal.

Then Detective Robert Miller began talking. He, a fireman who hates heights, knew Lacosse. He met him a few months ago when he investigated a slugging when Lacosse was hit over the head and robbed.

Told Police About Girl

As Miller inched closer to Lacosse, the detective called: "Losing your job shouldn't end your life. You're a trained mechanician. You can get a job with a private firm; probably make a lot more money."

At first Lacosse wouldn't speak. Then hesitatingly he began to tell Miller about his girl friend girl friend and how much he loved her.

"How would she feel?" Miller asked him. "Do you imagine how much she'll be if you jump?"

Lacosse then decided to make the climb. It would soon dawn if all the lights were turned out and his girl was waiting at the foot of the tower.

All floodlights, ground and building, lights were darkened. The crowds were pushed back. Police located Jane Robinson and brought her to the foot of the tower in a police cruiser.

When the girl had arrived, Lacosse began his slow descent.

It was eight hours he reached the bottom and was whisked into a waiting police car. At police headquarters he broke loose from police, swinging at photographers. But his girl was at his side as he was charged with creating a disturbance.

Shortly after he was taken away from the tower the lights on the cage around the entrance to the stairs, which lead up the centre of the tower, were lit again.

HOUSE APPROVES TAKING OFF RENT CONTROLS IN '54

Frost Says More Homes Will be Built Under Bill

TORONTO (CP)—New homes may not be built in Ontario if the province continues its jurisdiction over rent controls, Premier Frost said in the legislature Thursday night.

In reply to an attack on his administration's bill to turn over responsibility for rent control to municipalities March 2, 1954, the premier said controls can be prolonged to the point where they would damage incentive to build new homes.

"During the day, the legislature heard an opposition member urge an increase in teachers' salaries to stop what he termed a deepening crisis in Ontario education and an announcement that about 100,000 square miles of the province is planned to non-resident hunters and anglers and saw introduction of a bill to compensate persons evicted by Ontario lawyers.

The labour bill introduced would enable members to sit on most government committees and committees of the whole. It bars the addition of separation of the executive and legislature should not be applied because government functions have become so complex that it would be a waste not to use trained members on government bodies.

Will Help Teachers

He also told the House that his government is anxious to help the province's credit unions in every way possible.

Travel Minister Cecile announced that the civil service commission department will spend $1,463,000 during 1953-54 on in-service training.

The proposed change in rent control was under fire from four members, W. J. Grummett, CCF house leader-Hamilton East; Andrew T. D. Thomas (CCF—Ontario), C. H. Gordon (L—Bransford) and J. B. Salsberg (Lab.-Prog.—Toronto St. Andrew). In the voice vote during 1953 the bill was carried by a voted against the bill.

Opposition Leader Farquhar Oliver said he questioned the policy, but he signified his approval in the vote.

The premier said municipalities have to be given a year's notice before rent control is turned over to them so the bill is delayed another year, it would mean a postponement of two years.

"Decisions will be taken some day. It might as well be taken now," he said. "I believe that the great majority of Ontario municipalities have no belief off away from rent controls."

The two CCF critics said councils in such areas as Hamilton cannot be affected by rent controls could be kept under control by measures which would be exerted on them if they tried to maintain controls.

The municipalities affected include all the province's cities and most of the large towns with a total population of more than 5,000,000.

Mr. Gordon said controls are the only means of preventing gouging in what premier Frost has described the proposal as a "dirty deal."

Four Royal Dukes to March Behind Queen Mary's Coffin

LONDON (CP)—Four Royal Dukes will march behind the flag-draped coffin of Queen Mary when it is borne on a gun carriage to ancient Westminster Hall Sunday for two days of lying in state before burial Tuesday.

The Dowager Queen will lie in state in the same historic building where her husband was under cremation—Mr. St. Laurent said it was passed in July, 1951, and deals with combined security action with Canada's NATO partners.

The bill will also continue in force for the security of Canada and her associates the power to show it to opposition party leaders. But he did not think they would want to see it.

Police Squads Comb Houses For Sex Sadist

LONDON (CP) — Police today searched for a 21-year-old girl who threatened her life with a gun in the fifth victim of the Notting Hill sex killers.

While Scotland Yard intensified the hunt for the sex sadist who left the strangled bodies of four young women in a grubby west end flat, the girl named Margaret Patricia Boyle, missing from her home for six weeks.

She fled only a short distance from the house in a squalid west London district where the bodies were found this week under the floor boards and in a sealed-up flat closet.

A general warning was issued that the killer may strike again at any time.

Police also examined the bodies said the victims had been subjected to "unconfirmable outrages to nature" after death.

Scotland Yard detectives described the girl as a "highly strung" aged man of abnormal sex tendencies who committed suicides of "a peculiar type."

The last of the four bodies was identified as that of Mrs. Ethel Christie, 45, last seen by neighbors in the apartment house. She had lived in the murder flat with her husband John, a tall 52 year-old husband, John, a trucking clerk.

Mrs. Christie's body was found Wednesday buried under the floorboards in the apartment dining room.

Two day before, a prospective Jamaican tenant of the flat had brought to light the partly-clothed body of a young woman found in a pantry niche walled up by several thicknesses of brick and mortar.

The four women had been dead for periods ranging from five months to two years.

A country-wide search was on for Christie, but Scotland Yard would say only "it is believed he may be able to help police in their inquiries."

Aside from Mrs. Christie, the victims were Rita Nichols, 24, and Hectorina MacLennan, 27-year-old wife of Gordon Burness of the Sergeant Khin Maing Soe Hle and mother of two children.

Hectorina Maclennan, 27, described by relatives as a "wild girl," who recently finished a term in London's Holloway prison.

Miss Maclennan, 24, an Irish girl who came to London several months ago and took a room in the tough Hammersmith district.

Mau Terrorists Kill Estimated 200 Loyal Kikuyus

Men, Women and Children Hacked to Pieces by Cult

NAIROBI, Kenya (CP)—Mau Mau terrorists massacred an estimated 200 African men, women and children north of Nairobi during the night—beginning the open war they promised against white settlers and pro-government Africans in the British colony.

The anti-white cultists went on the warpath in a seven-mile strip of Kikuyu settlements, hacking men, women and babes-in-arms to pieces, shooting and burning huts as it will.

It was the biggest Mau Mau raid in the history of the colony—a fury of savagery unparalleled in Kenya since the arrival of the first white colonists.

Another gang stormed into the town of Naivasha, 55 miles north of Nairobi and swept through the police station, killing five African policemen.

These killed included chief Luka. He was slashed to death together with his three wives.

These were the Mau-Mau tactics:

They knew their intended victims. They knew their homes and where to find them.

They struck in the dead of night so they set fire to the huts.

Then they surrounded and shot out to escape the flames, they were attacked with axes, panga (hacking sword) and short swords.

Many of the Kikuyus, unable to escape the flames, were burned to death in their huts.

Fought Off Mau Mau

One of the intended victims was chief MaKeni. However, he fought off the Mau Mau and killed two of them dead.

It was the biggest single outrage in the strife-torn colony since the Mau Mau society started its terror campaign last fall. Six died over the while man from the British Commonwealth, plus about 30,000 whites and 5,000,000 natives in Kenya.

Nearly 300 persons, most of them Africans who refused to join the Mau Mau, have been killed since the last year by the fanatic terrorists.

New Atomic Cannon to Be Success Will Have to be Used as Hit, Run Gun

FT. SILL, Okla. (AP)—If the United States Army's new atomic cannon is to be a complete success in operational combat, it will have to be used as a hit-and-run weapon despite its tremendous size.

This is the opinion of Col. Severe Armstrong, who will soon supervise the firing of the first atomic projectile from the army's new 280-millimeter gun on the Nevada proving grounds.

Armstrong brought out the hit-and-run idea Thursday as a cross from his artillery battalion fired a conventional projectile in preparation in a preview of the Nevada tests for visiting newspaper men.

Armstrong, a great big gun, physically speaking," Armstrong said, "and it has to be handled with with its unprecedented destructive potential when it shoots an atomic round you will appreciate how vitally the enemy will want to locate it on the battlefield and then do everything possible to knock it out before it can fire an atomic round into a critical target within its locus.

"We are likewise vitally interested in preventing the enemy from finding the gun; then move to another position before he can fix its location."

Armstrong said the atomic shell would be fired seven miles in Nevada and would be set to explode burst 500 feet above ground. This is the same range and set burst used in Thursday's firing of conventional ammunition, some of which was designed to simulate an atomic a maximum range of around 20 miles, fires a projectile weighing 800 pounds.

Brig.-Gen. A. M. Harper, commanding general of the artillery school, said the firing of an atomic shell would be done "in the near future."

Arrest of Lady Astor Demanded Over Reference to Sen. McCarthy

WASHINGTON (AP) — A midwest editor Thursday demanded the arrest of Lady Astor for her visit to Iron Curtain countries.

The call for her arrest came from John Chapple, editor of the Midland, Mich., Daily Press, who fired a telegram to U. S. Attorney Charles E. Irslan here and sent a copy to the Associated Press. The wire said:

"I wish to sign a complaint charging Lady Nancy Astor with indictment to commit a felony for the statement made by her in the British press that she was responsible knowledge that it would be publicized, at the home of Senator and Mrs. Robert A. Taft in Georgetown, Too Bad it isn't Poison," and "Senator Joe Should Be McCarthy.

"On the basis of the facts as reported by The Associated Press, please inform me if such a warrant will be issued if I will sign the complaint and I will go to the proper jurisdiction at Washington to do so."

Irslan told reporters he had received Chapple's message and commented:

"We will look into it."

But he said he would want more facts before saying a warrant would or could be issued.

"I'm puzzled that Chapple is asking Lady Astor be arrested for an aggrieved party," he said.

Lady Astor broke into laughter when informed of Chapple's demand for her arrest.

"That's wonderful!" she exclaimed. "I never realized I had hit the bull's eye. Let him come on and try. I'll win, but I don't want to be made a heroine by him—I haven't got time."

"I'm not really a Lucretia Borgia. I'm now. I'm said I had a fun—but," she added, "I said what thousands feel."

An association official said that while they were pleased with the response, they were also sorry that a number of applications could not be filled.

Jail Sentences Given Two Youths For Entry, Theft

Appearing for sentence today after pleading guilty last week to charges of joyriding and of entering a garage in Tweed, Richard Lotta, 18, of Hamilton, and Doug Parsons, 18, of this city were given jail sentences by Magistrate T. V. Wills.

A third youth charged in connection with the offences, Jack Hughes, 16, was given suspended sentence, while still another youth, Glen Delnice, 22, was further remanded and will be sentenced next week. Lotta was given six months in jail, while Parsons received a three-month term.

The four youths pleaded guilty to taking a car owned by Albert Cook last Feb. 26 and driving to Tweed where they entered Holmes Service Station, taking cash and articles worth $47.72.

The youths were originally charged with one theft but charges were reduced to that of joyriding. "It was purely a case of joyriding, the boys took the car merely to get from one place to another," observed Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan as he moved for withdrawal of the car theft charges.

Obituary

MRS. MYRTLE E. LAVENDER

Following an illness of two months, Mrs. Myrtle Emma Lavender, Marmora, died at her home on Thursday afternoon. She was born in Glenmire, Ontario, 46 years ago, being the daughter of William Henderson and the late Ethel Henderson. Mrs. Lavender, who had resided in Marmora for the past 28 years, was well known and highly respected in her community.

She was a member of St. Paul's Anglican Church in Marmora and took an active interest in all church work. She was also a member of the Eastern Star, No. 267, of Marmora.

Surviving are her father, Wm. Henderson; her husband, Stanley Lavender; three children, Annie Margaret, Glen and Dean, all at home; one sister, Mrs. William (Hazel) Lavender, of Marmora, and two brothers, Charles Henderson, of Marmora, and Frederick Henderson, of Millbridge.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

MRS. CATHERINE HUNT Read

An active worker in church affairs when health permitted, Mrs. Catherine Hunt, of Read, died at her home on Thursday. She was in her 73rd year.

Mrs. Hunt was a member of the Roman Catholic Church in Read, a member also of the Catholic Women's League, the Catholic Action Society and the League of Sacred Heart.

She had been ill for the past five years. Born at Read, where she lived all her life, the deceased is survived her mother, Mrs. Mary McDermott, and her husband, Joseph Hunt. Her father, Lawrence McDermott, is deceased.

Surviving as well are four sons and one daughter: Raymond, at Read; Francis of Saskatoon, and William of Yorkton; Saskatchewan, and three daughters living: Mrs. Franklin (Marion) Larkin, of Plainfield; Mrs. Earl (Clara) Rivers and Mrs. Joseph (Agnes) Doyle, both of this city.

Four sisters survive. They are: Sister Mary Ursula, C.S.J., of Nazareth, Michigan; Mrs. Frank B. Deady, of Detroit; Mrs. Albert Nicholas, of Detroit, and Mrs. Joseph Bailey, of Read. One brother, Lee McDermott is a resident, of Detroit, and the other brother, Joseph, resides at Lasalette, Ontario.

The funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this edition.

WM. G. NORMINGTON

Campbellford — Funeral services were held on Friday at 2 p.m. for William Gordon Normington, who passed away in Kingston General Hospital on Tuesday. He was 64 years old, who was in his 74th year, had been in poor health for the past four years, having spent most of that time in Kingston hospital.

He was born in Wales, son of the late Joseph Normington and Katherine Cullen. He resided for some time in Orono, moving to Campbellford 23 years ago. He joined the Campbellford police force in 1933 and served for five years.

Surviving Mr. Normington are his wife, the former Mary Elizabeth Watkins; one son, Bill of R.R. 3, Campbellford, and five daughters: Mrs. Charles Dagenais (Peggy), of Montreal; Gladys Normington, in England; Mary, of Peterborough; Mrs. Gerald Mack (Elizabeth), Bond Road, Campbellford, and Harriett, at home. A brother, John, and a sister, Mrs. Ada James, living in Wales, also survive.

Mr. Normington was a veteran of two wars, having served with the army in the Boer War, and World War I. He was a member of St. John's Anglican Church.

The funeral was held from Bennett's Funeral Home by the Campbellford Branch of the Canadian Legion, with Rev. John McKibbin of the Anglican Church, officiating. Interment was in Mt. Pleasant cemetery.

Adjourn Hearing Until April 21 On Theft Charge

Charged with breaking and entering and theft at the Elite Creepit Jewellers in Belleville in May, 1951, William Mason, 44, of Toronto, appeared in city court today before Magistrate T. V. Wills for preliminary hearing.

After hearing two of three Crown witnesses the case was adjourned until April 21. Bail for Mason was renewed. Mason was arrested some weeks ago in Toronto.

First witness called today by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan was Irving Lenkinski, Jewellery store owner, who said he had returned to the store on the night of May 27 last year to find watches and rings missing from display cases. The safe door was open and cash amounting to $1950 and bonds worth $1000 were missing.

Serial numbers of the missing bonds were given by Mr. Lindenberg.

E. A. Hollingsworth, Ottawa, from the office in charge of cancelled securities for the Bank of Canada, said bonds corresponding to serial numbers provided by Mr. Lindenberg had been presented at their Toronto agency for payment in June of last year.

This was corroborated by Wm. McLean, accountant at a Toronto bank, who said the bonds had been purchased from F. O'Donnell, Toronto lawyer.

Farley Faulkner Will Engage In Speaking Tour

TORONTO (CP) — J. Farley Faulkner says "it's time something was done about it." He's doing it.

"It" is communism's threat to the Canadian way of life. To come out it, Mr. Faulkner is setting out on a self-imposed crusade to awaken Canadians to what he considers a menace.

His slogan: "Vigilance for freedom."

"I'm not anti-Communist," says the 42-year-old business man who almost reluctantly, is starting out on the speaking trail. He's come to be on guard against isms that threaten their freedom. "I'm just a proclaimer."

Mr. Faulkner is the man who was hustled out of Toronto's Massey Hall some weeks ago when he interrupted a C.C.F. rally-to-Socialism meeting addressed by Very Rev. Hewlett Johnson, dean of Canterbury Cathedral, he was told: "If you want to make a speech, go into a hall."

He did. He hired Massey Hall. There last March 23 he shed off his chest some of the things he wasn't allowed to say at the "Red Dean's" meeting. Some 2,800 persons listened.

He has turned the operation of his small dress shop over to a partner "for the duration." That will be as long as Canadians are willing to listen to his message—vigilance against Communist infiltration activity.

Tentatively, he plans to speak in Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens, which holds some 13,000 persons, late in April. Meantime, he hopes to speak in key centres across Canada, and to local children in Ontario under department of education auspices.

The day after Mr. Faulkner's telephone number was published in a newspaper's account of his action from Dr. Johnson's meeting, he was swamped with calls from men and women anxious to help his cause. On one day, he spoke to 30 persons in inquiries. His voice broke and for days he was hoarse, suffering with strain.

When Mr. Faulkner hired Massey Hall he didn't know how he was going to raise the $447 it cost. But more than 2,800 tickets at 35 cents each and a collection plate produced $511.42 solved that problem. His vigilance-for-freedom fund now totals $1,600, all of it donated. A volunteer chartered accountant is in charge of the fund.

Mr. Faulkner served overseas in the Canadian Army as a major during the Second World War. He did considerable lecturing to members of the forces for the army bureau of current affairs and also delivered morale lectures to reinforcement troops.

HOUSE APPROVES

Aurele Chartrand (L — Ottawa East), speaking during the budget debate, said low pay, bad working conditions and lack of security in the civil service might crisis, uncertainty and confusion to the teaching profession and unless action is taken there will be chaos.

He called on the government to increase salaries, to raise the calibre of teachers' colleges and the standard required for the granting of teachers' certificates. He said the most important is the increase in salaries.

"Let us make up our minds once and for all that the business of this legislature and of the people of Ontario as a whole is to provide the best possible educational training for our rising generation. Some sacrifices will have to be made along that line," he said.

Mr. Chartrand said that whatever savings the government is able to effect in grants for educational purposes should be used to increase teachers' salaries.

Quoting from the annual report of department report, he said average salary figures are: $3,000 for public school teachers, $3,152; female secondary school teachers, $2,826; public school teaching principals, $3,800.

He quoted a 1950 education department report as stating that the "closing of one-room schools with few enrollments has been encouraged in the interests of economy, efficiency and the social development of the child by association with other children of his own age."

During that year, 39 small schools were closed and in the following year, 27, although 10 previously closed were reopened. There were at present 721 closed schools in the province.

Mr. Chartrand said that if the department recognizes economy, efficiency and the social development of the child as prime factors in providing educational systems, "then it cannot help but admit that our standards of education are badly lagging behind."

Frank MacDougall, deputy lands minister, said the fair rental law is intended to ensure that there will not be another situation like the one in 1951, when hockey star Bill Barilko and Dr. Henry Hudson disappeared in their plane while on a fishing trip in the James area.

The banned area is bounded on the west by the Ontario-Manitoba border, on the south by the 11th base line, on the east by the north shores of the Wahnapi and Albany along James bay and Hudson bay to the Manitoba border.

Mr. MacDougall said the search for the two men cost the taxpayers $50,000.

Attorney-General Porter said the bill to compensate swindled persons would authorize the Upper Canada Law Society to make levies on its 5,000 members to reimburse victimized persons.

He said no public money would be involved and the fund would be administered by the legal profession itself.

Some lawyers may take advantage of their position, he said, but "such occurrences are very rare.

Premier Frost Says Sunday Sport Is Dead Issue

TORONTO (CP)—Premier Frost says Sunday sport is a dead issue in Ontario.

Legislation governing Sunday sport is working out well, the premier told the legislature Thursday night, and it would be folly to change it.

Albert Wren (Lib.-Lab.—Kenora) had sponsored a bill amending the legislation to specify the sports to be permitted. The bill was defeated without division.

Under the existing policy, a municipal council may frame a by-law specifying conditions under which Sunday sport is to be permitted. If the by-law is approved by the municipal electorate, the legislature passes enabling legislation.

Canada Regains Trade Position

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada, which gave way to France as the world's third trading country in 1951, went back into third spot in 1952.

The ranking of the five top countries now is: United States, United Kingdom, Canada, France and German federal republic. Canada and France exchanging the places they held in 1951. The German republic, although behind France in total trade, is ahead of her in exports.

PRODUCE MARKET

Quotations for graded eggs in fibre cases were: A large 52; A medium 51; A small 47; grade B 47; grade C 42. Wholesale to retail: A large 54; grade B 52; grade C 47.

Butter solids: first grade 60½; no other price established.

DOLLAR RATE

MONTREAL (CP) — The United States dollar was at a discount of 1 25-32 per cent in terms of Canadian funds, the Bank of Canada reported at noon today. Thursday's noon rate was 96 3-16 cents.

MANY TRAFFIC VIOLATIONS

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto police department, coping with what is described as a "chaotic" traffic situation, is issuing summonses for parking violations at the rate of 2,000 a day.

The department said revenue from parking fines in the last two days totalled $9,500.

POLITICAL CRITICISM

In a letter to the Editor appearing on this page Mr. John Haig takes issue with some views expressed Wednesday in this column. We had stated that we felt Mr. Donald Gordon, president of the Canadian National Railways, was properly annoyed when he declined to tell the railway committee of the House of Commons the circumstances surrounding the demotion of a railway hotel manager.

It was our view—and it still is—that this was a matter of internal management. It was not a matter which should concern the members of the railway committee. And there is no doubt that such an incident, ordinarily, would not have come to the attention of the committee. It became a political issue, however, when the employee concerned protested that his transfer to a lesser post in the C.N.R. hotel chain was the result of a dispute which he had with a member of the Prime Minister's party on tour last summer.

The very nature of the complaint indicates that this affair is wholly political. Even assuming that the complaint is a valid one we think that the place to air it is the floor of the House of Commons. Certainly it is the business of the members of the house on the railway committee to concern themselves with the affairs of the publicly-owned railway system. It is not suggested, surely, that the head of the system appear there to be questioned about any or all matters of routine business operations. It would be just as reasonable to expect that Mr. Gordon should be called upon to explain the demotion or transfer of any C.N.R. employee if the latter happened to have friends in Parliament.

Of course Mr. Haig takes the view that Donald Gordon's refusal to disclose details in this instance is just another example of the Government's attempt to hide its misdeeds. He is entirely entitled to this view. We respectfully suggest, however, that we are hardly to be held wanting or negligent in having not given expression in this column to this same view.

We are not persuaded that the incident in the railway committee is at all of a kind with some other issues which have been raised and in which the Opposition has been denied all the information it has requested. It is beyond our capacity to comment on every controversy which arises in the course of political controversy in Ottawa. To single out the few in which it is held that the Government is vulnerable would be to deliberately hide behind. It is true that some prominent newspapers have dedicated themselves to partisan political criticism. This is not the position taken by this paper. In avoiding scathing denunciations of any party or another on every possible occasion, we feel we can hardly be charged on the other hand with condoning any party in its faults.

In the final analysis it is not this newspaper or any other that will pass judgment. That will be done by the people at the polls. And it is only a few days ago that the Prime Minister replied to his critics in the House of Commons in just so many words. Adding, incidentally, that the Government would go to the people on the very points which Mr. Haig has raised in his letter to us.

A GREAT MISUNDERSTANDING

In the last week or so the people of Ontario have been witnesses to what we think is the first, or certainly the most conspicuous example of pressure politics at work in the Ontario Legislature. It has had to do with the use of edible oils.

It is the expressed intention of the Frost government to introduce a bill at the current session which would curtail the use of edible oils where they were being used in some cases as substitutes for dairy butter. The irony of the whole thing is that if Agriculture Minister Thomas had not been laid low by a virus infection this bill would have been introduced and passed by the house at least a fortnight or four weeks ago. There was nothing iniquitous about it. Its purpose would have been fully explained on the floor of the house. Its sentiment would have arisen and it would have had general approval.

However, this was not the case because of the illness of Mr. Thomas, and the hurly-burly of the bill became public property and it was suddenly seized upon by the edible oils interests as an instrument of propaganda on behalf of colored margarine. Suddenly full-page advertisements appeared in newspapers throughout the province requesting citizens to protest this legislation. The people of Ontario were led to believe that the bill would prohibit the sale of colored margarine, or even margarine of any kind, or butter. Of course it was not specifically charged that this would be the effect of the bill but the propaganda was so worded that no other meaning was taken from it.

Suffice to say that the reaction from the misled public was such that a "modified" bill was presented to the legislature this week. Actually the import of the legislation is identical with the original bill. The only difference is that it is more specific in its terms and sets out in black and white such substitutes for dairy products as synthetic whipping cream, chocolate milk and the like.

No one will be denied peanut butter, which always was and always will be nothing more or less than mashed peanuts. Nor will we be denied margarine or salad dressing. And of course it will be never the intention of anyone that their sale should be prohibited.

AT THE END OF THE WEEK

When I have paid for what I owe,
And the grocer and the coal man too,
The boy who shovels off the snow
And given the milkman what is due,
When I have paid the monthly rent,
An squared the plumber for his pains,
I find that all I have is spent.
I can't go wrong on what remains.

Let Polly beckon as she will,
I tread the horizontal line.
When I have paid my tailor's bill
I am not apt to purchase wine.

When I have paid for hats and shoes,
The tempter has to hike along.
I am no customer for booze.
On what is left I can go wrong.

I never get my fingers burned
By mixing stocks that quickly fall.
The job with which I'm most concerned
Is buying clothes for children small.

I bet when talk of surplus dough
But none of it I've ever had.
When I have paid up what I owe,
If I break even I am glad.

THE PACKSACK

by GREGORY CLARK

We still refer to labor-management relations, labor-management disputes. It must be a long time now since a bunch of striking workers faced their bosses. What we think of as labor-management disputes are actually disputes between sets of managers. On the one side are the managers who have got together the capital, the plant, the machinery, the techniques and the sales outlets. On the other side are the managers who have got together the employees.

For years, it was the generally accepted idea that by far the more important factor in industry was the capital, the plant, the machinery and the sales outlets. In fact, management used to mean nothing more than management of these elements of industry. Then labor began to assert its rights as an integral and essential part of industry, without which all the capital and machinery were useless, the negotiations were carried on by committees of the workers, hunger-like business agents and men elected from the workers to undertake the job of spokesmen. But such a primitive system could not long survive. Once the value of men was computed in comparative terms with money and machines, it stood to reason that men would arise, men who could easily have been managers in the office, who could see the possibilities of managing men instead. And now all over the continent we find a new profession, increasing numbers of whom are university graduates, who have made specialized studies of labor just as their fellow-managers in the industry have made a specialized study of "scientific management, counting or economics" And there are the managers of labor.

The phrase "labor-management relations" conjures up an entirely erroneous picture in the public mind. Here and there, a labor dispute goes down from the top ranks of the unions. But by far the greater majority of labor negotiations are carried out by two sets of managers, the one representing the machinery, so to speak, and the other representing the men who run the machines.

Some of the sympathy the public used to feel for labor may cool a little as the realization grows on us that we are all merely being managed, as usual.

Letter to the Editor

Says Public Entitled To Get Information

Editor:
Ontario Intelligencer:
Down on the right lines in your editorial "Mr. Gordon Was Properly Annoyed," let us join in the hunrahs to which Mr. Gordon is entitled.

Bear cheek and bear clearly to your own mind when I remind that it is your opinion that the explosive incident in the committee is of small concern to anyone.

I give an opinion that it is of vital concern to every Canadian. Mr. Gordon, Mr. Pitt are employed by the Canadian taxpayers who own and who operate the Canadian National Railways. We are entitled to know the reason why the president is of no concern to anyone, then unable to see why a $50,000 a year man gets so all-fired mad when requested to tell the people the whole story. I can understand anyone getting very angry if called a liar but, we, the taxpayers are by have a right to insist on such information as will forever cause our general manager and assume the blame, if any, where honesty and justice is fairest will place it. After all, the C. N. R. is not a private enterprise but a publicly owned enterprise.

This winter Canada has witnessed a full dress parade of one incident after another when we, the people, through our press or platform members, have been denied information to how our money is being spent. An arrogant majority breathes the divine power of "confidence" in the hands of their sands of Canadians who voted them into power. They have failed and they defy. "Not in the public interest" has become a vicious word.

This, Mr. Editor, is the large, if not the principle issue and not only the C. N. R. but challenging the very foundation of responsible institution of government.

The ethics, the principle of the case, Mr. Editor, Mr. Gordon, Mr. St.—Laurent, Clarence Howe or any other Liberal, have no fearful of giving the most intelligent jury in the land the full information that they by democratic process and right are entitled to. The public, Mr. Editor, have the power to decide, if given the facts can draw their own intelligent approved conclusions.

We are fed up with having mere men in office decide for us what is in our interest as far as our own affairs are concerned. We are sick and we sickened when so much smoke hovers overhead when Mr. Pitt preciding giving us the truth so we can decide. I go along with a Mr. Gordon who admits that the people, if told the facts, will prove just reasonable as a jury to those who can do naught else but talk down to them.

We are entitled be so active and militant in a crusade to regain democracy efficiency where they belong in Ottawa and to reinstate the responsibility of the people to their constitutional prerogatives that it, the press, would lead and not follow.

Income Tax Collector

(Winnipeg Tribune)

It is hard to see how the income tax branch can lose.

Dr. McCann's merry men have the legal power to force someone to collect a tax bill for them and if he fails to do so he renders himself becomes liable for the debt.

Suppose for example Joe Blow owed $99 to the income tax branch. All the branch has to do is send his employer a registered letter telling him to deduct the money from Joe, by withholding all or part of Joe's pay cheque.

If for any reason the employer fails to do this, the income tax branch comes liable for Joe Blow's tax bill.

This is not something dreamed up by a bureaucrat in one of his wilder moments. It is spelled out word for word in the Income Tax Act (section 109.)

Hippocratic Oracles

(Montreal Gazette)

Doctors have long complained that their patients are in the habit of complicating their diseases by their tendered advice, thereby endangering not only their own lives but the doctor's reputation. But the case is by no means as simple as that. For the doctor in modern society, especially that part of the medical profession which writes for publication or otherwise claims the attention of the eye has a far-reaching influence, albeit sometimes somewhat unconscious.

Public speaking doctors have recently, on both sides of the Atlantic, been engaging in something of a crusade to bring the public to consider the errors and the dangers of its ways. A British television program gave prominence to medical opinion on the dangers of smoking, and a medical writer has now pointed out that, while the habit is one of pre-safeguards, the employment of detergents may have a dangerous effect on the silky-white hands of the lady of the household.

Neither the dangers of smoking nor the menace of detergent packages can yet be said to be firmly fixed in the public mind. But it is certain that the medical profession—or part of it—has taken a definite stand on the subject ensures at least as much attention as ever given to the famed oracle at Delphi. Indeed, the doctors may have a good deal more power to did the Pythian lady. It is expected that the Delphic oracle's dicta consisted in the main of unintelligible mumbling. If an utterance was seldom unintelligible, save in his calligraphy, and even that is capable of interpretation by a qualified pharmacist who has been taken a course in cyrtograms and ciphers.

Spoonbill Not Elegant

(Ottawa Citizen)

The spoonbill is not an entirely elegant bird. Its beak is like a long flat spoon. Its legs are lanky stilts. But the soft feathers on its turkey-sized body glow with pink and flaming red. So it was killed by the thousands for the decoration of ladies' hats. It was almost extinct. Spoonbill sanctuaries, however, have saved the species again flourishes on islands off the coasts of Texas and Florida.

The spoonbill was reported in time the injury he so often does to wild life. The world needs birds, naturally, is the object of great solicitude, and every effort is made to increase numbers in the west stirred excitement among naturalists when a spoonbill was seen. Now it would seem that the takahe has been rediscovered in New Zealand, a flightless member of the rail family, it was believed to have been extinct since 1898. The privately-financed woodpecker, supposed to have died out in Louisiana and Arkansas forests, has been found drumming away in Florida.

Another Hawaiian non-flying rail, the Laysan, was removed in a similar way. Lately rabbits denuded its habitat of vegetation. Unhappily, Major Allen was not on hand during the war, and all these birds are reported to have been destroyed. Rabbits are being frightened from the Bahamas by aircraft. In California, the state bird, the valley woodpecker, supposed to have died out, is living in the Sequoia forests, has been found drumming away in Florida.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM READY, M.D.

THE MODERN MIRACLES OF CHEST SURGERY

The surgeon has long hesitated to enter certain areas of the body—the chest and skull cavity for example. Within the past ten years operations within these areas have become increasingly common. Removal of a lobe of the lung or an entire lung for certain diseases has now long passed the experimental stage and is an accepted procedure when the necessity arises.

Surgical operations upon the heart and the great vessels connected to it, have marked a dramatic advance in the attack on diseases of these structures. "Blue baby" surgery, involving vessels adjacent to the heart has been perfected to the point where normal or near-normal life is now possible for the victims previously doomed to a short and precarious existence.

The aorta is the "main stem" of the arterial tissuing from the heart, the branches and divisions of which carry arterial oxygenated blood to all the tissues of the body. Occasionally, as the result of disease or congenital defect, the aorta becomes constricted or narrowed to the point where appreciable obstruction to the flow of arterial blood from the heart develops.

In this condition, the tissues of the body below the level of the constriction become overly sufused with blood whereas the tissues above the constriction are poorly supplied. In the upper areas the blood pressure is high—be aorta is the "main stem" is decreased. Nature is her efforts to compensate for the abnormality creates through dilatation of the existing arterial tree and the creation of new ones, a "collateral" circulation is developed and contain the blood which is unable to find sufficient egress.

Up until the time that surgery was devised to relieve this condition, the patient faced a very uncertain and short future. Today, although the operation is still regarded as "heroic," and, depending upon circumstances, a hazard may be very great, it is possible to extend the outlook for life from a matter of months to thirty, possibly fifty years or more.

Basically, the operation consists in merely resecting that narrowed portion of the aorta and sewing the cut ends together. But in that simple statement there is nothing to indicate the sweat and tears, the hours of strain, the steel-nerved precision, split-second decision and flawless team work essential to the success of the procedure.

Nor does the statement embrace the years of intensive study, research, practice on experimental animals and exhaustive considerations involving not alone surgery but everything else included such as anesthesia, diagnosis, pre-operative and post-operative management—all essential to success.

We mention this to emphasize again the fact that men and not institutions accomplish research and surgery. Men make an institution. An institution is not a man.

Without men the most glittering "clinic" is but an assortment of bricks and mortar. It is to be hoped that the reputation of the clinic has been built today and elsewhere tomorrow. When conflict arises between men and institutions, the public's best interest lies on the side of the doctors.

The miraculous advances of medicine and surgery, the saving of years of life expectancy, the lowering of mortality rates and the new confidence in combating diseases are the accomplishments of men. Their heroic performances of today herald the development of "routine" performances tomorrow.

WORK AND HEALTH

Galen, distinguished physician of antiquity, remarked that employment is nature's physician. Spring arrives. It is often the case on the way to becoming such. There is no remedy for idleness of work. Suicides are usually recruits from among the idle and indulgent.

People who have a big job to do and are doing it in a big way are too happy to think about dying. All they want is good health and a chance to keep on accomplishing. We are born into the world with work to do, and we are not happy unless we do that work and do it satisfactorily. We can be best-gotten down with drudgery and that of course is bad, but there is nothing worse than a daily routine of work which is elementary in its performance and without any real objective. Such work is like life with eyes of envy. Most of them have to keep awake and let us be glad that we make them forget their misery.

We may be looking forward to retirement some time. That is fine. We all deserve a little rest at the day's end before we go to sleep. But you will probably be happier if when the day or retirement comes you will avoid idleness and keep on doing something of an activity consistent with declining strength.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

BIRD HOBBY

There are few hobbies that can compare with that of the study of birds—our happy and interesting feathered friends. Many of the best bird books are taken up with this hobby, enriching themselves and others by their experience. Theodore Roosevelt, Joel Chandler Harris, Kermit Roosevelt, John Kenian and hosts of others, have made a life study of these cheerful creatures.

A beautiful book on "An Introduction to Birds" by John Kelman has recently been published. There are nearly 100 fine full page illustrations in full color, a most intriguing book on our more familiar birds, and by a writer who genuinely loves birds.

To begin with, every bird lover should have that finest of all books on birds, Frank Chapman's "Handbook of Birds of Eastern North America." Then there is the book that John Keiran, Edwin Teale, and Guy Emerson former president of the National Audubon Society, have been busy in print. There are 1,000 illustrations, 500 in color. It is a must for anyone who wants to know about birds. My copy is always with me wherever we go, the summer time it's the bird lover's dictionary on birds. Houghton Mifflin are publishers.

An almost essential is to have a good book of field glasses. It pays dividends over and over, for you can study the habits, color, and characteristics of birds at close range. Within the past few years, however, glasses have been greatly improved and many are easily tamed, especially when they are fed and protected. Many years ago, after having been president of the New York Police Board, Theodore Roosevelt took a special trip to England that he might study British birds. Colonel Curry, Scores of books have been written on birds, especially about men who have devoted their lives to the subject. The more you read these books the more fascinating becomes your bird hobby.

Wave Of The Hand

(Hamilton Spectator)

We have always liked railroad men, who do an arduous job in the best of all possible ways—possessed of that gentle, unassuming courtesy—which so often goes with great efficiency. This liking has been reinforced of late by the experience of a very small boy of our acquaintance who delights in going to the park above Hamilton Junction Tower to watch what he calls "taina."

There has never been an occasion yet when the man in the cab, if he was within the small boy's direction, failed to wave at him; and railroad men seem to have a talent for detecting small boys — they almost always do.

As a result of this, the small boy in question has developed a habit which is endearing. When he sees a picture of a locomotive he waves at it. Once in a while, in the most genuine, if unconscious, compliments that ever were been paid to the railroad craft.

Women's Institute

MADOC — The March meeting of Madoc W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. R. R. Beatty, with Mrs. D. Kernahan, presiding. The roll call, "A Community Project" showed a good attendance of members and visitors, with several expressing the need for a community hall.

The treasurer reported on the card party. Mrs. G. C. Moon reported on the meeting which she attended at Ivanhoe recently, and gave several helpful suggestions as experienced by the guest speaker, Mrs. Hamilton.

Delegates

Mrs. W. Forestell and Mrs. Geo. Allore were named as delegates to go to the Guelph conference on May 7, 8.

The institute donated $25 to the C.N.I.B. Building Fund. Mrs. J. McGarvey reported on the Community Centre committee meeting and urged the members to support the bingo games, one of which was held March 21, the other to be held on the 30th, to raise money for lighting the ball field.

Mrs. S. R. Beatty, Mrs. K. T. Nicol, and Mrs. F. R. Naylor were appointed as a nominating committee to bring in a slate of officers for 1953-54. Current events were given by Mrs. A. Rogers.

Mrs. George Hill and Mrs. A. Herrington, convenors for community activities and public relations, had charge of the program. Mrs. Herrington gave a fine paper on Public Relations, stressing that public relations is "our feeling toward our neighbor, and those by the uttermost parts of the earth."

Mrs. Beatty spoke about the district meeting at Ivanhoe on May 28, and also a meeting of the district executive at the home of Mrs. G. C. Moon on April 7.

Mrs. R. Jackson, in costume, favored with a solo, "I'm in Love", and a poem, "The Human Touch." Mrs. George Hill gave an interesting paper on Community Activities, stressing the three main types of such activities viz. community activities, community enterprises, community institutions. "McMaster's Band," Mrs. Beatty, Mrs. K. Nicol, Mrs. K. Caskey, Mrs. R. F. Naylor, accompanied by Mrs. W. Hulin, supplied the "Irish touch" to this March meeting.

The hostess and her assistants served refreshments and a social time was enjoyed.

Mrs. F. R. Naylor moved a vote of thanks to all those who had helped with the meeting.

ALBURY

ALBURY — Don Dawson of RCAF Ottawa, and Tommy Dawson, of Ottawa, spent the week-end with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Dawson. Don left on Wednesday by plane for Germany.

Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Peck and Mr. Beuford Peck attended the Prince Edward County Canning Crop Growers' banquet in Bloomfield on Wednesday evening.

The March meeting of Rednersville W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. Allan Weese on Thursday evening with 40 being present. The president, Mrs. George Robins, took charge. Mrs. Ronald Giles had charge of the program. Miss Adams of Belleville, was guest speaker. Refreshments were served.

Miss Joyce Bonter of Toronto spent a few days with her mother, Mrs. Bonter and sister, Mrs. Allan Weese.

This community was shocked to hear of the sudden passing of Mrs. Dawson in Belleville General Hospital on Friday evening. Much sympathy is extended to the family. The funeral was held on Monday afternoon with a large attendance. Interment was in Albury Cemetery.

Messrs. Bill Dawson of Port Dalhousie and Tommy Dawson of Ottawa, returned to their home for their mother's funeral.

Mr. and Mrs. Beuford Peck and family spent the tea hour on Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Weese.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wood, Stirling, spent Sunday dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fitzgerald.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Simpson are sporting a new car.

Mr. and Mrs. Tyrrall and son of Belleville, spent Sunday tea hour with Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Mac Allen of Crofton, spent the tea hour on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Peck.

STIRLING

Fine Massed Bands Concert Attended by Large Crowds

STIRLING — A large crowd attended the Massed Bands concert comprised of Warkworth Community Band, Trenton Lions Band, Frankford Citizens' Band and Stirling Citizens' Band, under the leadership of Bandmaster Maurice Bell, and assisted by Bandmaster Charles Butcher of Frankford, in the Stirling theatre on Sunday evening.

A good program was enjoyed by all, consisting of massed band numbers, instrumental solos, duets and quartets. Assisting on the program were soprano soloist Patricia Spear, gold medalist of Trenton; Frank Wilson, popular "hill billy" singer, and entertainer Walter Wrightman, well known Trenton violinist, who played with fine technique and gave a number on a home-made one-string cello. Ten-year-old Margaret Thompson of Warkworth played one of the horn instruments. Also eight little fellows from the Lions Junior Group played a clarinet number to the accompaniment of the massed bands.

Warkworth Band

The Warkworth Community Band, which is made up of both ladies and men instrumentalists, was organized in 1946 under the leadership of the late Joseph Minicola of Peterborough. After his death in 1951, local Bandmaster Maurice Bell was appointed as leader and instructor of this young band which won the cup at the Northumberland Music Festival in 1952.

Lions Band

The Trenton Lions Band which was organized in 1940, has brought many honors to Trenton. Since its inception it has been under the following leaders, Fred Cooper, first organizer; Tom Cooper, RCAF; Bob Van Alstine, conductor of Toronto Symphony Orchestra, and Alfred Cooper, musical director of Belleville schools until April 1952. In June, 1952, the local leader, Maurice Bell, was engaged to instruct and conduct this band which has over 80 in the senior band and 35 in the junior group.

Since Mr. Bell took over the band's name has been changed from Trenton Lions Boys' Band to Trenton Lions Band, thus admitting girls or anyone who wishes to play, making it more of a community nature. This band is sponsored by the Trenton Lions Club and its project is to provide instruments and individual instruction for each of the junior group or any boy or girl who desires to play a band horn.

Frankford Citizens' Band

The Frankford Citizens' Band is a fine organization, under the leadership of Bandmaster Charles Butcher, and has been in existence for many years, being reorganized with the Stirling Band.

A silver collection was taken and was handed over to the Boy Scouts for their work.

Program

The program was as follows: March, "Imperial Echoes," massed bands; Waltz, "Golden Rod," massed bands; Trumpet solo, "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," Wylanne Hermiston of Warkworth; Overture, "Golden Gate," massed band; Vocal solo, "It's a Grand Night for Singing" and "Make Believe," Patricia Spear of Trenton; Trombone solo, "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" and "Lassus Trombone," Margaret Thompson of Warkworth; Novelty, "Old MacDonald's Farm," massed bands; Saxophone and clarinet quartet, "Sisters" Waltz," Marilyn Winder, Marlene McEachern, Iris Gibson, Donna Henstead, Trenton; Medley, "Best Loved Irish Melodies," massed bands; Euphonium horn solo, "Holy City," Mrs. Edna Thompson, Warkworth; Drum solo, "Our Director March," Mrs. Arlene Greenley.

During the intermission, a singsong was enjoyed by all.

March, "Hippodrome," massed bands; Brass quartet, "Our Comrades," Jack Keane, Bill Stroud, Horace Stanley, Trenton, and Edward Green, Frankford; Song, "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," massed bands; Cornet string cello solo, "Just a Wearying for You," Walter Wrightman of Trenton; Clarinet ensemble, "Little Grey Church," Trenton Jr. Clarinet Class; Bill Billy songs and impersonations, "I'm Just a Country Boy," Frank Wilson of Trenton; March, "National Emblem," massed bands; Cornet solo, "Abide With Me," Garnet Thain of Stirling.

W. R. Sweet Tells Kinsmen of Trip To Bermuda

CAMPBELLFORD — Wesley R. Sweet was guest speaker at the Kinsmen Club luncheon this week. Introduced by Forrest Dennis, Mr. Sweet gave an illustrated talk on his recent holiday in Bermuda.

The Coral Island is the holiday Mecca of thousands. Although its best hotels are lavish and costly, taxes are practically non-existent. The water supply for humans must be conserved very carefully as the coral lies only six inches below the topsoil all over the island. The roofs of the houses are cut from this rock.

No Frost in Winter

Mr. Sweet and his wife spent five weeks in Bermuda, where there is no frost in the winter and the island is kept at a comfortable though not oppressive warmth by the Gulf Stream.

A vote of thanks was moved to Mr. Sweet by Stan Macy.

It was decided to hold the annual Ladies' Night at Edgewater Park on Wednesday, April 8. Ray Hall will be in charge of the committee for this event.

A committee to make plans for the annual street carnival and dance on July 3 was formed. Discussion on the club's proposed contribution to the Coronation Day celebration resulted in the decision to enter a float in the local parade.

President Ray Hall revealed that the club, in co-operation with the Rotary Club, has been supplying milk to the junior classes at the local schools since Christmas.

TYENDINAGA EAST WI.

EMPEY HILL — Mrs. Frank Thompson was hostess on Friday afternoon last to the members and friends of the Tyendinaga East Branch of the W. I. A large number were in attendance and Miss Geraldine Mowers, the president, opened the meeting.

It was decided that the W.I. accept the invitation to visit the Napanee Branch for their June meeting. Plans were made for a quilting at the home of Mrs. Harry Sweetman, and also for the district service meeting to be held in April. Mrs. E. Waddingham and Mrs. L. Gaylord were appointed auditors.

A motto on "Education" was read given by Mrs. William Bell who also presented the duties and rules of jury duty. Since women are to serve as jurors for the first time in Ontario.

The program was in charge of Mrs. Harold Winter and opened with community singing. A reading, "Where Do You Live?" by Mrs. Garnet Dwyer. Little Miss Mary Hunter sang, "Stars in Your Eyes," followed by a reading by Mrs. Bruce Kimmerly. "Flashes From the Loving Message." "The King Came to Church," by Mrs. C. J. Akey.

An Irish contest was won by Mrs. Akey, Mrs. Thompson and the hostesses for the afternoon served refreshments.

Women's Activities

AVONDALE NEIGHBORS' AID

The March meeting of the Avondal Neighbors' Aid was held recently in the home of Mrs. Nellie Chambers, with an attendance of 19 members and two children. The president, Erma Reid, opened the meeting with a poem "Petty Annoyance."

The devotional, under Pearl Holmes, was taken from a Sunday School leaflet. Erma Reid took charge of the business portion of the meeting. Agnes Thompson was asked for someone to help her and Ethel Knight with the Brownies, and Margie Ling offered her assistance.

A committee was appointed to see about the purchase of some new card tables. The motion to hold the meeting on Wednesday instead of Thursday was rescinded, as it was found too many spring events took place on Wednesday.

Florence Bolton has offered her home to the group for the meeting in April.

Pearl Holmes, with green hat and tie, undertook the entertainment at this point. It was exclusively devoted to St. Patrick's Day with a sing-song of old Irish melodies and a few original Irish games. Everyone thoroughly enjoyed the program.

The refreshment committee: Evelyn Bird, Betty Lough, Bessie Bush and Doris McLean served the ladies with afternoon tea, breads.

SMART GARDENER

TOFIELD, Alta. (CP)—Andrew Spohn dug carrots from his garden throughout the winter, even when it was below zero. He placed a layer of straw over the carrot beds just before freeze-up and the roots stayed fresh and juicy.

Walter Shackleton Shows Fine Film 'Oddities in Wild Life'

The second Audubon Wild Life film of a series of three, entitled, "Oddities in Nature," was presented last evening in the College auditorium under the sponsorship of the Quinte Field Naturalists Club, to an ever increasing assembly of nature lovers.

A two-minute period of silent prayer on behalf of the Royal Family and in honor of the late Dowager Queen Mary, followed the measured strains of the National Anthem, rendered by Mrs. John Deacon at the organ, preceded the showing of the film.

Guest Speaker

Mr. J. Morris Smith, entomologist of the Dominion Parasite Laboratory, presided at the brief ceremonies, while Mr. H. C. Tanner, B.A. science teacher of the Collegiate, introduced the speaker, Mr. Walter Shackleton, who accompanied the pictures by a most interesting narration of them.

Mr. Shackleton is a retired business man, whose early interest in wild life stemmed from the trips he used to take through field, forest, and fen, with his uncle, and since his retirement, has devoted his time with color films in the taking of every day life of the creatures of the wild.

"The Audubon Society", remarked Mr. Shackleton, "is interested in all forms of life, not only that of the animals, birds, and flowers, but also in trees, streams, and the prevention of the pollution of the latter, and in the preservation of wild life generally. There is no greater influence for good both for old and young, as that of the great outof-doors with God's wild creatures. However, he continued, the life of the naturalist is not all roses.

Fish Story

In connection with this he told a story of the famous Dr. Beeby, whose work in deep sea creatures is outstanding, having descended to a depth of 4,000 feet in the diving bell to study the fish. One evening following a lecture, he was introduced to a lady of much means whose generosity had helped in this research. She requested to know why her gold fish had been dying, to which Dr. Beeby replied, that it was difficult to ascertain the reason without seeing the fish, and that if she would send him one, he would be pleased to assist as far as he was able in ascertaining the cause of their demise.

Thereupon, the lady, who had come prepared, gave him one of the defunct fishes wrapped in tissue.

Not knowing just what to do with it there, Dr. Beeby took out his handkerchief, wrapped up the fish, and carefully placed it in his breast pocket. Later, as he was on his way to the train, the cold, snowy air caused him to sneeze, and without realizing, he pulled forth the handkerchief, gave it a flip, and away sailed the fish out into the snow.

The Arms of the Law

Dr. Beeby did not know what to do, he had to retrieve that fish, so down he squatted, and began brushing the snow aside in search of the lost fish. While thus engaged, a measured tread came up behind him, and a heavy hand fell firmly on his shoulder, accompanied by the question, "What goes on?" To which Dr. Beeby replied, "I'm looking for a fish." As this answer somehow failed to satisfy the "arms of the law", the officer requested that Dr. Beeby accompany him to the house on the hill. Finally, Dr. Beeby managed, though not before losing his temper, when he perceived that he was quite misunderstood, by convincing officer that he was on the up-and-up!. So both together, on their way, hunted again for the search for the missing fish, with the result that the officer found it, saying as he did so, "You had better accompany me to the house on the hill."

Lovely Film

The film, which consisted of the following subjects, and lovely bits of Kentucky scenery, was one which the audience, and in the memories of those who were privileged to view it.

One of the lovely shots of birds was that of the yellow crested cardinal in the process of nest building, which showed the industrious little creature as the bird went about her weaving, woman-like first trying one place and then another, the females of the species have a soft contralto voice.

The whip-poor-will with its plaintive cry was seen sitting not sitting on the limb, as most birds, but resting lengthwise of it. Other birds included the redshouldered hawk and the duck hawk, which is swifter than an arrow, lives on squirrels and gophers.

Walking Fern

Among the wild flowers was the tall, white, waxy blossom of the Cedera, which thrives on limestone rock; the walking fern, which extends the tip of its long, slender leaf into the soil, and grows another leaf which takes one pace, thus being one step per year. Another walking fern with the same means of reproduction, was one resembling the domesticated Sword fern. Other flowers in deep brownish red, almost black lilies fluted goblets which hold water; the Squaw root, a small banana-like plant which grows from the root of the oak; the lovely mountain laurel with its clusters of softly, pink flowers; the pink cucumber magnolia tree with leaves measuring a foot in length, and flowers as large as a man's hat.

Animals

The animals showed the opossum, whose family tree dates further back than any other of similar family; the housey-fusing raccon with his dainty paws, which is so easily tamed. "It is true that the racoon won't eat anything until it is washed," said Mr. Shackleton, "is an error." The reason they use their food, is because the racoon has no saliva. This also showed the coon's ingenuity in retrieving all the grapes from a glass jar, he turned it on its side. Another shot showed a tiny paw coming up through a knothole in the floor under the rug, which was rolled up to give him food. A colon of flying squirrels was seen taking food from cupe on a tree. The flying squirrels feed only at night.

Ant-Wasp

There were shots of wasps, the paper wasps which build in trees, their care of the young; the loneby wasp; the velvet ant-wasp, most poisonous of insects, including the black widow spider, walking-stick, so like the twig branches of the trees; the Scarab bug, whose ancestors were worshipped by the Egyptians, and various spiders, the praying mantis, whose presence in any garden is worth gallons of insecticide.

Among the reptiles was the salamander, whose highly grandular skin is allergic to sunlight.

The gathering of tobacco was also shown, as well as lovely scenes of Kentucky streams, falls, and forest.

A lady from film, teaching as Wordsworth did that: "One impulse from a vernal wood will teach you more of man, of moral evil and of good, than all the sages can."

Readers' Friday Column

Confessed My Many Meeze

QUESTION:...I want to reduce but calories bewilder me. I weigh 135... am 60 years old and 4 ft. 11 in....to help you I don't care for pastries, but I love a bit of candy for dessert and salted peanuts but doctor says I can't have salt for I have Menniers disease...you know, my head aches. I love anything worse than homemade vegetable soup without salt! Is there a substitute, I never use sugar in coffee or tea. I eat a lot of meat, don't care for potatoes, eat only 2 slices bread per day. The only vegetables available at our small store are lettuce, tomatoes, cabbage, carrots, rutabaga, celery, peppers, fruits, are grapefruit, apples, oranges.

Could you make up a menu for I week at least using what I have told you. For breakfast I have two pieces of toast with margarine and lemor or marmalade and 2 cups of coffee. Please use this only for breakfasts and if too many calories, take them out somewhere else. I don't want eggs in the morning. I like fish or salmon. I have my own canning tomatoes, and buy other things as peas, beans, etc. Meats only steaks, roasts, pork, liver, sausage, bacon, ham, and also vegetable and fruit juices. Mrs. Ray M.

ANSWER: Your letter bewilders me when you say you want to reduce but don't want eggs for breakfast but do want 2 pieces of toast with honey or marmalade. I want to make one thing very clear to readers who would be willing to abide by their doctor's orders, and since you are ill in my opinion you would be wasting money to go to the doctor and yet not do what he says.

Surely you must have protein food for every meal if your health is to suffer on a reducing regime, I would be treading on very dangerous ground if I did what you suggest "if too many calories for breakfast, leave off some value." Where else would I take them off? Two slices of white bread contain 130 calories. Two slices whole wheat bread (which you should have during a whole day) have 150 calories. One tablespoon butter or margarine contain 100 calories. One tablespoon honey has 64 and 1 tablespoon marmalade 100. There you have at least 320 calories not counting the milk in your coffee. A liberal reducing diet allows you only about 1200 in a day. You should have 1 egg 1 slice whole wheat toast, one-half grapefruit or 1 whole orange and clear tomato soup for breakfast on a safe reducing diet. Then you should have LUNCHES (for reducers) (1) whole wh..at bread sandwich with ½ pat butter, and filling of thick slice lean meat or 1 whole chopped hard-cooked egg with lettuce, 1 tsp. mayonnaise or butter(with 16 grapes or 1 apple; 2) ½ cup cottage cheese on clear tomato or chicken soup, 1 sellce of whole wheat bread with ½ pat butter, cheese, tomato and slice of meat on lettuce; 3 oz. akin or boneless chicken, 1/3 banana or grapefruit. 3) 6 oz. dilute vegetable soup, 1 slice whole wheat bread or toast covered with grilled cheese; orange, 6 oz. skim or buttermilk. (Note: you ask for substitute for salt in soup—use MSG which is commercially sold under name of Ac-cent).

DINNERS (for reducer)-Broiled liver, 4 oz., brushed with 1 teaspoon butter on both sides before broiling, quick-cooked cabbage, celery stuffed with white cream cheese; water-packed peaches, graham cracker, clear coffee. 2) Four oz. of 2 cooked beefsteak including fat, sliced turnip with ½ pat butter, small baked potato including skin; fruit salad on lettuce including, grapefruit sections, orange sections, cheese-stuffed dates (3) and a little French dressing, clear coffee. 3) 6 oz. unsweetened fruit juice, 4 or 6 oz broiled hamburg patty ¾ oz cooked spinach, ½ pat butter, 1/2 cup canned peas; carrot and cucumber pickles, sliced ripe banana with whole milk, clear coffee, 4) Baked ham slice—4 oz. small baked sweet potato with ½ pat butter, stewed canned tomato with onion if desired; 1/2 large grapefruit, clear coffee.

If you read this column regularly you know by now that I hate to take any of the joy out of life, but candy is out. One chocolate mint 3-in. in diameter has 195 calories. A 1¼-in. square piece of chocolate fudge 96 calories. Is it worth it?

STIRLING

Stirling—The March meeting of St. Andrew's W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Thomas Spry on Tuesday afternoon with a splendid attendance. Mrs. L. Hodgson expressed words of welcome to the members and visitors. In her opening remarks she also expressed her gratitude to the members of the Welcome and Welfare secretaries, Mrs. W. H. V. Walker, and Mrs. Roy Hodgson, for their prompiteness in notifying the minister at New Liskeard of the visit there, as well as thanks to Mrs. Don Farmer and the others for their carrying on during her absence.

Mrs. Ken Roy read the scripture lesson from Hebrews 5: 1-10.

A letter was read from Mrs. Johansen stating that Mrs. James Johnston was the one chosen to be presented with a Life Membership which is provided for with the money sent by herself. This is a signal honor which is to be conferred on Mrs. Johnston. Mrs. Johansen's interest in the life of the W.M.S. is an example for each one to follow.

Mrs. Fargey gave a reading "The Tale of Two Gates" by Beverley Kitchen. These to use worrying over things that are beyond your power. Gates Cat you cannot open will be opened for you if it is God's will that you should go through them. Peter continued knocking and the gate was opened at last. Paul had this virtue of steadfastness in mind when he wrote "Be not weary in well doing for in due season you shall reap if you faint not."

Miss Gena Spry gave two lovely readings, the first on "Joy." The worldly person usually seeks joy or happiness in worldly amusements. The Christian desires to be happy but he also desires joy. Joy is something more lasting and more heavenly.

True Joy

True joy comes from above and is a divine something, which the world cannot understand. It depends on the promises of God's holy word.

The second reading was on Easter. The April meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Roy Appleton with Mrs. Foster and Mrs. James Johnston as helpers. Secretary Scholars, Heather Rodgers and Sally Fox delighted with a vocal duet.

Mrs. Rodgers closed the meeting. Refreshments were served by hostess, assisted by Mrs. Don Fargey and Mrs. C. B. Rollins.

Mrs. W. L. Munro expressed the thanks of the society to Mrs. Spry and her assistants for the fine missionary program and repast.

MAYOR'S BALL

VANCOUVER (CP)—The second annual mayor's ball to be held April 17 again will turn over all monetary proceeds to the British Empire Games' committee preparing for the games here in 1954. Mayor Fred Hume and Mrs. Hume are inviting other mayors and reeves, with members of the legislature.

Bound for the Far East to Entertain Canadian Fighting Forces

Vocalist Terry Dale is a rose between two thorns as Johnny Wayne and Frank Shuster cut up at airport at Malton, Ont., prior to their departure for Vancouver, en route to Japan. The stars of a radio show in Toronto which enjoys Canadian-wide popularity, the two comedians along with 11 members of their entertainment troupe, will tour Canadian fighting units in Korea and Japan for five weeks. The trip, under the auspices of the Canadian army, was the result of a poll conducted among troops in Korea last fall at which time they voted the Wayne and Shuster show as the one they would like most to see. Both men said they were thrilled at being chosen by the troops, and promised to live up to the honor by "knocking them in the aisles." — Central Press Canadian.

Sunday School Lesson:

He Died As a Seditionist

By ROY L. SMITH

Because His life launched a faith that has become a world religion, the solid economic and political facts concerning Jesus of Nazareth have been largely overlooked by the historians. Occasionally we need to be reminded that Jesus was executed by the Roman government as a seditionist. That any such charges against Him were utterly without foundation does not, in any way, alter the circumstances of His death—that He was the victim of a cowardly governor's fear of revolution.

King of the Jews

The ruling clique among the Jews, a highly unpopular group despised by the common people, persuaded Pilate to order the execution by convincing the procurator that He was a dangerous citizen, that He had conspired to overthrow the government, and lead an uprising of the people.

In accordance with Roman law, a placard was hung up on His cross announcing the crime for which He was executed, and in this case it was printed in three languages—Aramaic, Greek, and Roman—that no one could possibly be left in any doubt, "This Is Jesus the King of the Jews. It was a plain and brutal warning to any other individual who might be thinking of rebellion, that Rome granted no mercy.

The Roman Guard

Rome was nothing if not thorough. Pilate might cringe under the attacks of the Jewish priests, but he could not make a brave showing in Caesar's eyes. He set a guard of Roman soldiers to see the matter through to the last. There would be no sudden coup on the part of his followers. They would never be able to say they had rescued Him from His cross. This would be one disturber safely out of the way for all time. Something of the weakness of any strong man can be seen in Pilate's conduct from his fears.

The Man They Missed

The confusion and uneasy mind of Pilate is revealed in his proposal to the crowd that he would release to them one of their own whom he held as a prisoner. To quiet the riot he gave them their choice—Barabbas, or Jesus. They shouted, in typical mob madness, for the robber.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for March 29: "JESUS IS CRUCIFIED," Matthew 21:1-11, 27.

A playwright, with fine awareness of the vast moral issues involved, has pictured Barabbas, the escaped felon, slipping out of Jerusalem in the night, and standing for one brief moment in the shadows viewing the cross on which he ought to have hung, and saying, "That was my cross. Who was the man who hung there in my stead?"

That, in essence, is the Christian meaning of the cross—the Son of God hung upon the cross which each of us should have suffered.

He Trusted in God

There was a wild recklessness in the spirit of the mob which hung around the foot of the cross, watching the execution. There is always a segment of the population which takes a morbid delight in watching horror. Some taunted, some jested, some debated the matter as an academic issue, and some of them looked on it as good entertainment.

Perhaps He would perform another miracle, tear Himself down from those nails with that cross, and strike out again in some fantastic uprising. But nothing happened, at least in any such pattern.

He died. The nails, the cross, the thorn crown, the ebbing tide of blood, the spear! It all seemed so final! In the crisis God did not come to His assistance. At least the crowd could see no evidence of any such intervention. He had worked wonders while alive, but God failed him in the last. There would be no sudden coup on the part of His followers. They would never be able to say they had rescued Him from His cross. This would be one disturber safely out of the way for all time. Something of the weakness of any strong man can be seen in Pilate's conduct from his fears.

THE AFFIRMATION

Nicodemus was demanding to be heard.

"This case," he argued, "has fallen apart; it has collapsed. Nothing has been proved. It is already an hour after midnight. How long, then, are we to be kept out of our beds? I, for one, want to go home!"

There was no mistaking the approval than ran murmuringly through the rows of Judges; they agreed with Nicodemus.

"What should have been done here tonight," resumed Nicodemus, "is plain for everyone to see. This prisoner should have been defended much better than he has been. What if He did say He was the Messiah? Can we disprove it? His claim raises an issue of fact; it is not, of itself, in my opinion, a blasphemy.

"Oh, my Lord Caiphas, so many questions needed to be asked to lay a firm foundation for the defense of this undefended Jesus. Do we find anywhere in our history an exponent of any time when God appeared on the earth in the form of man? If we do"—and here Nicodemus slowed down and repeated with emphasis—"if we do, then how can we know that He will not do the same thing again? How can we know?

"No, no, Caiphas, please have almost finished. I insist that at the finish of this parade of witnesses, with tales that did not hang together, what, pray, is the final result? Clear as the daylight which will break before long Jesus remains an unconvicted man. I say that we should set Him free and then we can all go home to our beds where I, for one, at my age belong."

A Most Solemn Oath

Had the vote been taken then as Nicodemus sat down, the Judges might have acquitted Jesus and set Him free.

Caiphas and Annas knew that, but the long speech of Nicodemus had given the old politician just the time he needed to meet the situation. Now Caiphas, schooled in whispers by his father-in-law, stood forth to play a new and desperate part.

Erect in his gorgeous robes, the high priest raised his right hand, two fingers pointing to the ceiling. They all knew that Caiphas was about to put to Jesus the most solemn oaths known to the Mosaic code — the adjuration, the oath of testimony. But on what point?

Ah, here was that Annas had perfectly discerned the true character of his captive. Son-in-law would fail; no, he had already failed to prove the charge. But by a deep instinct the experienced Annas knew that the charge was true, nevertheless. This man did believe He was the Christ. Believing that sincerely, would He ever deny Himself?

Why, then, they could make Him commit the abomination of blasphemy in the very hearing and sight of the whole court!

"Jesus of Nazareth," cried Caiphas, in a resounding and orotund voice, "I adjure you, by the Living God, by the Almighty, that You tell us If You be the Christ, the Son of God."

A Bold Answer

In the silence then a man might have heard the fall of snow. Every person knew what this question meant. Caiphas had done more than put to Jesus the most solemn oath known to the Hebrew constitution; for such a question, silence itself was an offensive answer. As a pious and law-abiding man, Jesus now had to reply.

His answer came, clear and bold:

"You say that I am."

You say that I am! To the ears of the judges there was nothing evasive in the answer. It was idiomatic, not equivocal. By the custom of their speech, it meant: "I would not presume to contradict you."

But Caiphas was not to be satisfied by that reply. He repeated the challenge:

"Jesus of Nazareth, I adjure You by Sabaoth — the unnumbered host of heavenly angels — by the gracious and merciful God, that You tell us If You are the Christ."

Again the crystal-clear voice. "You have said."

Triumph rejoiced the bosom of the prosecutor; actually, the prisoner had already committed Himself. "You have said" was the traditional form in which a cultivated man would reply to a question on a grave or sad matter, courteous but at such a moment a direct "yes" or "no."

"Jesus of Nazareth, I adjure You, by the long-suffering and compassionate God, that You tell us if You be the Son of God!"

And then Jesus answered in a voice clear and ringing:

"I am!"

A Triumph

It was as if lightning had struck in the Hall of Unhewn Stones. Caiphas himself turned pale. Here was triumph beyond his dreams!

Caiphas took full advantage of the moment. He uttered a loud cry and fell back as Jesus went on speaking in the same calm tones:

"Nevertheless, I say to you, you shall see the Son of Man sitting on the right hand of the Power of God and coming in the clouds of heaven."

Caiphas was backing away from the prisoner, he was turning like a dervish in long circles and tearing at his own robes as if he would rip them into rents and slits and tatters. So the law required any priest to behave when blasphemy was uttered in his hearing. He must rend his garments. But the high priest, being a frugal soul, did not tear them beyond repair. And all the while Caiphas kept crying in hysterical tones:

"He has blasphemed! He has blasphemed! What further need have we of witnesses? Behold, now, you have heard! He has blasphemed!"

Then suddenly, coming to a dramatic pause, he asked in a husky whisper of the court:

"What think you?"

And from most of the scribes and priests and elders came a shout:

"He is guilty"

The faces of the Judges were pale and covered with sweat. They knew the stern duty that rested upon them. Again they cried:

"We ourselves have heard it from His own mouth. He is guilty of death!"

The Voting

Their minds were made up and their task was almost done. But even now the fate of Jesus was not fully decided.

Caiphas faced the judges. "My lords," he said, "up until now I think I have been very patient. I say that now we must seize our problem, grapple with it, and settle it."

"Question, question! Let us decide! Put the question!"

The voting began.

The peculiarities of the voting were observed to the last ancient landmark. Let it never be reported to the people that Jesus of Nazareth, or anyone else, was unfairly tried. The final speech of Caiphas was scrupulously fair: he admonished them to render an honest verdict in the secret places of their hearts where thoughts and actions were clear to the Most High.

Beginning with the youngest, a course followed only in trials for life, and advancing to the eldest in strict rotation, the high priest solemnly posed the question to which there could be but one of two answers: yea or nay. So the youngest voter present was the first called to vote for the acquittal or condemnation of Jesus.

His vote was for death.

Each Judge, on hearing his name called, scrambled up from his silken pillow, stood erect, and pronounced his verdict. Some made little speeches to explain the vote; this course was followed almost invariably by the dissenting friends of Nicodemus and of Joseph of Arimathea, and by some others too.

Not Unanimous

Caiphas did not expect a unanimous verdict; more, he did not want one. Caiphas was against all judgments speedily or unanimously voted. Such a verdict could invalidate itself. The legal theory was that if the accused had not a friend in the court, then the element of mercy was not in the hearts of his judges and so they had to let him go.

So the voting went on with yea, yea, yea, and for a long time no nays at all. But Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathea were not parliamentarians, and so they voted in strong, loud voices for acquittal.

In the very midst of the solemn voting a man came rushing down the great stairs, straight at Caiphas. The fingers of his left hand were contracted as if they would tear out the heart of the high priest; the right hand held up a bag.

"Judas Iscariot!" cried Caiphas. "What do you here!"

"I declare," cried Judas, "that this man you are condemning to death is innocent. You promised me otherwise than this. Here is your money."

And Judas cast his bag on the floor; the bag burst open, the mouth gaping, and pieces of silver rang sharply on the stone slabs and scattered gleaming like living things in all directions—one rolled to the very heel of Annas.

"I Have Sinned"

"High priest," cried Judas, "I repent myself of what I have done. I have sinned in betraying innocent blood."

In the silence that followed Judas turned agonized eyes on the calm face of Jesus, but several judges called to him.

"What is your mistake to us!" "Look you to it!" answered another.

From the throat of the lost apostle came a broken cry. He rushed to the steps and out of the Hall of Hewn Stones and the crowd parted to let him pass into the deepest darkness of the morning hours. Flying, when no man pursued him, Judas rushed into an open field where he would find a rope and a tree. There he hanged himself and dangled publicly until his body swelled up and burst.

Meanwhile the balloting resumed and presently was finished. Caiphas once more faced the tribunal.

"My lords," he said, "there is a minority of two for acquittal; all the rest are for conviction. That settles our work for now."

RHEUMATIC PAIN

Can Be Costly!

"This winter I had to quit work because of rheumatic pain," writes Mr. T. Colchester, Welland, Ont. "I became fearful of being laid up as on a previous occasion with rheumatic pain. My pain became increasingly severe and spread from my shoulder to my arm. My arm felt cold as though in cold water, so I stayed in bed. A friend persuaded me to take T-R-C's and I'm glad I did. In a short while I was relieved of my pain and was soon on the job again."

Some Aspects of Colombo Plan Topic at Women's Study Guild

Some aspects of the Colombo Plan was the topic of study and discussion at the regular monthly meeting of the Women's Study Guild held on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Varcoe, Elmwood Drive.

The business of the club was conducted by the president, Mrs. W. N. Hurst.

A worship service, led by Mrs. Routh, dealt fittingly with the theme, "Unto one of the least of these . . ."

Mrs. George Wishart introduced the topic by displaying a map of south and southeast Asia and by questioning. "Why should we be interested in this part of the world?" elicited the answer, "for reasons, political, humanitarian and economic."

Personal Contacts

Even personal contacts have been made in Belleville, as last summer three young men from Pakistan spent some time in this city, studying its government and organization, as a typical small city. Also from Belleville General Hospital, Miss Potts, superintendent of nurses, has gone to establish a school of nursing in Pakistan. Other personal contacts have been established in biological and other fields.

All political groups in Canada agree in favor of this plan, but "Are we doing enough" is the question. The United Kingdom is giving annually million pounds, Canada 25 million dollars.

The plan originated at a conference held in Colombo in January, 1950, at which the seven Commonwealth countries formed the consultative committee. Other countries have been asked to participate and have accepted.

Six-Year Plan

A six-year plan is now in operation, whose aim is to raise the standard of living in south and southeast Asia, permanently, by means of self-help, mutual help, technical assistance and capital invested by private enterprise. Thus, when in an emergency situation, a shipment of wheat or similar supplies is made direct, this is paid for in "counterpart funds" which never actually leave the home country.

Problems

Among the problems to be overcome, Mrs. H. C. Seldon dealt with the plan as it affects India. Seven river valley projects are underway, much of the work being done by hand, agricultural institutes are being established in order to increase short food supplies, transportation, industrial developments, fuel, power, resettlement of refugees (of whom there are seven millions) are all being tackled. To date the most progress has been made in irrigation and power.

Mrs. W. A. Campbell dealt with Ceylon, an island half the size of Newfoundland, containing seven million people, mostly pathetic Hindus, with a few Moslems.

Water Shortage

As Ceylon is between five and ten degrees north of the equator, heat is the big problem. There is a heavy rainfall in a short time, and their reservoirs are entirely inadequate to conserve the water for the dry season. The people live near the coast, on their crops of rice and tea, with vast quantities of fish at hand but only primitive methods of fishing and no means of preserving the fish. It was in Colombo, Ceylon's capital, that this vast plan was formulated.

Through Mr. D. M. Haywood, a fishing expert from British Columbia, sent by Canada to work with the government of Ceylon, the fishing methods are being revolutionized. Canada has also sent Mr. George Dixon, a reforestation expert, and a huge reforestation plant.

Dam and Canals

A very large dam has been built and irrigation canals to drain the inland jungles. Also, a dry-farming expert is working to grow wheat as well as the wet crop of rice. New roads are being constructed across the jungles, more air fields built, and employment for the villagers provided in industries concerned with steel, vegetable oils, sugar, paper and ceramics.

The minerals in the mountains are still unassessed. A campaign against T.B. and for hospitals and social welfare is underway.

Lower Projects

Mrs. Wishart explained that though most Canadian help has gone to India, Pakistan and Ceylon, the United Kingdom has plans for lesser projects in Burma, Cambodia, Laos, Nepal, Federation of Malaya, Sarawak, North Borneo and Viet-Nam. Other organizations co-operating with the Colombo Plan are United Nations Technical Aid, the World Bank and the World Health Organization.

Pakistan

Mrs. Seldon then told of Pakistan, a five-year-old country, carved out of India, containing 76 million Moslem people, a country where there is no threat of Communism. Two big irrigation schemes are the main project with progress also being made with hydro, livestock, agriculture and textile mills.

In summing up it was pointed out that as civilization gains in a country, the birth rate declines. Thus with greater production, there is hope the world population may someday be fed. Towards this aim, Canada spends $1 for every $100 spent for military purposes.

Informal discussion of this current news topic was continued while the hostesses served light refreshments.

WHERE PARKING IS NO PROBLEM

HOW much have automobile insurance rates increased?

- In relation to other car costs they've gone down.
  Each $100 of insurance carried takes a smaller portion of the motorist's dollar than ever before.
- But cars are more expensive.
  You can't insure the $2,400 car of today as cheaply as the $900 car of 1930.
- So, in dollars, how much have auto rates gone up?
  An average of 30% for Public Liability and Property Damage. An average of 60% for fall coverage.

WHAT affects the cost of automobile insurance?

- The number of accidents
- The average cost of accidents
- The costs of doing business
- The profit or loss of the insurance company

WHY have rates gone up in dollar cost?

- Because accident rates have been soaring.
  Today one person is killed every four hours in Canada — one person is injured every fifteen minutes — a leader is smashed every two minutes.
- Because accident costs have been soaring.
  A wrecked car costs two to three times as much to replace as in 1939 — a damaged car costs twice as much to repair — those fenders every two minutes cost three times as much.
- Because medical and hospital costs have increased an estimated 165%.
  The bill for injuries is the highest in history.
- Because average Canadian earning power is up 190%.
  That means higher payments to settle "lost time" claims.

THEN HOW have insurance companies kept rates from going much higher?

- By cutting operating costs.
  Overhead is higher, but operating costs per vehicle have been slashed.
- By losing money.
  Auto insurance companies paid out $65,000,000 in claims last year. They lost $6,3000,00 doing it.

THE REMEDY

- Reduce accidents.
  When the accident rate goes down — unless the cost of each accident goes "way up — insurance rates will go down too. Competition makes that certain.

REMEMBER—
The accident that doesn't happen never costs anybody a dime.

Basic Training of Soldiers Can Have no Short Cuts Says C. O. of Royal Canadian Regt.

By BILL ROSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

IN KOREA (CP) — Delayed) — Korea, says Lt.-Col. Peter Bingham of Petawawa, Ont., has proven that there can be no short cuts in the basic training of the private soldier.

Reviewing for the Canadian Press his unit's year in this United Nation's theatre, the officer commanding the 1st battalion, the Royal Canadian Regiment, said:

"It has shown that we must continue to insist on very thorough basic training. There are no shortcuts. You can't streamline that department the way you can others."

Bingham's battalion is up for relief during March after being relieved by the 3rd battalion, RCR, under Lt.-Col. Ken Campbell of Petawawa, which arrived in Korea on March 23.

Outstanding Year

Solid training and sound discipline, Bingham said, won the unit's outstanding accomplishment of the year—the battle of Gibraltar spur last Oct. 23. Bingham was en route back from a holiday in Hong Kong at the time.

"I take greater pride in the fact that the battalion fought and won the action while the CO was away than if I had been there," he said.

Bingham said the regiment's debut in the Korean line, from April up to July, was a time of great enthusiasm. "Everybody wanted to go out on patrol, everybody wanted to fight the enemy."

After a rest in reserve the RCRs returned to the line in August, assigned to the dominant Little Gibraltar hill.

"The whole thing had a much more serious note," Bingham said. "The enemy was in a very strong position. Here the battalion began to suffer its really heavy casualties. Patrolling no longer had the same boyish zest, things had become much more serious."

Intense Shelling

During the following 84 days the RCR was shelled with mounting intensity. Companies became exhausted and had to be relieved. The battalion's front was extended and a fifth company was improvised and thrown into the line on three hours' notice.

The Chinese poured shells and mortar bombs at a 6,000-shells-an-hour rate at 6 p. m. Oct. 23 for 30 minutes, then launched a two-battalion attack to seize Little Gibraltar's 1,500-foot peak.

A company position was overrun. The Chinese halted to consolidate. Seven hours later, after rebuffing one RCR counter-attack, they decamped as the battalion launched its second.

"Team work did it," said Bingham, "that, plus training and discipline."

"It is just as important to have a smooth-running team in this state-of-the-art war as it is in fluid war."

Is "Hook" Position

After two months in reserve during November and December, the battalion found itself shifted southeastward to the "Hook" position, then the left anchor of the Commonwealth division's front. There it relieved the 3rd battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, which was completing its first month in the line.

Since then the battalion has been in reserve.

"I would sum up our service here by saying that it has added prestige to the regiment. We have added a new regimental day to our traditions, 'Little Gibraltar Day,' which will be observed henceforth Oct. 23.

"And we have won six Military Crosses, as many as the battalions of the original brigade won altogether, and seven Military Medals.

"But most important, it has confirmed for us something we were beginning to forget. That is, there is nothing new in war."

The Last Word

"If soldiers abide by the book, by the doctrine, they will find that it covers the whole thing.

"Instructors that we have in Canada, the training manuals we have on all the aspects of war, prepare us for anything. The book is right—be it fluid war, jungle war or static war.

"This war . . . has proved that we must not skimp on basic training.

"Basic training means disciplining a soldier to instant obedience. It does not mean making a slave of him. But it conditions him to react instantly to a command in the field. It is imparted principally in drill, on the parade square.

"And a basically-trained soldier also has at his finger-tips the basic skills of a soldier, including thorough knowledge of his basic weapons—the bren-gun, the sten-gun and the rifle.

"Six months are desirable, but you can do it in three. You can't produce him in four weeks."

FREE GAMBLING WIVES

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Nine wives were arrested in a stately home on gambling charges. Police said they were playing canasta—for money. What if they were, magistrate John F. Daly wanted to know Thursday. Then he discharged them all with the terse comment: "It takes place in my home and probably in yours." He was addressing a rather discomfited young assistant district attorney.

Army Recognizes Bravery, Courage of 71 Soldiers In Korea by Granting Awards

OTTAWA (CP)—The army today recognized the bravery and courage of 71 soldiers in Korea.

The fighting men ranged from a gallant and wounded corporal who hurled himself on an attacker to save him from an exploding grenade to Brig. M. P. Bogert, the 44-year-old commander of the 25th brigade.

He then went 36 gallantry and leadership awards and 35 mentions-in-dispatches—men who tackled a treacherous minefield with bare hands in pitch dark to rescue trapped comrades; officers no violence could halt in their leadership; medical men and padres who did their duty under the most deadly conditions; men who held their groups together when the chips were down.

Longest List

In one of the longest lists of Canadian citations to come out of Korea, Brig. Bogert, soon to return to Canada, was appointed a commander of the Order of the British Empire. The citation paid tribute to his "outstand work, quick action, high example of co-operation."

Other gallantry awards were seven Distinguished Service Orders, three officers and nine members of the Order of the British Empire, six Military Crosses, 19 Military Medals and five British Empire Medals.

The coveted DSO was awarded to two of Brig. Bogert's senior subordinates—Lt.-Col. Richard Peter Bingham, 39, of Montreal, commanding officer of the 1st battalion, Royal Canadian Regiment, and Lt.-Col. Edward M. D. Mc-Naughton, 34, of Kingston, son of Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, and officer commanding 1st regiment, Royal Canadian Horse Artillery.

Col. Bingham Eulogized

Col. Bingham was eulogized for "inspiring and personal" leadership that took him frequently under fire to the most exposed positions to direct and encourage his men. Col. McNaughton's praise for his "boundless energy and enthusiasm" and his "outstanding ability, courage and success."

The DSO was awarded to Lt.-Col. John Ralph Cameron, 38, of Halifax, OC of the 1st battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry; Lt.-Col. Clive Browning Caswell, MC, 40, of Montreal, OC of the 37th field ambulance; and Lt.-Col. Louis D. Trudeau, 38, of Quebec City, OC, 1st battalion, Royal 22nd Regiment.

It was, as usual, in the citations of the men who serve with the infantry battalions that the spell and fury of combat came through best.

Protected Officer

There was the Military Medal that went to Pte. Vincent Lloyd Fenton, a 23-year-old infantryman from Kelowna, B. C. He was in a group preparing for a patrol the night of August 31 when someone dropped a live grenade. In an instant Fenton threw himself on his platoon officer who might have been killed otherwise. Fenton was seriously wounded.

There were the two NCOs who tackled a minefield with their bare hands because there was so much shrapnel lying about the detector was useless. A patrol was sent out in the field of mines on the most deadly type. For 75 minutes the two crawled in the darkness, feeling for mines and disarming them, fully aware that one false move could mean death, until they had found and removed three wounded men and the body of a fourth. Then they went back and rearmed the mines so there would be no gap for the enemy to come through.

They are Cpl. Jean Pearce, 32, of Minnow Lake, Ont., and L.Cp. Antoine Dion, 26, of Riviere du Loup, Que. Both got the Military Medal.

Responsibility Not His

The Military Cross went to 2nd Lieut. Haldane Owen Merrithew, 26, of Toronto, the officer who directed them through nearly two hours of "extremely dangerous work under the worst possible conditions" even though the responsibility wasn't really his.

There was the Military Cross that went to Lieut. Andrew King, a 22-year-old officer from Halifax and London. He went out under continuous fire to an outpost where five men had been buried alive by shellfire, where others were dead or wounded, recovered every last man and directed mortar fire that beat off another enemy attack in the interval.

And there was the Military Medal that went to Sgt. Rhoden Albert Prentice, 29, of Toronto, a cold-blooded expert at patrolling and ambush who prevented heavy casualties in one night patrol by single-handedly beating and silencing two enemy machine-guns.

The latest list raised to 293 the total awards made to army men for Korean action.

WANTS CURFEW

MINNEDOSA, Man. (CP) — The Minnedosa Home and School Association decided to press for enforcement of a 9:30 p.m. curfew for the town's younger try, contending the children are wandering the streets too late at night and are also guilty of using bad language.

CARELESS TRAPPERS

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP)—Government officials estimate that northern Saskatchewan trappers "lost" about $98,000 by submitting damaged or poorly-processed muskrat pelts for sale in the last two seasons. In the same period the similar loss on beaver pelts totalled $13,000.

Believe Mayer Gets Promise of Indo-China Aid

Visiting President Eisenhower in Washington, French Premier Rene Mayer is believed to have received assurance of more U.S. aid for the French troops in Indo-China. His plans, as outlined to the president, are believed to have included the formation of a 70,000-man native army, to be supplied with French and U.S. guns. — Central Press Canadian.

Rumor Windsor Might Quit England Forever

LONDON (AP) — The Daily Sketch said today the self-exiled Duke of Windsor and his American-born Duchess may quit Britain forever unless he receives an official appointment of some kind from Prime Minister Churchill.

The Conservative Sketch was the second British newspaper in two days to raise the question of the former King's future in the light of the death of his mother, Queen Mary.

Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express said Thursday the British people would like to see him come home. But neither the Express nor the Sketch broached the question whether he should bring along the former Wallis Warfield Simpson, for whose love he gave up the throne 18 years ago.

"His friends believe that the Duke of Windsor will leave Britain forever now that his mother, Queen Mary, is dead," the Sketch said. "Only his own sorrow could be his severest and strongest link. Only one thing might prevent him staying away permanently—the offer of an official post. His wife is waiting in New York to hear what he intends to do."

The duchess has never been received at the royal court—largely, many people believe, because Queen Mary would never accept any sort of social relationship with a divorced woman.

Wants to Serve

The Sketch said the Duke, who served as governor of the Bahama Islands during the Second World War but returned to private life when the appointment ended, has wanted "for years" to serve Britain again.

It quoted him as saying in 1949, "I do not miss being King—but I do miss my country and working for it."

"Last November, he told Mr. Churchill he would take on any job," the newspaper declared, "and he repeated that offer the day before Queen Mary's death. But so far it has not been possible for the offer to be accepted."

The Sketch said Windsor is expected to stay in Britain until the contents of Queen Mary's will are made known to the Royal Family. The newspaper reported guesses in the size of her estate range from £3,000,000 to £4,000,000. The actual amount may never be known for certain since royal wills are not made public.

FIRE INJURIES FATAL

OTTAWA (CP)—Victor Melvin Goodfellow, a 52-year-old crippled taxi stand dispatcher, died in hospital here Thursday from burns suffered Sunday when fire caused $5,000 damage to his home. Police and fire prevention bureau inspectors are investigating the possibility that the fire in the two-storey home in Ottawa west end was started by children playing with firecrackers or matches.

HELD UNFIT FOR TRIAL

MONTREAL (CP) — Raymond Reddick, 37, of Huntingdon, Que., was declared mentally unfit to stand trial when he appeared in Court of Queen's Bench Thursday on a charge of murdering his wife. Police said Reddick killed his wife when she attempted to stop him from slashing his wrists at Lacolle, Que., Jan. 23.

SAW AMPUTATES HAND

HULL, Que. (CP)—A circular power saw Thursday night amputated the right hand of 18-year-old Jean-Guy Laurin as he was cutting slab wood. The accident occurred when a large pile of wood behind him toppled over. Hospital authorities said his condition is good.

BAN BLACKJACKS

LONDON (Reuters)—The House of Commons Thursday unanimously approved a bill making it illegal to carry blackjacks, brass knuckles, stilletoes and similar concealed weapons not covered by the existing legislation.

Big Brother Sees All, Comrades

A furtive-looking Malenkov looks down on Palmiro Togliatti, Italian Communist party leader (right)), and Pietro Nenni, Leftwing Socialist party leader, in this huge poster on display in Rome. Thousands of the posters were posted on Rome walls as Togliatti and Nenni returned to the Italian capital after attending Stalin's funeral in Moscow and to receive "orders" from the new Soviet leader in view of the forthcoming Italian general election. Malenkov, though no longer secretary of the Communist party, is still the chairman of the all-powerful presidium. — Central Press Canadian.

Wellington on the Lake

A BRIGHT MARCH MORNING

Sun in a cloudless sky,
March winds at rest,
Not a stray zephyr's sigh
On the hill's crest;
Shimmering purple haze
Veiling the shore;
Symbol of summer days
With winter o'er.

List to the robin's song—
Earth now is free
And with heart beating strong
Wakens to ecstasy;
Then while Mother Earth
Is stirring with spring,
Should not the human heart
Rejoice too, and sing?

—Helen B. Anderson.

WELLINGTON — We were favored with fine weather on St. Patrick's Day. The sun was shining in a cloudless sky and the waves rippled like jewels in the sun. A fitting day for the St. Patrick tea which was held in the Town Hall and sponsired by the Guild of St. Andrew's Anglican Church. Counters laden with home cooking were supervised by Mrs. W. Davern, Mrs. King and Mrs. C. Carter. Guests were welcomed by the president, Mrs. Lewis. The tea table, attractive in lace cloth and centred with shamrocks, green candles and flags bearing the words "Erin-go-bragh," was presided over by Mrs. T. Boyle, Mrs. A. Fraleigh, Mrs. Fitzgerald and Mrs. Thompson. Guests were served at small tables by Mrs. Gairs and her assistants. The afternoon was very enjoyable.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Morton spent the week-end in Peterborough.

Mrs. J. M. Whyte, Trenton, spent Wednesday in Wellington and called on her aunt, Miss S. E. Blakely, who has been ill.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Cox have returned home after spending the winter in Florida.

Mrs. Clare Platt is a patient in Kingston hospital, where she is recovering from a recent operation.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Parker, Gail Appelby were visiting his mother, Mrs. Parker, and her sister, Mrs. Percy Cleave.

Mrs. J. Conley has returned home after spending the winter with her son, Mr. Kenneth Conley and family, Lake Shore.

Mrs. Percy Harris, who has been very ill, is now convalescent at her home here. Mr. Harris has also been ill and their many friend are anxious for their recovery.

Miss Marjorie Zufelt, student nurse in Civic Hospital, Ottawa, was severely injured in a recent automobile accident and will be confined to hospital for some time. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. V. Zufelt, Consecon, and their many friends express sincere sympathy and hope for a speedy recovery.

Wellington residents who attended the St. Patrick-entertainment Thursday evening put on by Hillier Guild in Hillier Town Hall, report a very enjoyable entertainment with Rev. C. P. Heaven in the chair. Among interesting numbers calling for encores were readings by Mrs. Mowat, music by Miss D. Alexander, songs by Ed. King and a humorous dialogue by Mrs. Rattray and Mrs. Ringerley.

A pleasant time was spent at the home of Mrs. Craig Platt on Thursday afternoon, when Mrs. Platt entertained at afternoon tea, guests including Mrs. Ernest Bond, Mrs. Harry Carley, Miss M. Blakely, Mrs. H. B. Anderson and Mrs. Wilson Ainsworth.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Carley spent Sunday afternoon in Belleville, guests of Mr. Albert Carley.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Vanderwater and Billy have taken up residence in their new home, on Clark St.

Mrs. Carl Bryant who has been a patient in Kingston General Hospital, is now convalescent at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Kirby, Gananoque.

Miss Mary Lamb and Gladys were dinner guests of Mrs. John Conley on Sunday.

MARMORA

MARMORA — The new home of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Wells on Burnhill Street was the venue for the seventh birthday meeting of the Glee Club of St. Andrew's United Church on Wednesday afternoon.

The retiring president, Mrs. Annie Lowery, occupied the chair and there were twelve members in attendance.

Mrs. E. C. Prentice contributed a pleasing solo to open the program. Next came a reading by Mrs. Charles Sopha entitled, "The New School Teacher," followed by two short, but interesting readings by Mrs. T. E. Potts.

Mrs. F. H. Wells and Mrs. E. C. Prentice then joined in the ever popular duet, "In the Garden." Mrs. Wells followed with another appreciative reading.

Officers Elected

The election of officers resulted in the re-election of Mrs. A. Lowery and Mrs. C. Sopha as president and secretary treasurer respectively.

For the refreshment period, the birthday had not been overlooked and it was allotted to Mrs. Alice Gano, the oldest member, to blow out the candles.

Canon J. M. Brownlie attended Synod committee meetings at Kingston this week.

Wilson Lumbey Sales of Madoc are erecting a new bungalow on Hays Street immediately north of the residence of Mr. James A. Rice.

F-T-E—a new source of trace elements, contains iron, manganese, copper, zinc, boron and molybdenum—in a new, slowly-soluble form.

Because F-T-E is slowly soluble, the mineral elements necessary for full plant growth stay in the root area, constantly available to plants throughout the full growing season.

A single application of F-T-E is capable of keeping vital trace elements near the roots of plants for several years.

F-T-E will not leach out : : : nor react with the soil to become unavailable to plants : : : neither rain nor surface water will remove F-T-E once properly applied.

All crops need trace elements

All crops need trace elements to reach full growth. Without the proper source of trace elements full value cannot be realized from available acreage.

F-T-E has produced beneficial effects on vegetables, field crops, fruit, shrubbery and flowers. Used with standard fertilizers, F-T-E has helped prevent crop abnormalities that are due to certain soil deficiencies.

The slowly-soluble quality of F-T-E makes trace elements available to plants and keeps them available over a long period of time. Avoid trace element deficiencies—have bigger yields—healthier crops with F-T-E.

Easy application

F-T-E can be broadcast over area to be treated or it may be mixed with standard fertilizers. In either method, F-T-E must be worked into the soil. Apply 1 lb. of F-T-E per 400 sq. ft. of surface area or 50 to 100 lbs per acre.

TWO UP!

The fifteenth opening plays and defensive play of the Campbellford Greenskirts again proved top much for the Wellington Dukes in their second Trent Valley Hockey League finals game here last night. The Dukes blew an early first period 2-0 lead and then battled in a last cause to absorb a 7-3 setback at the hands of the speedy Campbellford crew. In fairness to the Dukes they could not get their regular players skating and a few breaks would have helped. Then there was "Ozzie" Nelson in the Greenskirts' lair, who turned in another spectacular goaltending performance. The Wellington crew are far from beaten, however, but they will have to play a lot better hockey than they have displayed thus far in the series if they want to cop the title. The third game is scheduled for next Tuesday night.

GOOD START!

— Softball and minor baseball organization for the coming season got away to a good start last night with the Belleville District Softball Association being assured of six definite entries and three others of additional teams. The Belleville Minor Baseball Association at a highly successful conclave were assured of nine sponsors with more in the possible list.

Details of the meetings appear in stories elsewhere on the sports pages and the only comment necessary is that the success of both pre-season confabs assures another successful season for both organizations.

Minor baseball is assured of fair administration with the re-election to his third term of Chairman Frank Grandaise. Frank worked like the traditional horse last year, and was instrumental in ironing out more difficulties than were necessary. A feature of last night's meeting was the adoption of regulations designed to prevent occurrences that tended anything but conducive to the success of the league last season.

President Cy Barriage got his softball loop off on the right foot and with his new executive and others passed legislation that augurs well for 1953 softball in the district.

BASEBALL MEETING

The Belleville Baseball Association executive gets together at the city hall council-chambers on Sunday afternoon for the second meeting of the year, and some more interesting announcements are expected to be made. The association, including its minor divisions, has affiliated with the Ontario Baseball Association, with the senior club (the senior "A" this year) drawing a bye into the OBA playdowns.

Only fentative plans were laid down at the meeting of the Border Baseball League held in Kingston last Sunday when Belleville, Kingston and Watertown were represented themselves are definite entries. The meeting was informed that Cornwall, Brockville, Smith's Falls and Ogdensburg are prepared to enter the loop, but this matter along with other important business will be discussed at a meeting being held in the Kingston Community Centre next Tuesday night. Incidentally, Mayor John Newman, of Watertown, has been named the president of the new-formed league.

With the cost of transportation, as always, an important item in sport these days, it is said the Belleville club does not view with too much enthusiasm the idea of trekking to Cornwall.

A 1953 executive will be named at the Sunday conclave, and among other business will be a report from the minor association which held its inaugural get-together under its own head, last night. The meeting is called for two o'clock and all executive members are requested to be on hand.

Hang 5-3 Defeat on Red Wings With Sparkling Defence Play; Hawks Blow Early 3-1 Lead

By Ed Simon
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Lynn Patrick said all along that the only way to beat the powerful Detroit Red Wings is to "out-defence" them.

There were unkind guffaws from the Detroit gallery Tuesday night but Patrick's Boston Bruins defenced themselves into a 7-0 setback in the opening game of their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final. But a newly-respectful crowd began to get the idea Thursday night.

Firing only 24 shots at Detroit netminder Terry Sawchuk, the Bruins built up an early lead and proceeded to coast their men with protection for goalie Jim Henry. It paid off with a standard 3-2 victory and sent them home on even terms with the National Hockey League champions.

The less fortunate Chicago Black Hawks blew a two-goal lead and dropped a 4-3 decision to Montreal Canadiens for their second straight setback. But they caused the second-place Habitants a great deal of trouble in the end. Dick Irvin cause for speculation as to how he would fare in the best-two games away from home.

The Red Wings had a frustrating evening. Denied a clear shot at Henry for minutely on end, they still managed to fire 40 drives at Sugar Jim, but found him virtually invincible, making 36 saves in the 5 states when the Bruins were home ice.

It was a particularly wearing night for Sawchuk, who was trying for an NHL record of four straight shutouts and had his string broken on a play that clearly took out the way the Bruins planned it.

Johnny Peirson passed out from behind the Wings' net to Eddie Sandford. The puck bounced over Sandford's stick and landed in front of Fleming Mackell, who whacked it home.

Less than a minute later, Gordie Howe tied the score, but Dave Creighton scored the first of two goals to give the Bruins a 2-1 lead before the first period ended. Joe Klukay, Peirson and Creighton built up a commanding lead before Metro Prystai narrowed Boston within 30 seconds in the third period for the shattered Red Wings.

At Montreal the Black Hawks threatened to skate the Canadiens out of the rink in the opening frame as Jimmy McFadden scored two goals and George Gee added a third before seven minutes rad elapsed. Floyd Curry got the first Montreal tally during the scoring flurry.

But the Canadiens took hold in the second period, with Dickie Moore, Bernie Geoffrion and Dick Gamble providing the scoring power to give them the lead. Careful defensive work kept the Hawks from tying the score in the scoreless third frame.

Both winning clubs may have lost a man through injuries. Klukay of the Bruins suffered a back injury when he fell into the boards and was helped from the ice. Montreal's Pal Meger suffered an injury to his right eye when he collided with Jim Peters of the Hawks in the first period and was taken to hospital.

Both series resume Sunday night with the Wings at Boston and the Canadiens at Chicago.

'Little Yid' 11-Year-Old Dark Horse 9-1 Favorite for Grand National

By Sterling Slappey

AINTREE, Eng. (AP)—An 11-year-old dark horse named Little Yid emerged today as the 9-to-1 betting favorite for the wide-open 107th running of the Grand National steeplechase Saturday.

The probable field for the perilridden daylong charge of four miles and 856 yards over 30 murderous fences was cut to 37 with the announcement that Stormhead was a doubtful starter and Shock Tactics, Roman Fire and Just Joe were scratched.

A mysterious flood of money poured in on Little Yid at the next to last callover of odds by London bookmakers Thursday night. The final callover—a private affair where the bookmakers attempt to balance their books—will be staged tonight.

The Irish hot shot, Early Mist, which had been the favorite at 100 to 9 drifted out to 100 to 7. So did Lucky Dome, another Irish hope which had been second choice at 100 to 8.

Glen Fire, a slow but steady jumper, also found strong support and finished up as a 100-to-8 second choice to Little Yid.

The cause of the enthusiasm for Little Yid and Glen Fire was hard to find.

Little Yid has run only twice over any portion of the course. He was beaten in the Topham Trophy chase by 20 lengths last season but was a three-length winner earlier this year in the Mollyrose chase. In his last three races on taster courses Little Yid was fourth, third and second.

In Little Yid's favor, he at least has a rider who knows how to get around the Aintree jumps—Jimmy Power won the race on Freebooter in 1950.

Most connoisseurs of the leapers say this is the cheapest field for the world's blue ribbon chasing event in many a year. The winter book favorites were Teal, last year's winner; Legal Joy, which finished second, and Wot No Sun, third last year and second in 1950.

Legal Joy and Wot No Sun went into early training and had to be scratched. So did Royal Tan, an Irish entry, which fell at the last fence last year while running third.

That turned this "10-minute ride through hell" into anybody's race.

The passing of the favorites left only Mont Tremblant as a mount with known and acknowledged class, but Mont Tremblant never has bucked the Aintree fences. Furthermore, he will carry 175 pounds, and that's a load.

Time has proved that becoming the favorite and winning the Grand National are vastly different propositions. In the last 26 years only two favorites have won—Sprig in 1927 and Freebooter in 1950.

About 250,000 fans are expected to be here at post time 3:15 p. m. (10:15 a. m. EST).

The winning horse will receive £9,808 ($27,456.20). Second is worth £2,134 and third £53.

Western Football Union Approves Commissioner

EDMONTON (CP)—Appointment of a full-time league commissioner with wide powers was approved Thursday by the Western Interprovincial Football Union on the eve of the annual meeting of the Canadian Rugby Football Union.

WIFU president Walter Sprague of Edmonton said that five men, all with football backgrounds, were considered for the post and this was narrowed down to two. The choice is expected to be announced Saturday.

The league executive also named the date of the 1953 Grey Cup semi-final in the West between the WIFU champions and the Ontario Rugby Football Union titlists.

The sudden-death playoff with the ORFU champions, to be alternated annually between the WIFU and the Big Four, will be played Nov. 21 this year at the home of the western champions.

Bantams to Get OMHA Trophy

TORONTO (CP)—Jack Christie, secretary of the Ontario Minor Hockey Association, announced Thursday night that the loser of the OMHA bantam B finals will receive a trophy. The teams involved, Newmarket Smoke Rings and Goderich Lions, have already played a two-game, total-point series but both games were tied 3-3 and 4-4.

Another two - game, total - point series was scheduled and the first game of the second series ended in a 3-2 deadlock after 40-minutes of overtime. The second game is scheduled for Goderich Saturday with the winner receiving the A. A. Morrison Trophy.

The series was so close that the OMHA decided to award a trophy to the losers.

Sports Roundup

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Chicago White Sox are a better ball-hitting club and are being driven with a grim intensity by their manager, Paul Richards, in the waning days of the western exhibition season.

Give them a little pitching and they are going to be hard to head off this year. They are in terrific condition from their preliminary training. The veteran Vern Stephens, for example, says he is a dozen pounds lighter than he has been for years and claims he will "play all of 'em" at third-base.

Somehow, Richards has infused his club with a terrific winning spirit. This team believes it can beat both New York Yankees and Cleveland Indians to the wire.

The big excitement at the moment centres around a rookie catcher, Bob Nieli Wilson, who was voted the most valuable football player in the western conference in 1950, when he was centre and linebacker for Wisconsin.

Two weeks ago Richards didn't mention Wilson in discussing his team. Since then the big fellow, who was at Seattle last year, has gone wild with the bat and has more or less established Phil Rizzo, with his work behind the plate. Now Richards say confidently that he has "high hopes" for him.

Another who has Slight fire is Enoco Kramich, an infielder who joined the Sox from Seattle late last season. He also has been hitting above expectations, especially with men on base, and there is no certainty at all in some minds that he won't play about as much third-base as Stephens does. He is much the better fielder of the two.

Campbellford Whips Wellington 7-3; Take Two-Game Lead in ITVL Finals

Campbellford Greenshirts tossed aside an early first-period two goal lead established by the Wellington Dukes and went on to win the second game of the best-of-seven Trent Valley Hockey League finals by a 7-3 score in Memorial Arena last night. The third game is scheduled for next Tuesday.

Doug Jeffs' "Greenies" went on to knot the count at two-all in that first terrific heat, outscored the foemen from the lakeside village 3-1 in the second chapter and fired home two insurance markers in the third while successfully holding off the Dukes' desperate bid to narrow the margin.

The Dukes after the first-to ring splurge seemed unable to get untracked. Their passing plays were not clicking and the majority of their individual scorers were nullied by the hard, body-to-body checking of the speedy Campbellford forwards and a hard-hitting defence.

He Was Good

Then, too, there was "Ozzie" Nelson, a gentleman who is the custodian of the Greenshirts' twine who dived, spiralled, spun and whirled to kick out what seemed a thousand destined Wellington pucks. He has been one of the outstanding stars of the Campbellford team in the series.

The Greenshirts after the sudden first-period setback, suddenly spun to life. Free out the lead to a single and Blake tied the pastime up with seconds to go. Their passing plays and one, two and three-man breakaway surprise which usually carried them to the goalmouth were one of the features of the game. Two of the goals were specials on individual efforts by the veteran Wm Blake.

The same player gave them a one-goal lead after 43 seconds of the second period and Jeffs added another three minutes later. Gower tied the count to one with two minutes to go, but Simpson, with Jeffs and Wilson got that one back with the timekeeper's hand on the gong.

Young Star

Wilson, a 16-year-old winger, who is said to be wearing a Boston Bruins' sweater the Greenshirts into a 6-3 lead two minutes after the third period opened with Jeffs and Simpson supplying the assists. Cole locked the door between times, sinking the rubber from Free's goalmouth pass.

The game was fairly rugged at times with Referees "Red" Carson and Vern Gover handing out eleven penalties, one a major, with the winners drawing the odd one. Wilson and Gover tossed their gloves in the dying seconds of the game and started a Marciano-Walcott but they were pulled apart by officials with Wilson drawing a "diver" for fighting.

Wilson, Blake and Free, not forgetting Nelson, starred for the winners with Blake getting a pair of goals, Wilson one and two and Free the same. Jeffs, Simpson and Cole supplied the rest. Free got back in the nets for the Dukes and kicked out plenty of Campbellford rubber. Gover led the offensive with two goals with Graham getting the other, for Wellington.

Hardwicks, CNR Lead Major 'A'

With the CNR (3170) running into a 7-0 snag at the hands of the G. E. Woods (3631) team, Hardwick Printing (3428) took five points from the Belleville Golf (3373) squad to earn themselves a first-place tie in the Major "A" Bowling League. Both teams have 22 points.

The league race is a close one with only four points separating the first six teams. The loop has two more nights to play to declare a fourth-quarter champion.

In the other games, Schwab's (3581) took five from Moore's Cheesiers (3458) and Upper Canada News (3547) edged Lawn Bowlers (3527) by a 4-3 count. Roger McGinnis was high man of the evening with a triple of 877 and single of 345. Other good scores were: C. Marriott 874 (365); H. Wilbee 793 (303); A. Hilchen 781; W. Bateman 767; W. BELFAST TEAM WINS

VANCOUVER (CP)—Giving a brilliant display of English rugby, the Queens University team of Belfast, Ireland, opened its British Columbia tour Thursday with a 19-10 victory over University of British Columbia Thunderbirds.

Six Teams Enter Softball League; Juniors 'In'

The Belleville and District Softball League is going to have a junior team again this season.

Application for the Glen Ray juniors, made by Don McNevin at the second meeting of the league last night. In the city hall, was approved.

On top of that, there were five other teams noted as being definite applicants. They are listed as follows: Frankford, Wooler, Point Anne, Rakelite and Northern Electric. C.N.R. "A", the R.C.A.F. and Trenton town have been named as three other possible applicants in the league this year.

Fire Chief Gerald Vance was appointed to the advisory board and also to the post of peewee baseball convenor. The chief and the men of the fire department have been extremely active during past years in peewee sport.

Although not definite as yet, it is expected the schedule will get underway around the 24th of May, the previous years. It has been the practice to begin the games on this date. The entry fee was set at $25 for each team entered. This is the same price as last season.

After considerable discussion, it was decided all umpires are to be properly attired this season for league and play-off games. The umpires will be expected to supply their own uniforms. At the present time, the name of umpire in chief for this season has not been fully decided upon. However, if no further names are turned in, Ken Thompson is the position at the next meeting, last year's umpire. "Cy" Young will likely get the job.

Minor Baseball Association Lays Foundation For Season's Operations

Solid groundwork for the 1953 operations was laid at the inaugural meeting of the Belleville Minor Baseball Association held at Kiwanis Centre last night.

The association, while still part and parcel of the Belleville Minor ball Association, will operate this season as a separate entity. This was decided on a motion at the meeting of the parent body held here last Sunday.

Frank Grandanes was the unanimous choice for the vacant but tended meeting as chairman for 1953. It will be his third term. "Red" Doran was named vice-chairman, W. J. Brennan, secretary, succeeding Jimmy Driscoll and Bill Hurst was re-elected treasurer.

Conveners named were: peewee division, Alderman Art Keegan; batam, Don Fraser; midget, Don Dolan and juvenile, 'Cal' Point Anne. Each has power to add to his committees.

Entries Accepted

Nine entries were accepted and it is expected one or two more will be available before the season opens. Entered are Canadian Legion, Frankford; Chevrolet Motors; Canada Cement Co.; Point Anne; Bryson Rod Regents; Drive - In Theatre; Schwab; Trenton and Avon Jewelry.

Grievance and schedule committees were set up with Harvey E. Hall, Ron Dolan and Art Dash forming the former and Geo. H. Carver, "Red" Doran and Reginald Reid looking after the schedule.

Out of the lessons learned last year emerged several changes to be signed to do away with petty differences that cropped up and which were not governed by ruling. Principal among these was the motion, unanimously carried, that the teams finishing at the top of the respective leagues standing, will represent the city in the OBA playdowns, if so sponsored. These teams will be allowed to draw three additional players from their leagues.

In an effort to do away with the possibility of "tired looking" it was decided to hold a meeting of the individual classes to equalize the draw strength. On the night of selection, players will be asked to sign certificates as to which team they will play for. The suggested idea of "sale and trade" was vetoed.

Must Get Permission

Another important motion was that of "Red" Doran to the effect that no team will be allowed to play exhibition games outside the city without the consent of the chairman. This rule, being well iron out a lot of difficulty that cropped up last year.

When the question of playing fields came up, "Red" Doran told the meeting the Belleville Baseball Association had allotted one night a week at the Exhibition Grounds. He understood the Alemite field would be available for another night. There is a possibility the CNRAA field will be used. The Point Anne team will play all its home games on its home diamond.

Chairman Grandame stressed the importance of managers using their own material as far as possible, and not juggling their teams. "The aim of this organization," he said, "is to promote good sportsmanship among the boys, and after all, the sponsor must be considered."

Among other resolutions passed were those that "call for the bats and balls used be according to the regulations, and that fifteen minutes' grace be given to teams after starting time.

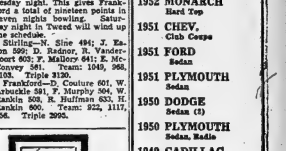
Flyers Edge Stamps 5-4

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

A goal by Earl Reibel with 39 seconds left to play gave Edmonton Flyers a hard-fought 5-4 victory over Calgary Stampeders Thursday night in the second game of their best-of-five Western Hockey League quarter-final playoff.

The Flyers lead the series 2-0, Jim Anderson fired two goals for the victors. Leon Bouchard and Ray Hannigan fired singles. Enio Selkirki connected twice for Calgary with Skvetz and Frank Ashworth tallying singles.



Saskatoon Quakers opened their best-of-seven semi - final series against New Westminster Royals with a 4-2 victory. Ran Manson, Jackie McLeod, Jim Ross and George Sentic divided the Quakers' goals. Blinky Boyce and Jerry Cabana counted for New Westminster.

Frankford — Frankford's entry in the Trent Valley Bowling League had their usual luck this week, as they managed to take two points from Stirling Wednesday night. This gives Frankford a total of nineteen points in seven nights bowling. Saturday night in Stirling will wind up the schedule.

Timmins, Porkies Play to Draw

NORTH SYDNEY, N.S. (CP)—Timmins Combines and Northside Franklins battled to a 4-4 overtime tie Thursday night in the second game of their best-of-seven Eastern Canada Memorial Cup semi-final series.

The Combines, who won the opening game in a rough and slippery locale, slipped into a one-goal lead in the first period, held it as each team scored a goal in the second, and came out with a 5-3 win in the third period.

Each squad managed a tally in the 10-minute overtime, with Combines' Gerry Cheevers at 7:25 to avoid defeat. There was no sudden death period, the series being decided on points. The third game is here Saturday.

Goalie Joe Collins of Northsider had a busy night, stopping 65 shots of 62 of them in the third.

Art Mousley, at the opposite end of the ice, also had a rough time, especially in the second. Northside Franklins missed enough chances to take a commanding lead.

Time after time they roared through the Combines defence, only to be foiled by Mousley.

Dutchies Come from Behind to Edge Sudbury Wolves in Series Opener

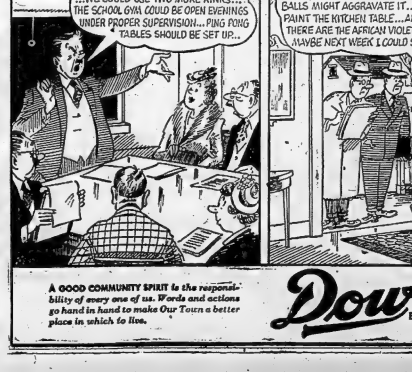
KITCHENER (CP)—The North Ontario Hockey Association Senior A champions, Sudbury Wolves, Thursday night dropped their first playoff game in 12 starts.

The Wolves, who won the NOHA southern group, won their group semi-finals in three games, the title is four-of-seven and eliminated Rouyn Flashers, northern group winners, in four games to take the NOHA championship.

Sudbury almost kept their clean slate intact last night but Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen, Ontario Hockey Association Senior A title-holders, rapped in three goals in the third period to take the first game of a four-of-seven series for the all-Ontario senior A championship. The series is also for the Cup Eastern Canada semi-final.

The Wolves put on a good show for two periods and with a little more luck might have been farther ahead than the 2-1 margin as they held after 40 minutes of play.

They appeared to fade in the final frame when the Dutchmen, who had been playing somewhat over-confident, settled down to positional hockey.



Marv Burton and Gord Heale fired the Sudbury counters, both in the first period and both with the Wolves holding a numerical defence looking none too sharp.

Burton got his by picking up a loose puck off Gene Martin's skates at 11:50, Don Rope sandwiched Gene Dutchmen tally of the first two frames between that with a goal by Sudbury's Heale at 14:42.

The Wolves had an edge in play in the first minute of the third. Charlie Brooker got the winner at 6:20 on Martin's assist set up in front. Don Bauer collected the insurance goal on a clever rink-long play with Art Hurst.

There were only eight minor penalties, six of them to Sudbury and four to Len Speck who was ride-lined when Dutchies scored both their first two goals.

Centre George Delellice of Sudbury suffered a leg injury when he crashed into the boards in the second period and did not play in the final stanza.

The Kibitzer

If you bid wrong you must not go around complaining if it turns out wrong. The wall by south is that he went down several tricks at six spades in the beautiful deal shown here:

♠2
♥A 10 9 6 5 4 2
♦5 3
♣J 8 2

WEST
♠10 8 7 4
♥Q 8 7 3
♦10 6 5 4
♣Q 3

EAST
♠K J 6 4
♥K 2
♦J 9 7
♣7 5 4

SOUTH
♠A Q 9 7 5
♥None
♦K Q 8 2
♣A K 10 6

The correct bidding should go like this:

South	North
2 S	3 H
4 D	4 H
5 C	Pass

When you bid three suits it is a demand for a choice. Partner should take it to, or leave it in, or raise it in the suit in which your pair has the most cards.

Having bid three suits you have told partner you are either void or nearly so in the suit you have not mentioned. And only he knows the total length of each in your combined hands.

Right from the start both partners knew they had power enough for game, thus ruling out a slam. But until one or the other knows of a satisfactory trump suit, going to a slam is dangerous.

For this reason, neither partner bids four no-trump or other tip that asks for slam information. Consequently, they must concentrate on a game contract that gives the best prospect of making.

Lacking support for either of the three suits bid by south, north must show that they have the most cards in that suit. He can do this by passing the last bid of five clubs.

Of course, north could get stubborn and bid his hearts again; that is, say five hearts. This he could make with two trump losers, but he can't know that south is probably void in hearts.

Against clubs west will no doubt lead a heart and it happens that six clubs will make, but six should not be bid. Just lucky.

Smiths Falls Ousts Beavers

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—Smiths Falls Rideaus won their Allan Cup eastern semi-final by trimming Saint John Beavers 5-2 Wednesday night and taking the best-of-seven series four straight games.

The winless Beavers threatened to force at least one more game when they tied the count at 2-2 after 11 minutes of the last period but Smiths Falls put on enough pressure to decide the series.

Orval Gravelle, Stu Smith and Johnny Muretich combined for the last three goals. Gravelle shot the winner and added another before Muretich ended the scoring.

Dusty Blair and Alf Webster counted in the first period. Lou Kiley, Saint John playing coach, fired an orphan marker in the middle session and Johnny Coyce knotted the score at 11:43 in the third.

Ronnie Digour played sensationally in the Saint John nets. He made 40 saves against 22 by Johnny Craig.

Although outscored 2-0 in the first, the Beavers' appeared to have an edge during that session. Blair Dusty opener from about 15 feet sur with Gordie Scott assisting.

Then Dusty helped Webster to make it 2-0. Saint John's Nick Nicole, protesting too vigorously that the goal was offside, received a misconduct. The Rideaus were a man short when Kiley scored in the second.

Roughness accompanied apparently ill feeling, although fewer penalties were called than in Tuesday night's game.

After the half way mark of the final session, Choyce knotted the count for Saint John. Kicked near the blue line, he took a pass and fired through a forest of play. Mrs. Craig couldn't see the shot.

Beaver hopes were shortlived. Gravelle scored the winner after deciding goal at 12:32 when Doug Hewgy failed to cover him. Gravelle shared a quick brace with Muretich after the 18-minute mark.

Remember When

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Winnipeg's famous Elmwood Millionaires junior hockey team defeated Ottawa Primroses at Ottawa to win the third and deciding game for the Memorial Cup, 22 years ago today. Billy Mackenzie was a potent factor in the Winnipeg victory, and Bill Cowley was a star with the Ottawa club.

Sport in Brief

LONDON (Reuters) — Brgdford defeated Scunthorpe 2-1 Thursday in an English League Division III (Northern) soccer match.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—Australian Frank Sedgman defeated Jack Kramer 6-4, 6-3 in their pro tennis tour' match here Thursday night, lopping the American's lead in the series to 34-22. In the other singles, Pancho Segura topped Art McGregor 6-3, 6-3, giving Segura a 43-14 lead.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

No story I have ever written has evoked as much fuss as the one in which Crawford lambasted Monroe for appearing to believe her sexy publicity. So perhaps we'd better review how it all happened and what has happened since.

The story was no press agent's plant. Crawford's press agent probably would have shushed her up if he had gotten the opportunity. I was lunching with Crawford and we were discussing her new TV venture, academy awards and other topics. Nothing exciting had evolved, so I tossed Monroe at her. That did it.

The Monroe thing had been brewing for a couple of weeks. Her picture had failed to do the business expected of it, and women's clubs were beginning to protest about her sexy advertising and publicity. Columnists took at the Photoplay dinner.

Monroe loomed up in one of her truffle - stopping movie gowns. When she went up to get her award, she put on a life-saving exhibition that brought the house down. Many of the onlookers were amused; Crawford wasn't. Hence the blast.

Monroe Declined

Since the AP always gives the opportunity for both sides of a controversy to be heard, Monroe had a chance to answer Crawford's statements before they appeared in print. She declined.

When the story appeared, things started popping. Some columnists came to Monroe's defense. Most of the commentators noted that Crawford had a pretty racy build-up when she was a starlet in the flapper days. (But isn't that all the more reason why she should be qualified to comment?)

This week Mike Connolly of Hollywood Reporter said "somebody important" at 20th-Fox would tell Crawford: "Don't apologize to Marilyn. Your advice was good for her."

That seems to be the consensus. Her bosses at 20th-Fox are concerned about overdoing the sexy build-up and make a star out of her. But now she has become much more conservative.

AT THE DRIVE-IN

"Fort Defiance" is Technicolor

Ben Johnson, a Civil War veteran, comes back to kill Dane Clark because the latter deserted under fire and caused the annihilation of Ben's company. Arriving at Fort Defiance, Ben strikes up a friendship with a young rancher, Peter Graves, who is blind. Graves and Dane Clark are brothers. Then Ben is told Clark was killed while attempting a bank robbery. He goes into partnership with Graves on the ranch, but this harmonious life is threatened with the arrival of gunfighters led by Craig Woods, who also seek to kill Clark. Next time he's dead at all—returns, slays two of the gang and gets into a terrific fight with Ben. Subsequently Ben, Clark and Graves fight off a Navajo attack. Then, in a showdown battle with Woods, Clark and the gunfighters are all slain.

AT THE DRIVE-IN

"When in Rome"

A young parish priest Van Johnson, journeys to Rome during the Holy Year. His roommate on the voyage is Paul Douglas, a hardened convict. To escape the law when the ship docks, Douglas steals Johnson's clothes, passport and money, and disguised as the priest journeys with other clerics to a monastery. Later Johnson encounters Douglas and tells him he must turn him over to the police despite the belief the man is beyond salvation. Subsequently Douglas announces a plan to redeem himself by making a pilgrimage to four churches, and Johnson goes with him on the mission. They become separated, and Johnson unwittingly gives the police a clue to Douglas' whereabouts. Douglas eludes capture and Johnson finds him at a monastery where the convict has joined the order and is now a man of God.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR SATURDAY, MARCH 28, 1953.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—With true Aries ambition and leadership, you can turn today to high credit and achievement. Fine aspects with which to work. Personal interests freshly favored.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—By p.m. you should be on to high attainment, making good headway in business, financial or just home affairs. Dealing in maritime, transportation matters; chemicals, oils sponsored.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Hold everything! (Means tongue, too.' Much depends on how you apply yourself to conditions; circumstances. Watch health!

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Some unrealities. Build worthy friendships, promote harmony. Be smartly agreeable, gentle but firm.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo)—More pep needed now. Avoid moodiness. Be dignified and build happiness.

August 2c to September 23 (Virgo)—Astute business sense needed to round out gains now. Don't become involved in needless large or costly propositions. Be conservative.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Happy situations; move new gainful indications. Business, professional affairs have excellent chances. Heart interests share favorably.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorio) — Employment, social affairs involving many persons, business sandling large accounts under new stimulus. Equally favored: Romance, domestic activities.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Planetary outlook generous. But don't undertake what you cannot complete. Tend promptly to what is urgent. Rate action carefully.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn) — Results can be what you want but it will take more than wishing. Energetic steady effort will bring desirable achievement.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius) — Problems, money matters to the fore. Stress patience, caution, diplomacy.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces) — Mildly stimulating rays. You must put that extra push behind each try, and know what you are doing.

YOU GORN TODAY: Mars (ruling planet) says you possess many attributes of forceful leadership. Bravery is a top characteristic. Others are enterprise, energy, zeal. Avoid hasty decisions, rash words, envy. Pray always. Birthdate: Pierre Simon Marquis de Laplace, Fr. mathematician, astronomer; Paul Whiteman, noted band conductor.

Why We Say—

"POOLS RUSH IN WHERE ANGELS FEAR TO TREAD"

We use this expression quite often when dealing with the younger generation. It was coined by Alexander Pope (1688-1744), an English poet who lived in the days before anyone ever heard of newspaper critics, but merely wrote poetry. Who is free Pope? Who is a critic?

Answers in free Pope's dictionary in addition to Avds' school.

MOIRA

MOIRA — Mr. Milton Thompson, Mrs. Jim Hughes and Mrs. Viola Reid, Toronto, spent the week-end with their mother, Mrs. Gilbert Thompson, who is ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Irwin and son, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Graham and baby, Frankford; Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Kellar and baby, of Stirling, were Saturday evening supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Kellar and Douglas.

Maple syrup season came in a hurry and is leaving in the same way but the heavy rainfall has started the grass and tulips are peeping through the ground.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Elliott and Carol are moving to Foxboro in the near future as Harold is engaged as cheesemaker in Foxboro factory and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ploequin are taking charge of the farm.

The W.I. meeting was held at Mrs. Donald Hulbert's on Thursday afternoon.

Moira W. A.

The monthly meeting of Moira W.A. was held at the home of Mrs. Blake Kelcheson in the afternoon. The president, Mrs. Donald Hulbert, opened the meeting in the usual manner with Scripture reading from "The Ark," by Mrs. Wesley Farrel and prayer by Mrs. Gowsell.

A reading by Mrs. Harold Elliott, "The Size of Your Heart," solo by Mrs. Nelson Welsh, "On the Royal Telephone," reading by Beatie Hulbert, "All the Way the Savior Leads Me." Letters of appreciation and thanks were also read.

Business followed with plans being made to cater at Scott's Sale Barn.

Mr. and Mrs. Blake Ketcheson spent Sunday afternoon and tea with their daughter, Mrs. Olive Williams and family, Frankford.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Fisher and children, Tweed, were Sunday afternoon callers of Mr. and Mrs. Donald McInroy and Diane.

SCOHARIE

SCHOHARIE — Mrs. Ralph Stone, Mrs. William McGee and Mrs. John Shaw were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Leavitt, Wooler.

Mrs. William McGee is helping Mrs. Sid Lockyer for a few weeks and Mr. McGee is working with Mr. Earl Thompson, Picton.

Mrs. Ronald Foster and little daughters, Rhonda and Kathy, returned to Toronto Tuesday. She was accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Shepard of Bloomfield, who will visit relatives there.

Ross Foster accompanied Mr. Sidney McDonald and a group of Junior Farmers to Peterborough on Wednesday to judge grain and seeds at the Seed Fair. He was fortunate in winning most points for Prince Edward group and first in barley in entire group and third in points in entire group in all classes of judging.

Mrs. John Shaw spent a couple of days last week visiting Mrs. Lawrence Burford, Picton.

Theodore Foster attended the Co-op banquet Tuesday evening at Bloomfield United Church Sunday School rooms.

Mrs. Norma Foster attended a "Chapter" supper at Napanee on Tuesday evening.

Carman Hobson had the misfortune to cut his hand while sawing wood. Roger Hobson has been helping his uncle with the barn chores since the accident.

Search For a Hero

By Thomas Hal Phillips

The town was not large; it grew out of the earth like tombstones. We went ashore in Shipping boats, and when we stepped onto the quay, a flock of pigeons landed before us, their green necks perking in the sunlight, their red feet mincing over the cobblestones. They were not afraid.

• • •

We were quickly picked up and hustled away from the docks through a tunnel to a replacement pool.

There was mail waiting for us; I had a few Christmas cards, and a box of candy from Meb. There was a letter of two sentences, written in pencil, from Wallace. "The semester will be over in two weeks. Where is there room in the master sheets of each craft in that area. We found Dave's name listed on the crew of the LCI-003.

We found Dave in the engine room of the Double O Three, grease all over him, working by the light of battle lanterns. Bert said, "What kind of butter bowl did you find, again sir?"

He did not seem surprised to see us, he said, but with meticulous housekeeper when sudden company finds her house out of order, that skipper let all the motor-macs go ashore, and this later," he tapped the generator, "conked out. Me trying to fix it, and I don't know enough to be a fireman."

"What's the matter with the other one?" Bert said.

"It's a lemon. Always broke. We're waiting on a part for it right now."

Bert went down and looked at the generator, like the way Rufus Cole might look at a horse.

"When did you two get here?" Dave said.

"Today."

"How did you leave things in good ole Little Crick?"

"I told 'em to shove me or the Creek, or they shoved me. But I'd as soon be here as there. You speaking any A-rab? We've come to get you to show us the ropes."

"I'm stuck here for today. The skipper's entry as a fruitcake, letting all the motor-macs run off."

"And French cuties in the town?"

"Some. But the army got here first, remember?"

• • •

Bert took off his peacoat and his blouse, handed them to me, and began to inspect the generator. Within a few minutes somebody appeared at the top of the ladder and poked his head through the manhole. "Dave! It fixed yet?"

"Not yet."

The face was gone and we could hear pacing over us.

"Who was that?" Bert said.

"The captain. Yoset the Talian."

"He calls you by your first name?"

"He calls you anything. His name is Joseph Taylor. When we were in England, he told us that his granddaddy used to be a very expensive tailor in London; but on the way from England here, he told us his granddaddy was a jeweler. There's some kind of feud going on now between him and the other two officers—they won't speak to him. The crew hates him only day leaves him the next. Where'd you ever learn about Diesel engines?"

"I messed around with them one summer in Oklahoma. Don you'd just as well go put the things down. It'll take another hour. The trouble is the fillers, Dave."

I took the coats topside and came back to watch. Within a few minutes the face appeared again at the top of the ladder. The hair on the slightly bald head stood up like the bristles on a worn-out brush.

"Dave! You finished yet?"

"Thirty more minutes, skipper."

The face went away.

"Dave said, "He wants to go see some old babe at the Continental Hotel."

The face reappeared quickly. "That's not true. I'm not going anywhere. How much longer is it going to take?"

"Twenty-seven more minutes, Captain."

"Who's that down there with you?"

"Friends."

"Where's Cary?"

"He said you gave him special liberty."

"I didn't tell him that."

The face went away.

"I feel sorry for you," Bert said, "having a crazy captain like that."

"You haven't seen anything. The day we came in here the lead ship sent us a message that we were in a mine field, and the captain said, 'Aw, we're just drawing six feet of water and the mines are anchored at eight feet.' I think he joined to get away from his wife."

"Maybe she beats him," Bert said. "Too bad you got stuck in on it. Try it now."

Dave started the generator. It worked, and shouts went up from various parts of the ship. The face appeared again at the top of the ladder. "Is it fixed now?"

"Completely, Captain, I hope all the particles are sucked out."

We went up the ladder. The captain stood aside for us to pass.

"Captain, I'd like to make you acquainted with two of my buddies. Bert Martin and Don Meadows."

Then captain shook hands with us. He was a full lieutenant, medium-sized, red-faced, with pale blue eyes; his khaki blouse was much too long for him and made him look shorter than he was. He grinned all the time, talked with some difficulty (apparently his teeth did not fit properly), and frequently made a small rolling laugh.

"What ship are you on?"

"Hoge, sir," Bert said, "we lost our gun crew today, to the replacement pool."

He looked at our ratings, and found nothing because Bert's blouse was off and my peacoat was on. "You're a motor-mac" he said to Bert.

"Yes, sir. Signalman, third class."

He laughed. "Where'd you learn Diesels?"

"In school, sir."

"That's a good combination. Most signalmen can't plug in a toaster." He nodded to me. "How about you?"

"She's a bright boy," Dave said. "He's got a photographic mind."

"Would you both like a quick tour of the ship?"

"Yes, sir," Bert said. "Let me wash and get my blouse."

The tour took two hours and was not a short one. Bert finally looked at his watch and said, "Captain, our ride is due at the quay at 15 minutes past."

Dave went with us up the gangway. "I'll work on that back tomorrow," Dave said, "I'll have liberty."

Bert said, "I won't come back tomorrow. You can see your self at 42 and find us in Pool 9. I'm going now and light some candles for you. Of all the ships in the Navy you would get stuck on this tub."

Then we had climbed the hill overlooking the nest of LCI's, and heard the C. O. siren. We got off the road and stood on a huge slab of rock. "The ferries know that convoy got in today," Bert said.

We could not see a light anywhere, but the hulls of ships were dimly visible. Two minutes passed without another sound. Then we heard the big guns begin, above and naval, sending up a flak pattern by radar. A minute later we could hear the planes drive.

"MF 210's," Bert said.

Then, as if from a central control the thousands of 20 and 40 mms. sent up their bright arcs of tracer fire. A few flares appeared.

"Ain't it pretty" Bert said, loud again. He began to laugh. He stopped quickly. "They got something; tanker, I believe." We could see a great column of black smoke. The firing stopped, except the distant sound of British pompoms. Bert looked down at me. "Get up, boy. Your trouble is you're too prejudiced to see the beauty and the glory of that manoeuvre. I'll swear you're white as an A-rab well."

I wouldn't speak to him all the way to the barracks; but when we were there, and in our bunks, he went on. "I'm sorry. I'm sorry for Dave under that sea lord Yoset, don't you?"

"Yes, I do." I said.

The next day at 2 o'clock we had a message to report immediately to the Personnel Office. We reported to a lieutenant who took our names and turned around to a lieutenant, junior grade, and said, "Here's Martin Meadows."

The lieutenant picked up our service records and looked at them. "We had you two slated for base personnel because you've got top marks. But we're going to go ahead and send you aboard, because the captain came in personally and asked for you. Let me give you a piece of advice: when you go over our heads like this, trying to get a special assignment, you usually end up with the little end of the horn. You're now under the command of LCI-002."

XVII

Yoset met us at the gangway, grinning, and asked us into his quarters. "I know you two are surprised, but I had to have two signalmen—this is the headquarters ship. Commander Carr is coming aboard in a few days an 3 that means action somewhere. I liked you two boys; you'll make fine sailors. You're both from the South and I don't mind telling you the best men on this ship are from the South. I'm a Yankee," his laugh rolled out quietly, "but I've spent lots of time in the South—I know what to expect from you two. Mr. Belman and Mr. Pruitt are Yankees—I have my differences with them, or rather they with me. In fact, I sometimes consider myself a Southerner. I'd like you two to consider me as such." As he talked he constantly shifted his eyes toward the door, as if we were plotting against all else around us.

"There's a battle going on right now on this ship, a battle inevitable because I'm the man with the power, being the skipper—and people resent power. I don't like to use it, but I can use it ruthlessly when the need arises. I'm enlisting you two on my side." He went to the door. "I was about to have Captain's Mast—the quartermaster jumped ship last night. I want you two to attend."

The quartermaster entered and stood at attention, in dungarees; the captain took a paper from his blouse and read a stern voice, "Rayland, F. A., quartermaster, second-class, step forward."

Rayland moved forward.

"Be this attended: you are presented with the following charge —absent without leave from approximately 1715 to 2345, 10th January 1943. Guilty or not guilty? Plead."

"Guilty, sir."

"You are aware of the severity of such action as time of war and in a battle zone? And the severity of penalties attached thereto?"

"Yessir."

"Have you any mitigating circumstances?"

"I'm not sure I know what mitigating means, sir."

"You were not!"

Ready To Trade Prisoners, Reds Ask Truce Talks

General Clark Says Offer Will be Studied Closely

TOKYO (AP)—The Communists said tonight they accepted a United Nations offer to exchange sick and wounded prisoners before the Korean war ends, and at the same time proposed immediate resumption of suspended armistice talks.

It was not immediately clear whether the acceptance depended upon resumption of the talks.

Gen. Mark Clark, UN Far East commander who made the offer Feb. 22, said he had received the message and would release a statement shortly.

No Misunderstanding

"We are going to study this offer very closely," Clark said. "We want to be sure there isn't anything in it we don't understand."

He indicated that the talks to the Reds would favor resumption of the truce talks if the Communists have changed their minds.

Even as the Red radio broadcast the message to Clark, Allies in Korea were fighting furiously to throw back the biggest Red assault in five months.

The Communist reply was signed by Marshal Kim Il Sung and Peng Teh-huai, commander of Chinese troops in Korea.

It said: "our side...fully agrees to your side's proposal to exchange the seriously wounded prisoners of war of both sides during the period of hostilities."

Would Widen Talks

They also suggested the exchange could pave the way to a "smooth settlement of the entire question of the prisoners of war..." a reference to the deadlock on exchanging all POWs which broke up the armistice talks at Panmunjom last fall.

The Communists have insisted on return of all the 132,000 POWs in UN camps, but the Allies has reported only about 81,000 of these have indicated willingness to return to their Red homelands.

The Chinese said Dec. 18 they were holding 3,198 American POWs. They also are holding many more South Koreans plus prisoners from the countries fighting in Korea.

The text of the Red letter to Clark read in part: "Our side has repeatedly declared that we are willing to find a way to complete arrangements because the talks were broken off.

"It was solely because the...negotiations for offering the exchange of sick and injured prisoners said the UN command has already made immediately to repatriate those...personnel.

"I wish to be informed whether you are prepared for your part to proceed immediately with the repatriation. . ." clark asked.

KILLED UNDER COAL CAR

MIDLAND (CP)—Frank Stacey, 13, was fatally injured Friday afternoon when he crawled under a car being shunted by a Canadian National Railways switch engine. The boy apparently had been collecting coal under the cars when the yard engine coupled on to the cars and began to move them along the siding.

NEW REMAINS FOUND IN GARDEN OF MURDER HOUSE

Sex-Slayer May Strike Again at Full Moon

LONDON (CP)—Scotland Yard detectives today uncovered new remains believed to be human in the garden of London's "murder house" —a dingy flat that already has yielded the bodies of four women.

The discovery came as amazed police warned that the sadistic sex-strangler, known as "Mr. Moonlight" may strike again at Monday's full moon.

The flat and now the garden of the house in the seedy Notting Hill district have yielded a series of gruesome discoveries since Tuesday. The killer had walled up three of the bodies in a pantry and the fourth under the floor of the living room.

Detectives had worked around the clock digging up the garden and prying open the floors and walls. They unearthed a number of bones and scraps of material in the corner of the garden near a high wall.

Dr. F. E. Camps, home office pathologist, was called in to the garden when detectives made the find.

Earlier, Scotland Yard officials had announced fear that the killer may have claimed two more victims—a 32-year-old wife of a detective and a young waitress known only as "Rita." Both disappeared from the house—and both are missing.

May Have Picked Victim

Police said the new moon-mad killer already has picked out another victim and will strike before the full moon is sought. The biggest post-war manhunt is under way in the hope of rounding him up before then.

Every London policeman has been shown a picture of John R.H. Christie, the 55-year-old trucking clerk who was a tenant in the house of death for 18 years. Christie's 45-year-old wife was the stranger's first known victim.

Normally a suspect's photograph is not published until he appears in court so as not to prejudice his case. But director of public prosecutions, fearing the killer might strike again, has given special permission for publication of the picture in Saturday newspapers.

Soft-spoken, dome-headed Christie was a part-time auxiliary policeman. Every regular cop who ever walked the beat knew him.

Detectives worked on the theory that the killer, driven by the fury of a deranged mind, is affected by the full moon. They say the period when some of his previous victims were slain was the moon was half a month ago.

W. L. Houck Will Seek Seat in Federal House

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP)—William Lyon Houck, 39, who has represented Niagara Falls in the Ontario legislature for three terms totalling 14 years, Friday night was chosen Liberal candidate for the Niagara Falls riding to run in the next federal election. Mr. Houck served six years as vice-chairman of the Ontario hydro commission and as mayor of this city for four years.

Sweeping Amnesty by Malenkov For Many Short Term Prisoners

MOSCOW (AP)—Prime Minister Georgi M. Malenkov's government proclaimed a sweeping amnesty today ordering the release of many prisoners serving short terms—providing their crimes represented "no great danger to the state."

The amnesty decree, issued by the presidium of the Supreme Soviet, said the pardons had been made possible by a decline in crime and by the consolidation of the Soviet state system. The decree was published prominently in Russian newspapers and broadcast by Moscow radio.

The full amnesty program extends to most persons serving five years or less for ordinary corrective labor camps and other places of detention. Those serving more than five years will have their sentences halved.

The pardons specifically do not apply, however, to anyone serving more than five years for counter-revolutionary crimes, large-scale theft, or embezzlement of public property, or to persons convicted of second offenses.

Some prisoners will be freed regardless of the length of their sentences. They include women with children 10 years old or less, pregnant women, minors of 18 or less, men of 55 or more, women over 50 and persons suffering from incurable illnesses.

Prosecution will be halted, meanwhile, in cases of persons facing trial in these categories and in cases in which the major sentence would be five years or less.

Claxton Says Jet Fighters Designed for Home Defence Now in Process of Formation

OTTAWA (CP)—Defence Minister Claxton said Friday that Canada still hasn't got any squadrons of the CF-100 jet fighters specially designed for home defence but that the first squadron now is in process of formation.

It was impossible to form a home defence squadron earlier, he said, because there were no planes available of the type considered best for her defence—long-range, all-weather jet planes—either in Canada or elsewhere.

(Various delays have put CF-100 production on a 12-to-18 month schedule. In the meantime, the RCAF has formed 12 squadrons of short-range, daylight F-86E Sabre jets for service in Europe.)

Made Statement

As the Commons echoed briefly to a retired wing commander's charge that Canada is defenceless in the air and that Mr. Claxton has misled the country into thinking otherwise, the minister predicted that within a year Canada will look on the defence of North America "100s as "a major contribution" to international defence. He said he had made the present air-defence situation clear to the United States and to the public.

Mr. Claxton's forecast that the 12-squadron commitment for European air defence will be completed in the spring of 1954—and "it should be possible for us later to form and complete the planned buildup of the defence of Canada"—illustrates that there were Sabre squadrons on duty in Canada preparing to go abroad plus "a large number" of jet air crew and aircraft at operational training units and a number of auxiliary or reserve squadrons with older Mustang and Vampire planes.

Speed to Reach

His statement was a reply to a question by Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, VC, DSO—Nanaimo and indirectly to Wing Cmdr. Richard Rohmer, DFC, of Toronto, who recently retired as commander of the reserve Auxiliary Squadron.

In a speech at Toronto Wing Cmdr. Rohmer charged that Canada is defenceless in the air, that statements by Mr. Claxton and others have misled the country and that except for the Sabre squadrons "earmarked for Europe" Canada could not put up a single fighter if she were attacked today.

Training at North Bay

The Rohmer blast came at a time when the RCAF is training at North Bay the pilots who will go into the first CF-100 squadron specifically for home defence. It is no secret that the RCAF had hoped that by this months ago but was held up by production delays. The CF-100 is designed to suit Canada's needs and to be able to fight at any time in any weather. The Sabre is a short-range/daytime fighter.

The minister said Canada is sending her Sabre squadrons to Europe because it is generally agreed that the best place to defend Canada is as far away as possible. So are there were and three more on their way. Others were on duty in Canada.

13 Canadians Will Share Over Million Dollars As Holders of Sweep Tickets

MONTREAL (CP)—Three Ontario residents held Irish Sweepstakes tickets on Early Mist, winner today of the Grand National Steeplechase.

In the draw they were identified only by noms de plume—"4.30" of Toronto, "Palomino" of Welland, and "Guards Sweetie" of Hamilton.

Each of the three will win £50,000 —close to $140,000.

Other Canadians who held tickets on Mont remblant, second in the race, will collect approximately $84,000 each. Their noms de plume are "Buddy," "Montreal East; "Danny's Mom," Toronto; "Anything," Toronto, and "Smyley," Elora, Ont.

Three others held tickets worth $70,000 each, on the third place horse, Irish Lizard. The three are "Mac," Blaikie, Moncton, N. B.; "Mr. J. R. Auclair," Montreal; and "P.A.," Toronto.

MONTREAL (CP)—J. Ross of Fort William was the only Canadian to draw Early Mist and win sweepstakes ticket on Early Mist, winner today of the Grand National Steeplechase. His ticket was perfect $47,000.

H. L. McMillan of Toronto held a ticket on Mont Tremblant, second-place horse, and won $20,000. Two holders of Vancouver win $19,000 as holder of the ticket on Irish Lizard, third horse.

W. MacFarlane, Shannonville, Drowned in Shannon River

Wilbert MacFarlane, 32, of Shannonville, was drowned in the Shannon River, 10 miles east of here, late Friday when his rowboat in which he and a companion were riding swamped in the turbulent waters of the river.

William Houston, 40, also of Shannonville, was rescued after MacFarlane disappeared in the darkness and his lifeless body his body had not been recovered.

Houston owns his life to Kenneth Hubbs, who saw the accident and rowed to his help. 4He reached the boat, however, before getting another boat was able to rescue Houston who was clinging to the gunwale of the boat and overturned boat which had been dumped from the boat. No sign was seen of MacFarlane, who was swept downstream.

The overturned boat was found washed up on the bank of the river late this morning. Police were reported to be suffering from shock but otherwise, had recovered from his experience.

Provincial police from Belleville, assisted by Shannonville residents, commenced dragging operations after daylight Saturday up until mid-morning had not been successful in locating MacFarlane's body.

FATAL CAR CRASH

KITCHENER (CP) — Harold Schmidt, 25, of Kitchener was fatally injured here Friday night when the car he was driving crashed into a tree on Highway 8 in the eastern part of here. The top of the vehicle was sheared off. Mr. Schmidt died shortly after in the Kitchener-Waterloo Hospital.

EARLY MIST, 20-1 SHOT, WINNER GRAND NATIONAL

Only Five of 31 Entries Finish Gruelling Race

AINTREE, England (CP)—Early Mist, a 20-to-1 shot, today won the 107th running of the famed Grand National steeplechase with Mont Tremblant, at 18 to 1, second, and Irish Lizard, 33 to 1, a distant third over the four-mile, 856-yard course.

The gruelling race means a pot of gold to some of the millions of Irish sweepstakes ticket holders throughout the world.

Early Mist won by 30 lengths and there were four lengths between second and third.

In all only five of the 31 starters finished the course over 30 jumps.

The other two finishers were Overshadow and Senlac Hill.

One of those that failed to finish was Little Yik, the favorite at 7 to 1, which refused a jump.

London Jeweler Loses $10,000 In Armed Robbery

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—A tough looking man with a heavy Italian type road jewelry shop of close to $10,000 worth of goods Friday night and left the jeweler trussed up with a rope.

The gunman walked into Doug Gibbs' jewelry store just at closing time. He ordered a pale-faced Walking to the counter at the rear of the deserted shop, where Gibbs stood, and then pulled back his coat, revealing a revolver tucked in his belt.

"You know what this is," he said. When Gibbs tried to stall him he said: "Don't look around. Get that vault opened."

The jeweler did as ordered and the thug took $50 in cash from Gibbs. All but valueless, he went to dump all the diamonds, watches and rings into the suitcase.

The robber then bound Gibbs and fled.

25 May Be Dead Scores Injured In Ohio Wreck

400 Aboard Trains Which Pile Into Derailed Freight

CONNEAUT, O. (AP) —Two crack New York Central trains with 400 passengers aboard roared into a derailed freight train Friday night, killing an estimated 15 to 25 and injuring 70 to 100.

Early lists showed no Canadians among the casualties.

Two diesel railroad cars, splintered by the impact, spewed over a wide area, a giant death trap from which rescue workers pulled and cut bodies of the dead early today.

Cause of Derailment

The accident—touched off by a piece of pipe that rolled off a fourth train into the path of the freight—came just across the Ohio-Pennsylvania line in Pennsylvania.

The wreckage lay in muddy, rain-soaked fields a mile east or so east of Conneaut amid woods and brush. Survivors' hearers listened for a quarter of a mile through the brush to a narrow dirt road that many ambulances slipped and skidded in single file.

Dr. Joseph Filipatrick of the Ohio highway patrol said he counted 25 bodies and estimated five bodies still trapped.

Counted 25 Bodies

In New York, a New York Central train official said the latest report showed 25 dead and possibly 15 more bodies yet to be recovered.

Tony Fabrizio, who ran from his nearby filling station to the wreck, said he counted 25 dead.

An Associated Press reporter said there were 14 bodies in a row by a railroad track, three other bodies to be cut free of the wreckage and added to the casualties. Ian four or five others had been removed earlier.

Patrolman Fitzpatrick said 40 injured persons were taken to Conneaut Hospital, 20 to Ashtabula, O., General Hospital and 14 to Conneaut General Hospital.

Dr. Ralph Gerwig, chief disorcher of the NYC's Erie division, said a conductor told him about 100 injured were aboard a rescue train heading toward Erie.

Derailed Freight

The triple crash involved this weird sequence of events:

An eastbound freight train lost a piece of pipe, which fell into the path of a westbound freight. The westbound freight was derailed. Several cars piled atop an eastbound freight.

Then the Buffalo-to-Chicago express, No. 5, struck the wreckage of the freight. All but one of the train's 12 cars were derailed.

No. 12, the Southwest Limited, then plowed into the wreckage of No. 5. All but three cars were derailed in 10 cars derailed.

"It was quite a dammest mess of wreckage I ever saw," said truck driver O. D. Watson.

Mau Mau Attack Adds to Victims Of Black Terror

NAIROBI, Kenya (CP)—A gang of Mau Mau terrorists killed at least 12 pro-British native home guards in a night attack on an African village near Nyeri, it was announced today. The killings followed only about 24 hours after the massacre of at least 300 loyal natives near Nairobi.

Reports from Nyeri, 60 miles east of Nairobi, said the gangs of about 100 terrorists was armed with pistols and rifles. The attack was made in the Ganga location in the south Nyeri receive.

Police and security forces have arrested 1,000 Kikuyu for screening and claimed to have identified from 200 to 300 of them as having taken part in the Thursday massacre. Six known terrorists have been killed.

Latest casualty figures for the massacre are 71 men, women and children killed, and another 70 injured. Many women and children—missing, believed killed.

Survivors were feared burned to death when their village was set afire. Earlier reported that 200 were massacred.

Asks Questioning In Neutral Zone On 'Confessions'

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) —The Red-dominated Red China and North Korea to send an international commission of observers who have allegedly confessed to waging germ warfare to a neutral area for UN questioning.

Opening a campaign to counter Red charges that the United States is guilty of bacteriological warfare, U. S. delegate Ernest A. Gross accused the Communists of using "extorted confessions" and "manufactured evidence" from whom they had been obtained be sent to neutral territory to support UN action in Korea.

Gross, in a period of "rest and recuperation," he said, those men would be questioned by an impartial commission to verify or deny the statements they already have made to Communist interrogators.

The commission would be established under a resolution which gross submitted to the 60-nation political committee. It would be made up of five countries to be picked by the general assembly president.

The U. S. submitted this draft just after the committee turned down in favor of a Russian bid with five abstentions—an Asian-Arab move to demand that representatives of Communist China and North Korea be invited here to repeat their charges.

Mother Wants To Build Homes With Winnings

WELLAND (CP)—Mrs. Alde Micheline, 45-year-old mother of six children, excitedly declared today that she will build seven new houses with the $140,000 she won with her twin daughters' entry on Early Mist, winner of today's Grand National.

"One house will be for dad and me and the others for the children," she cried, tears of joy streaming down her face. Her nom de plume was "Palomino."

During most of the race, which she kept on the radio, Mrs. Micheline plucked chickens in the kitchen for Sunday's dinner. However, when Early Mist took the lead at the start of the second lap, she took a seat by the radio and let out a whoop of joy when her fortune was assured.

Guards Sweetie was later identified as Mrs. Wesley Gardner, wife of a Hamilton steel-worker and mother of four young children.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP)—Synopsis: Rain is falling again today over a large part of Ontario as the last of the colder temperatures over western sections. Rain is expected also occasionally in the form of snow. The storm centre responsible for the inclement weather was located near North Bay on this morning's weather map and was moving slowly southward.

As the storm centre edges northward gradual improvement is indicated for the weather for Southern Ontario. Sunday should bring some sunshine to the southern half of the province but showers or flurries of showers and snowflurries is indicated for Northern Ontario.

Constable Pleads Not Guilty To 4 Charges Laid

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Constable Gilbert Robitaille pleaded innocent Thursday to four charges laid against him by the Windsor police commission in connection with a statement made earlier by Cecil Smith who said he was the victim of a "police shakedown."

Smith Friday reiterated a charge that he "bought" his way out of a conviction on a liquor charge two years ago but refused to pay a bribe to Robitaille when arrested recently.

Two weeks ago he was sentenced to two months' hard labor in default of $500 fine for possession of liquor for sale. He appealed the conviction and sentence.

The commission charged Robitaille with "unlawfully accepting $600 from Smith in April, 1951, in an attempt to bribe, pervert, or obstruct the course of justice."

He also was charged with unlawfully accepting $100 from Smith in March, 1953, and in March, 1953, "with the same intention." A fourth charge was that Robitaille, on March 18, 1953, "did unlawfully threaten Smith with bodily harm," Will Resume Soon

The charges, first laid against any police officer since the police investigation in 1950 which led to retirement of two high department officials, were first made public last week when Smith appeared before the commission.

Smith was asked to return with the charges in writing. When neither he nor his lawyer appeared Smith was subpoenaed to appear at Thursday's meeting. Once given the protection of the Canada Evidence Act, under which he is immune to criminal or civic charges as a result of his testimony, he elaborated on his earlier charges and named Robitaille as the officer involved.

After hearing the evidence, the commission ordered the four charges laid against Robitaille. Big Easter Seal Party on Sunday

Toronto radio's big Easter Seal Party, which originates each year from the Eaton Theatre Gardens, will go out this year to the biggest network in the program's history.

More than 80 stations, from Newfoundland to Victoria, B.C., will carry the show, which runs from 3 to 4 p.m., on Sunday.

Theme of the show this year is "accent on youth," with a number of Canada's rising young radio, TV and stage stars being featured throughout.

One of the highlights of the broadcast will be the Appleby Boys' Choir, from Appleby school in Oakville, near Toronto. The choir has been invited to represent Canada musically at the coronation.

Others to be featured include: Teresa Gray, star of the recent opera festival in Toronto; Ed McCurdy, Canadian Balladeer; Denny Vaughan, the Toronto dancer who has made such a hit with the big recording companies in New York; Jack Allison and his group; King Cana, cowboy singer; Gordon Tapp and Alex Reid, a team of comedians from Hamilton; Chico Valles, of Latin-American music fame, and Bobby Gimby, one of Canada's top trumpeters. Music will be under the skilled direction of Lucio Agostini.

Six Students to Attend Toronto Ballet Class

Six students from the Esther Lillian Studio of Ballet will attend a special class in Toronto this weekend, given by Celia Franca, artistic director for the Canadian National Ballet.

These classes for children from the age of 10 to 13 are arranged by the Canadian Dance Teachers' Association.

Those attending the school are Lynn Brown, Nancy Carter, Valmie Gill, Mary Longhurst, Jane Vanover and Carolyn Wyatt.

Smallest Deficit in History Of Hospital Shown in Report Given at Annual Meeting

The Belleville General Hospital operated at the smallest deficit in the history of the hospital during the year 1952, it was revealed at the annual meeting of the hospital held in the Ritchie Memorial Residence Friday evening. Chairman of the finance committee, Frank Domenico, in his report pointed out the net loss amounted to $17,871.76 against 1951's loss of $55,303.12.

Revenue received from patients during the past year totalled $748,228.70. The amount of government grants was $47,252.11 and the provision for bad debts was $24,528.55 giving a total revenue for 1952 of $773,951.86. This figure also included other revenues from numerous sources. The total expenditures were $791,823.62 combined with this which explains the deficit for the past year.

Fewer Major Operations

Dr. J. H. Forrester, president of the medical association, for 1952, noted there were 251 fewer major operations in 1952, 156 fewer minor operations and 96 fewer live births during the year. Dr. Forrester, in analyzing this shift, suggested the decrease in surgery is due to the increasing volume of surgical work being done in Trenton Memorial Hospital and to the absence of Dr. G. H. Stobie from the surgical staff.

Continuing the medical report, the doctor pointed out, "The building of the interne service both graduate and undergraduate was a notable achievement in 1952." He said, "We find it has been entirely satisfactory to both the intern and medical staff and has filled a great gap in the organization."

19,032 Patient Days

Patient days at the hospital, including adults and children, private and semi-private, numbered 19,032. In the public ward the number was 36,661 and the patient days for newborn infants was 6,665 for a total of 62,549.

During 1952, 1,259 major operations were performed, 1,974 minor operations and 85 caesarean sections. The emergency operating room handled 2,254 cases and the number of patients during the year numbered 5,290. There were 1,206 births in the hospital and 8,443 patients were admitted.

In 1952 the supplies committee made a number of improvements and changes in methods of purchasing and storing of hospital supplies. Many new items were purchased for the hospital which, it is expected, will lead to much more efficient service in the equipment line. The property committee also made considerable improvements in the maintenance of existing buildings and services, re-arrangements and development of plans for the expansion of the hospital.

Vital Changes Made

A number of areas were painted during the year. Several vital changes in electrical power inlets and outlets were made. There were a number of room renovations and re-arrangements done during the year as well. Also, arrangements were made to accommodate the chest X-ray unit so all patients entering the hospital may have a complete chest examination.

In the pathology department, 48,181 blood examinations were made during 1952 against the figure of 46,708 done in 1951.

In the administrator's report, it was revealed, the total number of patients which include newborn during the year numbered 7,792. The average occupancy was 171 and during the month of February, occupancy went as high as 211.

Hospital Congratulated

Also in the administrator's report, it was noted through the co-operation of the Ministerial Association, the chest X-ray unit was installed. The hospital received the congratulations of the Department of Health for the move.

Miss Margaret Pearl, director of nursing, pointed out in her report that there is a problem existing of too few registered graduate nurses. She noted that a rule for the nurses, which became effective the first of this year, was given. She also said that a number of married nurses in the city had co-operated in assisting with part time work during the acute shortage of nursing staff.

Miss Madeline Millard, science instructor in the school of nursing, presented the science training report. Miss Millard described the various courses which the students are engaged upon. She made a number of recommendations which she felt would be of benefit to the existing curriculum. The committee also elected the Inspector of Nursing Schools' recommendations.

Noted Improvements

Miss Millard noted the improvements made in the school of department and also pointed out some of the difficulties which, she noted, Miss Millard quoted the inspector's words: "This school of nursing is one of the few found in the middle sized group of hospitals in Ontario, from an educational standpoint."

"After the depreciation has been taken we show a deficit of $17,871.76. At the same time I would point out that the loss for the hospital on indigent patients amounted to approximately $50,000 for the year 1952. It will be seen, therefore, that if the indigent beds were occupied by paying patients, the hospital would have been able to operate without this deficit."

In concluding, the chairman offered his thanks and congratulations to those concerned. "I cannot close without paying tribute to the fine work of all members of the staff, but especially for the patients under the most trying conditions, to the wonderful co-operation received from all members of the medical staff, and I would particularly thank the press my appreciation to Dr. Faulkner and members of the board who gave several days of their time to visit newly-established hospitals to obtain ideas for our new addition."

Auxiliary Statement

Mrs. J. E. Buchan, president of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, described the total receipts of various auxiliary activities as being $13,000. She expressed appreciation for the year were listed at $3,242.94 leaving a balance in the bank of $1,242.94.

Mrs. Buchan said in her report that last year has been a successful one for the Women's Auxiliary. The Auxiliary was organized in April, 1938, and there is presently a paid membership of 303 and an average attendance of 30 members at the regular meetings.

"The social welfare work was carried on by the organization at Christmas time, not only in hospital day, gaily wrapped presents were distributed to needy patients, also ward patients. A sum of money was given annually to the director of nursing for the purchase of necessary articles of clothing for young children on discharge from hospital.

Indigent Fund Set Up

An indigent fund is also set up for the provision of small necessities for indigent patients.

"The Beta Sigma Phi sorority sew and knit supplies resulting in Good Samaritan Cupboard with clothing for infants being discharged. The total receipts of a circulating library for the use of patients.

"A monthly bulletin is edited and mailed to each member and to other interested persons. The bulletin contains news of members, coming events, a message from the general reminder of work done by the organization.

During the past five years the Auxiliary has expended upwards of nately $9,000 on hospital equipments and comforts for our patients. Items purchased were to give many hours of their time to the benefit of the patients and the patients and their value to the organization is great.

Some of the items which have been purchased by the organization in the last few years are as follows:

Oxygen tents, resuscitator, humidicribs, furniture for patients' rooms, food conveyors, meal pads and linen; gifts for indigent patients and the children's ward, donations toward the training of student nurses.

Civil Defence Committee To Hold Mass Meeting Monday

Large Attendance Requested

In an effort to bring home to residents of the city and district the need for civil defence that can be wrought by an atomic bomb and to rally them to the cause of civil defence, a mass meeting to this effect is being held in the Collegiate Auditorium on Monday evening at 7.30 o'clock.

The meeting is being held under the sponsorship of the Belleville Civil Defence Committee of which Dr. R. T. Potter is the co-ordinator.

Major J. Adams, well-known civil defence authority will be the guest speaker and will augment his address with special motion picture films among which is the Australian Under Ahove Attack; The Atom Speaks' and others.

A special appeal will be made to residents to join in the ranks of the Civil Defence Corps. Four hundred volunteers are urgently needed for traffic directors, fire fighters, rescue squads, wardens ambulance drivers; welfare service; and other vital fields.

It is pointed out that should an atom bomb strike without warning the casualties from a zero point to a half mile would be 4,330; from a half mile to a mile, 11,100 while the uninjured would be 1,100.

With warning, it is stated, the casualties from a zero point to a half mile would be 3,950; from a half mile to a mile from zero, with the uninjured estimated at 8,900. About 40 per cent of those taken to hospital would require major surgery and ten per cent would require urgent surgery.

The Civil Defence Corps points out that it is every citizens duty to his country, his town, family and self to find out what civil defence means. It behooves each citizen to train himself in some way in order to do his duty should the occasion demand it. Civil defence people remind residents that "if you heed what you learn in civil defence you lose nothing . . . but if you never learn what you'heed, you may lose everything."

During the past year officials of the Belleville Civil Defence organization have been taking courses in special work. Nurses have been trained in their own lines of duty. Now is the time for the man on the street to train himself to do his share to help his city and country should the need arise.

Civil defence officials urge every right-thinking citizen to attend the meeting on Monday evening.

E. P. Bernstein Retires From Active Business

After thirty-one years as general manager of Bell Telephone Company of Canada Limited, Mr. E. P. Bernstein is retiring from active participation in the company, effective May 1st next. He will continue as consultant, in an advisory capacity.

Mr. Bernstein was the first employee of the Canadian company, having assumed his duties as manager in January 2nd, 1922, when the company was incorporated, with offices in Toronto.

In 1924, having outgrown their quarters in Toronto, construction of the Belleville plant was started, and the move to Belleville was made on the completion of the plant in March, 1925.

The company started its career with Belleville as a plant containing 12,000 square feet. Since that time various additions have been made to the plant, which now occupies approximately 48,000 square feet. The payroll now numbers about 125.

Mr. Bernstein plans to remain in Belleville for the present.

Mr. L. R. Johnson, president, announces the appointment, effective May 1st, of Mr. David A. Menzies as vice-president and general manager of the Canadian company. Mr. Menzies is at present assistant general manager of the Ontario Hydro and general manager of the pharmaceutical division of Ciba, Montreal.

Norval Strong was acquitted of rape, convicted of common assault and given a suspended sentence.

Centennial Celebration Planned For Week Beginning June 28

TRENTON (Special) — The most enthusiastic crowd of people gathering in the town hall Thursday night had a sound foundation for Trenton's great centennial celebration.

Five days were set and it was the unanimous decision of the large representative group present to open the 106th birthday party with a volunteer church service on Sunday, June 28 and climax the eight-day celebration with a drumhead service under the auspices of the local branch of the Canadian Legion.

A complete board of officers known as the central committee was elected as follows: chairman of centennial, Dr. J. E. Renton; public relations chairman, Fred Parker; acting secretary, Elmer Bonter; entertainment and dramatics, Bill Long; historical parade, Jack Goldberg and I. Shulman; the drumhead service, W. Colterjohn; religious advisory, Rev. G. J. Minielly; decorating, Reg. Terrill; finance, Grant Gaetz; accommodations, Mrs. J. Kerr, Women's Auxiliary, R. C. A. F.; all Trenton churches and Canadian Legion; Boy Scouts and Girl Guides, Jim Mercer; R. Hamilton, Mrs. Finley and Mrs. Thorne Spears; ways and means, Elsen James, Norm Bingman, Fred Parker, Dr. J.-E. Renton, Elmer Bonter and Bill Workman.

The R. C. A. F. was well represented by Squadron Leader, Sharpe, Training Command Headquarters; Flight Lieutenant Olson, Station Trenton; Squadron Leader Stephens' No. 6 Repair Depot.

The central committee will be meeting in the immediate future to accept suggestions and map out a program for the eight-day show.

Stories of Famous Hymns

by HORACE S. POWELL

The Solid Rock

My hope is built on nothing less Than Jesus' blood and righteousness;
I dare not trust the sweetest
frame,
But wholly lean on Jesus' Name.

When darkness seems to hide His face,
I rest on His unchanging grace;
In every high and stormy gale
My anchor holds within the veil.

His oath, His covenant, His blood,
Support me in the whelming flood;
When all around my soul gives way,
He then is all my hope and stay.

When He shall come with trumpet sound,
Oh, may I then in Him be found;
Dressed in His righteousness alone,
Faultless to stand before the throne.

Many of the gospel songs which all his beck and call, for Dwight found their way into the Moody-Sankey revival meetings of 50 years ago were turned up in obscure sliding places by Ira Sankey, the singing half of the famous evangelistic partnership.

It was Sankey's task to find hymns for the soul-winning meetings as well as to sing them. Sometimes he wrote his own songs, words and music. Now and then, he lifted appealing religious poems from hidden corners in newspapers and gave them tunes so that he could use them in his musical programs.

He had to have plenty of hymns for an appropriate dismissal hymn, the singing evangelist remembered a poem he had clipped from a newspaper a few days before. He set it to music on the spot. The hymn, "I Have A Savior, He's Pleading in Glory," introduced at another service had a similar origin.

Sankey found the verses of "The Solid Rock" in "The Postman," an English newspaper, its author was listed as "E. J. Charlesworth but was never discovered. Like most of the hymn-classics which Sankey set to music, it was taken up by other evangelists and gospel singers and soon was singing its way into universal favor.

Moody, who preached the revivals sermons, called frequently for gospel choruses to lend emphasis to his messages. Usually, Dr. Moody wanted a song bearing on the theme of the hour, whatever it happened to be. And Sankey nearly always found just the right number.

It was on such an occasion that the famous gospel singer requested the hymn, "The Ninety and Nine Safe," at a gospel meeting in Scotland. Mr. Moody had finished a sermon on "The Good Shepherd" and asked Sankey for an appropriate dismissal hymn.

and combinations of broken phrases. The relatively static civilizations, such as those of India or China, perhaps, are less prolific in slang creation — but perhaps a Chinese or Indian literary student could deny that forcefully.

The foremost American expert on slang are Lester Berrey of Los Angeles City college and Melvin Van den Bark of Nebraska university, whose compendiums have been diverting slang fans for two decades. Their latest "American Thesaurus of Slang" has just been published by Crowell. The preceding edition came out only six years ago. But with television and jet aviation and rot rod cars and other such matters arriving so swiftly, a neat new collection is already needed.

• • •

Slang has gained increasing respectability with the centuries. It was considered exclusively a cracks' language several generations back. Johnson's famous dictionary, less than 200 years ago, did not include the word "slang" and referred to such kind of talk as "low." Thereafter the literature on the subject called it "the vulgar tongue," and only in the 19th century was slang finally accepted and treated as a separate study. So was born Pound, the mentor of Berrey and Van den Bark.

• • •

Television, which meant little to the public or slang experts a few years ago, now needs a sizable chapter, including many telescopings such as TV necktress, televisville and television vibrations. In the video vocabulary, a "kidvid" is a question from a bright object, a "road" is a broadcast channel, a "studio" is a viable wave of electric current, "rain" and "snowstorm" are varying degrees of interference, "womp" is a sudden flare, "ghost" means "go off," "hitting" my music transmission and "telesit" is the art of being suited for TV set.

The "hot rod" industry has a specialized jargon that includes "souped up," "grow job," "hep hog," "hot-setter" (enlarged crankshaft), "lakester" (which has streamlined body), "Mexican Mirage lake course), "hashed hemp" (poorly built), "whip-jets" (a whirl), and "full throw" (racing equipment throughout).

The military services are the most prolific contributors to our slang during wartime. Scores of pages are needed to list the thousands of slang in recent years: "Sugar report," letter from the girl friend; "quail roundup," servicemen's dance; "change of cake a bath; "rabbit fever," fear; "liverate," to steal; "child bowl," a regulation haircut; "dazzle daub," camouflage.

• • •

The jet plane has picked up slang with characteristic speed. The "Air Force" now refers to the craft as "blast furnace," "blowtorch," "firecan," "flame throwers," "pencil" and "speed burner," "squirt job," "stovepipe" (for a ram jet), and "baby" for a midget machine designed to return to the mother plane. "Eggbeater" and "windmill" are not new terms for helicopter, but they are unsurpassably vivid.

Also popular nicknames and related verbage are created by servicemen of almost every culture, but in many cases the credit can be assigned to individuals. Washington Irving Gilpin, his "almighty dollar" more than a century ago. The late Ted Dorgan, an outstanding humorist and cartoonist, colined "dumbell" (for a stupid person), "dumb Dora," "applesauce" (for nonsense) "hardboiled" (for tough) and "hot dog" (for the sandwich).

So goes a bit of slang of yesterday and today. Tomorrow it will be bigger and better, grayer, gustier and goofier than ever.

The Rt. Rev. K. C. Evans, M.A., D.D., Lord Bishop of the Diocese of Ontario, will be in the city on Sunday and will administer the rite of Confirmation at the morning service in St. Thomas' Church and at Christ Church in the evening.

White Cane Club Hears Recordings

The regular monthly meeting of the White Cane Club of Belleville was held on Wednesday evening at the Y.M.C.A.

Recordings of White Cane Week were heard on tape recordings, being played on a talking book machine donated by the Kinette Club of Belleville.

Refreshments were served by the ladies of the Kinettes after which Mr. Clarence Morris gave a vote of thanks for the delicious refreshments.

Will Establish 401-Acre Park Along Grand R.

ELORA (CP)—The Grand river conservation authority decided Thursday to establish a 401-acre park along the Elora gorge of the Grand river as an authority project.

Cost of the property and improvements spread over a three-year period, will be about $60,000.

The decision was reached at the annual meeting by Mrs. Kathryn Marston of Elora and Garfield Dunsdor of Dunnville. Mayor Arthur White of Galt and several other municipalities will share capital costs of the park, half of which will be paid for by the province, should be assessed against the municipalities in the immediate neighborhood rather than over the entire area.

T. H. Ainley of Kitchener said his municipality would pay the largest proportion under the per capita assessment plan used by the authority.

Keeping Up With Latest Slang

BY WALTER MONFRIED
(Condensed from Milwaukee Journal)

Ach to Louie, gosh all fishhooks, dadfreich it, but our language and slanguage are growing at an appalling rate. The "ach to Louie" and other silflies above are only a few of the countless oaths and expletives that Americans use to emphasize their remarks.

A few thousand words were enough for Shakespeare or for Dr. Samuel Johnson's dictionary, which was considered a prodigy of scholarship in its 18th century day. Today Webster's dictionary has 600,000 entries. And the new "American Thesaurus of Slang" contains 800,000 words just to tell us about the vivid words and phrases that the orthodox dictionaries can't do right by.

• • •

What is there about slang that Americans find so compelling? it adds salt and variety to an otherwise humdrum existence. A nose is a nose, to be sure, as even Gertrude Stein would concede. But isn't it more fun and more stimulating to call it a bazoo, beagle, beezer, bugle, foghorn, nozzle, snoot, snorer, schnozzola, probosci or cetera and ad infinitum.

Consider the indispensable citizen who repairs motor cars and railway equipment and who is called "mechanic" by precise old ladies. But the free wheeling gentry prefer to call him greaseball, grease monkey, knuckle buster, nut cracker, wrench artist, master maniac, tincan artist, donkey doctor, car doctor (for tractors), bird doctor (for airplanes), thumb buster, iron skull, kettle mender or, save the word, chambermaid—the last being a roundhouse repairman.

• • •

Slang terms are born, flourish and expire with startling speed. "Twenty year old man" and "23 skidoo" now seem like the wisecracks of Nineveh and Tyre. We live in a restless, dizzily changing world, and we need a colorful, ever changing language to keep up with it. The famous literary professor of Nebraska university, Dr. Louie Pound, thinks that the slang of England and of the United States is more abundant and more important than that of other countries. "Great Fyvush" slang can vie with it in currency, quantity and spirited quality," she believes.

• • •

The English speaking peoples, who in the main occupy the most dynamic or regions, appear to be the world champions in slang invention. The American fighting man who visited Australia noticed that the people there had an extremely rich slang, quite original and marked by rhymes

EXPANDING DEFENCE ESTABLISHMENTS

Within the past few years new establishments for Canada's armed forces have been arising here and there across the country on a scale that would equal a new city twice the size of Belleville.

This information was given in the House of Commons recently when Major-General George Pearkes, V.C., Progressive Conservative member for Nanaimo, B.C., asked for details of the building programme. Before the war the combined strength of the three armed services was less than 8,000 of all ranks. Most of the accommodation available then was unsatisfactory, so barracks of a permanent nature have had to be built for our post war services.

After the war the peacetime strength of the army, navy and air force together was set at 35,000. Korean aggression led to a revision of these figures and the target is now one of 120,000 men to be built up by the end of next year. The building programme from April, 1950, to December, 1952, totalled $758 millions and was 61 per cent completed by the end of that period. The new bases, camps and airfields are spread from coast to coast and from the American border to the sub-Arctic.

Camp Borden, the base at Ecquimalt which previously accommodated 235, is being expanded to house 1,100 men in training. A permanent air base at Moose Jaw accommodating 950 men is one of five new large air training stations. Established air stations at Chatham, N.B., and St. Hubert, near Montreal, are greatly expanded.

Army camp facilities are being expanded or newly constructed on a scale which will provide accommodation in barracks for 45,000 men. Camp Borden will be the biggest permanent army base with 5,250 soldiers. Next in size will be Petawawa, Sarnia and Shilo. The large new training centre in New Brunswick will be an establishment to accommodate 3,000 men.

The capital expenditures involved are illustrated by the cost of land alone in some cases. Nearly $50,000 an acre was paid for one small site at Esquimalt. More than $335,000 was paid for 2,370 acres and $1,500 per acre for a new ammunition magazine. An existing magazine was abandoned because private industry expanding in the same area required it urgently for storing ammunition.

The building program of course is just part of the multi-billion dollar spending that has been required of the Canadian taxpayer since the cold war threat to freedom rose out of the post war tensions.

REFUGEE PROBLEM BELONGS TO ALL

Ordinarily the idea of freedom is not associated with the German people in the minds of those whose countries have so recently had to settle with Nazism and a generation earlier with Prussian militarism. This thought is struck us when we noted a tribute to Berlin in the Christian Science Monitor.

Berlin, the Monitor reminds us, is today an island in a new Red Sea sense. In a recent visit to New York of its mayor, Ernst Reuter, was a "visible reminder that no man, no nation, no city is an island 'entire of itself' but each in John Donne's glorious words, 'a piece of the continent, a part of the main'."

And it is, of course, true that Berlin's stand against the closest and constant intimidations of Communism is one with the free world's stand. Nowhere is the heroic will to resist more evident. Under the daily pounding of the Red sea, which could wash over the island in a matter of minutes, the leaders of West Berlin have taken their stand. And they have maintained it courageously knowing that they are doomed to instant liquidation if the Red tide does flow over it.

Mayor Reuter's visit to the United States is to seek aid for the stupendous refugee problem which has developed in his city. To the thousands of escapees pouring every day into the city from behind the Iron Curtain, Berlin is freedom. Caring for these people in addition to the many thousands of native citizens who are unemployed, has become a staggering burden.

The Monitor stresses that this problem is not one which belongs merely to the city of Berlin but one which belongs to the western world in its stand against Communism.

TOWARDS A BETTER WORLD

In a judgment of the Superior Court of Quebec Hon. Justice Oscar Boulanger affirms that motorists are not alone in having obligations. Pedestrians have rights. "A beast they are under an obligation not to rush into suicide by throwing themselves without any precaution across the path of heavy traffic." said the judge. For our part, if we have, more than once, denounced the stupidity and imprudence of motorists, we do not hesitate to say that a pedestrian should do his part and show himself as prudent as the motorist at the wheel should be. Let both of them do their part and accidents will be much less numerous.

SLEEP

The man who wants to do his best
Must always get a good night's rest.
Who burns the artificial lights
And spends in merriment his nights
Cannot expect the pace to keep
With him who's had sufficient sleep.
No brain, how'er with zeal it's fired,
Can do its labor when it's tired.

If you have robbed yourself of sleep,
You've held your competition cheap.
You'll come to work with sluggish mind
And that day you will fall behind.
You may not notice that you slip
And have a careless sort of grip
Upon the problems in your way

But you won't be yourself that day.

The man who's rested all night through
Will better do his work than you.
That day he'll quickly pass you by
And no doubt leave you wondering why.
You may possess a keener brain,
But on it you have placed a strain.
And he is working at his best,
For he has had a good night's rest.

The day is gone when heavy eyes
And sluggish brains to glory rise.
The youth who wants to get ahead
Must often early go to bed.
And he who lacks a restful night
For victory is ill to fight
No man his place in life can keep
Unless he gets sufficient sleep.

Even In Vancouver

(Vancouver Sun)

Let no one be bitter about a mere snowfall on the first day of Spring.

Everybody makes these little mistakes and we presume the weatherman is fallible too.

Take this snow for example. Inscrutable indeed if the promise of bursting buds was redeemed by Spring rains in the month of April.

It's infinitely more logical to blame it on human error. That's why we say somebody has slipped somewhere.

It was in our mind to talk learnedly of the recent Americana atomic explosion in the south causing these freaks of weather. But we recalled that the Americans were our allies. Our allies don't make mistakes.

So the only thing left is to blame it on the Russians. Just what are they up to?

Eel Pie for the Queen

(London Times Weekly)

The High Sheriff of the City of Gloucester has asked the Royal Air Force No. 2 School of Cookery at Innsworth to make the traditional lamprey pie which the city will present to the Queen for the Coronation. The City of Bristol has indicated that the Queen will accept the pie.

The Hidden Future

(Edmonton Journal)

"Little did I realize when we exited before the parson", remarks a silver-haired gentleman in the May-Day Parade later, and without any teeth, I'd be eating peanut brittle to keep from getting the dentures in my 111 - year - old granddaughter whose club is selling the stuff."

Useful Owls

The owl is distinguished by its ability to look wise even though it is stupid. Yet in its sad sort of way it is a useful bird, disposing of smaller creatures which are a nuisance.

One farmer in Southwestern Ontario has a pet owl which is very valuable to him. It is kept in the barn, and is death to mice and rats. In the spring it serves another purpose, protecting seed corn planting time.

Crows have a special liking for corn and a hearty dislike for owls. To keep the crows from eating up the seed corn, the farmer hitches his owl to a post. The lively crows hover around it, offering a fine target to the farmer who happens to be a good shot.

If it be possible for an owl to smirk, that owl probably does silently smirk at being the decoy which leads this ancient enemies to their destruction and to a better corn crop for his friend the farmer.

Shades of Rommel

(Vancouver Province)

If the restless shade of Erwin Rommel ever glances at the news, it must be chuckling at what has come to pass in Egypt. Rommel, armies in Africa, strove mightily as commander of the Germans and resourcefully to win Egypt for the Nazis, but was outmaneuvered and outfought by Alexander of Tunis and Montgomery of Alamein, and went home to take part in misadventures which ended in his death.

But now the Germans are moving quietly into Egypt as the British move out. The Germans are coming in as industrialists, as financiers, as merchants, as transportation experts and as administrators.

Greetings to a Spring Voice

(From The New York Times)

This is a good morning on which to extend greetings to Melospiza melodia, without whose cheerful attentions spring would be very empty. Melospiza melodia has been around for several weeks, now, speaking to work about his no matter whether the day be glowering or bright. Even his friends and admirers will not say that he is a great singer, but he is persistent; he never tires, and he does not lose his voice in the cold and raw winds of March. They would agree, however, that his voice is most appropriate to the season. Melospiza melodia is, of course, the song sparrow, who has been making the day's beginning more tolerable for early risers sleepily contemplating their breakfasts or setting off to daily chores.

Other birds are more colorful, more lauded and perhaps more often, but no song is more welcome on chilly mornings early in the year than the four or five small notes, followed by a graceful trill, made distinctive by the air by the song sparrow. One is struck, listening to this music, by the subtlety of Nature, heralding the coming of spring not with a trumpeting or a surge of avian music but with the piping of a few simple notes and grace. Likewise Nadgre, awakening root and bud and the earth newly first no burst of flamboyant, heavily accented roses, but rather the violet, clinging close to the leaf or the robins, the catbirds and mockingbirds will be here with voices full and loud, but at the beginning of the season they are more modest, diffidently, offering his little song of promise to those who will hear.

If the sparrow's song is sooth to the ear, it is also sooth to the spring, for a little while it alone lifts the heart, and he who has ears to hear will find in the morning to play through his mind possesses a thing that cannot be seen, handled, weighed or measured and yet he has within himself a truthfulness, in an effort to give this music more substance, have attempted to write down the seek him out!

notes in a form intended to be more understandable, and they have even recorded the sparrow's song so that it can be played back at will. But none of this has managed to destroy the simple beauty of that small voice or to make it less welcome. It is still fragile and at the same time indestructible.

If he sang all the seasons round without ceasing, Melospiza melodia would become drowned out by a common nuisance, like his ubiquitous cousin, the starling. But if fireflies glowed incessantly no one would stand in the summer grass, twinkling in the thousands across a broad field until the air is almost tricked, by what the eye sees, into imagining that their mysterious mechanisms are audible.

The world is filled with sounds and sights that seem to be fleeting and yet endure beyond the lives of many of those things with which men surround themselves. The once mixed and applied by Da Vinci fade on a wall, but long still, one may stand and gaze at some winter-bucked soul with a garden lowered around it.

Nature makes possible the constant renewal of the world by the principles intangibles that enrich life beyond man's own ability to contrive. The song of the bird, graceful line of a new moon, the majestic sweep of mountains, the hung in jewels of dew, the ruby flash of the hummingbird across the garden lowered around it.

'Bafflegab' In Debate

(Vancouver Daily Province)

The debate on neutralizing Formosa, in the House of Commons recently, was typical of the delicate art of "bafflegab" to new heights.

Mr. Pearson launched it with a statement on Canada's attitude so ambiguous as to be almost without meaning. Various members then rose to ask questions which got nowhere provide evidence of a desire to be helpful. Finally, as the Far East, or Formosa's place and importance within it, was not clarified it was closed by another dose of doubletalk by Mr. Pearson.

Various Ottawa "experts" have tried to explain away the Pearson policy.

In a gallant effort to pry out the "inwardness" of Mr. Pearson's closing speech, Mr. John Bird, The Province Ottawa correspondent said Mr. Pearson had "held no brief for or with entire position of the Liberal government as the Korean war thing's internal affairs was wound up."

He continued: "Speaking with an authority which left no room for needsay and with less reliance on prepared notes than usual, Mr. Pearson made it clear that the Canadian government is not concerned with the internal affairs of Formosa, that statement, we respectfully submit, is unclear. And we suspect that Mr. Bird was giving us the exact quotes so that we might write our own ticket.

As far as the general public is concerned, Canada's official attitude toward the idea that the United States should take a lead in a more positive foreign policy is a thoroughgoing mystery.

Strength for the Day

By DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

DAY OF TRIUMPH

Tomorrow is Palm Sunday. All our Gospels give detailed accounts of the entrance of Jesus into Jerusalem on the first day of the week which we now call Holy Week. The people waved palm branches and cried out dramatically as they acclaimed Jesus king.

This would be something immeasurable lost to the Gospel account if we did not have the story of the Triumphal Entry. Too often we look upon religion as nothing but a matter of creeds, as a movement which always gets people together in order to save the world. But we should remember that the final note in the Christian disciples is apostolic faith.

When people really have religion, they are not long-faced and solemn; they are joyful, exuberant, filled with hope. The expression, "long-faced Christian," is a contradiction in terms. The Christian disciples in apostolic days were the most radiant people that have ever appeared in world history.

If our religion today is not making us happy, then there is something the matter either with our variety of religion, or with us. If we are not filled with enthusiasm, if we are not living the way when they waved palm branches and welcomed Jesus into Jerusalem, then we have not found the secret of true Christian

Mr. Bennet's Picture

The late (George V) allowed me to secure my sittings (of a 1935 Jubilee painting) at once after the Coronation Naval Review of the Indian visitors. Mr. Bennet, the Indian Trade Commissioner, returning to Canada. As a solo-visitor the high commissioner for Canada sent me a photograph of Mr. Bennet. The photograph was a head to shoulders.

The remainder of the figure were painted from life. The artist struck me as very remarkable in that he could, from a head, paint the portraits in the finished picture, thought they were all good likenesses. I was delighted with Mr. Bennet's. Be sure your weskit, knew, your sins, will find you out.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

EXHIBIT YOUR ROSES, BUT NOT YOUR CHILDREN

"Dear Dr. Brady:...in regard to my little girl, twelve. She is the picture of health, only she is a nervous wreck if she sees a picture show, or is having an examination at school, or dances in a recital or plays her piano in a recital. She gets pale and will vomit maybe all day or all night. She has been driven now to the terrible headaches and can't take part... seems to worry about everything." (Mrs. B. R.)

Good heavens, madam. You are not training a musical-comedy star. Why on earth do you allow all her after-school hours to be devoted to arduous drilling in skills calculated to make a public exhibition of her training be date? Naturally she hates and fears such an artificial frame of reality — to the point of actual nausea.

I doubt that she'd grow pale, vomit and have headaches if she spent her afternoons playing cowkle-cat with the other neighborhood children. Nor would she be filled with dread and anxiety if she could read happily and quietly under the appletree or before the fireplace. As the time grew close to be off on a family picnic, I'm sure she would not work herself up so that she couldn't take part.

But if you are intent upon training a star, and perfect, and not interested in the healthy, cheerful, warm blossoming into productive womanhood, well, I guess you can go on with the recitals and the movies as her leisure-time activities.

She might better be learning skills in cookery, child - care, group games and sports, joining and supporting girls' clubs, Sunday School classes, and reading.

But I cannot expect the nervous system of a twelve-year-old child to be ruined in the point where it can adapt to the rigours of a life of competitive exhibitionism.

Have you consulted with your family physician.

TODAY'S TALK

THINGS OF BEAUTY

Nothing in nature has so intrigued me as the dew crystals. They fall to earth in endless designs, exquisite and perfect—each design unique the same! From them we have copied our lovely cut creations in jewelry, but the human designer has ever improved on these that fall to us direct from the sky. These designs are all six-pointed. I wonder why?

I have been looking upon a page of reproductions of these crystals under laser - microscopy of arrangement amazes me. Outside my window as I write, I see the dew sparkling on the grass and on the morning sunlight. Rarely do the people passing by on the walking upon these creations from the sky.

Every growing thing has beauty to it, I look forward to the sight of white pond lillies in the lagoon, before my Nova Scotia summer island retreat. I marvel at such pure white in a flower born in the mud. And the lotus of India came from that bloom in dozens of species in the woodland and along the shore of Grand Lake. I look upon the several varieties of pines, each so interesting, and yet so different in its character. Some of these trees seem so intimate in their appeal to me, whereas Silently I often talk with them!

I recently received a letter from a lady who is collecting different kinds of stone, and I have a book on these that she sent me as a result of our collecting just idea. We think of jade as coming from China, but this man has found beautiful varieties in California, Arizona, Alaska, Mexico and other places, and he polishes his specimens in his own workshop.

Nature always fills me with wonder. Our precious, and semi-precious stones are the result of beauty—the diamond, ruby, star sapphire, opal, and others—how they reflect God's love planted in everywhere, by nature as well as human hearts! Take the beautiful coloring to be found in summer Island retreat, I marvel at such pure white in a flower born in the mud. And the lotus of India came from that bloom in dozens of species in the woodland and along the shore of discovered.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

In Ontario, they are faced with another revival of the agitation to allow poison in the war against wolves. It is true that in some districts the wolves are multiplying in an extraordinary fashion. But poison is a doubtful remedy.

A trapper who is also an outfitter and guide found a fine buck deer that had been killed by wolves. It lay on the edge of a lake, and the outfitter, the trapper cut the buck's head off, carried it out onto the ice and made little holes in it with the prong of the antlers in, so that wolves could get their teeth in it. He then cut incisions in the flesh and put poisoned baits in them. From that bait he later got two foxes and a fisher.

The following autumn, eleven months later, this same trapper was a hunting party in the woods; and while crossing the same lake in canoes, stopped at an island for lunch. A splendid bluetick hound was one of this trapper's most precious possessions. It and a couple of other dogs with the party leaped out and began to explore. The trapper set up some stones, made a fire, and just had the kettle boiling for tea, when he got ten minutes, when he happened to glance down the beach to see his valuable hound gnawing at

Variety Concert Well Received

IVANHOE — The variety concert given recently in Ivanhoe Town Hall under the auspices of Bible Lake Choir, featuring the Madoc Band and "Quintones" Barbershop Quartet of Belleville, was well received by an appreciative audience.

Following the singing of "O Canada," a one-minute silence was observed in tribute to Queen Mary. Rev. Thomas Tyson, chairman for the evening's entertainment, extended a warm welcome to the visiting artists and the audience.

"Determination," overture, solo by Carl Blakely; "Hospitality March," "Ambition Overture," "Mr. Joe," novelty number; "The Scotsland," a medley of southern airs; "Stop," novelty number; "The Little Grey Church," overture; "Our Director." The last number was conducted by Master John Tyson whose birthday fell on the date nearest March 26th.

These artists delighted the audience with their smooth harmony and are to be commended on freely giving of their time and talent.

The band leader is to be congratulated on the fine performance of the band, newly organized in September, 1952, also for presenting the program free of charge.

Humorous readings were given "A Soldier's Monologue," by Miss Margaret Wright; "My Wife is Secret," and "Patent Medicines," by Mrs. Jud McGowan. All were given hearty applause.

The chairman, on behalf of the choir expressed appreciation to all who had contributed to the program.

The proceeds, amounting to $42.25, will be used to purchase choir gowns.

Red Cross Drive

Mr. and Mrs. William Johnson; Mr. Deane Johnson, Harold; Mrs. James Sharpe, Stirling; and Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Summers, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Thrasher, Mt. Pleasant were Sunday supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Shaw.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Bateman, Harold, were Sunday supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Earl McMaster.

MOUNTAIN VIEW

COMMUNITY EUCHRE

MT. VIEW — The community euchre party was held in the school on Thursday evening with Mrs. R. Barber and Miss B. Wallbridge acting as sponsors.

There were 12 tables in play. At the conclusion of the game, prizes were awarded to Mrs. Fred Lee, and Francis Trumble for high score; lone hands, to W. Stanton; low score, to Miss Annie Sayers, and E. E. Wallbridge. Refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

The next party will be held on April 2, with Mrs. Fred Lee and Mrs. W. Stanton acting as hostesses.

Mrs. Harry Clarke of Madoc Junction, and Mrs. W. J. Tufts spent Thursday afternoon with Mrs. T. B. Hamilton and Seymour.

PICTON

PICTON — Miss Ella Shannon, who has been ill for a number of weeks at the home of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Charles Shannon, Centre St., is now a patient at Prince Edward County Hospital.

A large crowd attended the shower at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Archie McConnell, Old Chapel Road, on Thursday night, in honor of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Quaiffe of Waupoos. Many of the young people had brought along their guitars and music, which, with visiting, passed the evening most pleasantly.

The young couple received many lovely and useful gifts for which they graciously thanked everyone.

Mr. and Mrs. Chris Lockyer have the sympathy of many friends in the sudden passing of their little daughter, Penny Sue, on Saturday. Entombment was made in Glenwood Vault, Picton, on Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Doherty, 53 years of age, who had made his home for the past few years with the Misses Hammill on Mary St., West, was found dead in his bed on Friday. The body was shipped to the home of his parents, near Mont-Barker Street.

real, P.Q. for burial. The deceased had formerly been a boat builder.

Plans have been approved by Picton Public School Board for the construction of a new public school on the site of the former Picton Collegiate Institute on

HOUSTON'S "HOME OF THE WEEK"

DESIGN 212: This five-room house was designed by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation for economy without severity. The compact arrangement of the kitchen-dining room permits a good-sized living room which is made more attractive by a bay window. The bay also adds to the exterior appearance of the house. Ample closet space is provided in the two upstairs bedrooms as well as the smaller one on the ground floor. The exterior dimensions of the house are 25' 8" by 25' 4" and the area is 1,024 square feet. The cubic measure is 14,350 cubic feet. Working drawings may be obtained from The Houston Co. at a minimum cost.

Weddings

WAY — MORAN

Beneath an arch of overgreens interspersed with flowers, a private wedding was solemnized on Thursday, February 26th., at 1.30 p.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Moran, Trenton, when their daughter, Dorothy Irene, became the bride of Lawrence Way, also of Trenton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Way, of Picton. The Rev. R. McEachern officiated. The home was tastefully decorated with pink and white streamers and white bells.

Mrs. Leslie Frost provided the wedding music.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was radiant in her bridal gown of tebilo nylon net over taffeta fashioned with a princess bodice featuring a Chantilly lace jacket, having long pointed sleeves. She wore a finger tip veil and bridal headdress, and carried a bouquet of red roses.

Miss Patsy Bush, of Frankford, was her only attendant. She was in pink net over taffeta with strapless bodice and bouffant effect. She carried a nosegay of colored flowers and wore a matching headdress.

Mr. Lionel Way, of Toronto, attended his brother.

The reception was held in the Frankford United Church hall, where the bride's mother received, wearing a steel grey crepe gown with corsage of pink carnations. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who was gowned in grey figured crepe with corsage of red carnations.

For travelling to Toronto and points west, the bride chose a navy linen dress with grey lop coat, powder blue hat and navy accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Way will make their home at Batawa, Ontario.

Out-of-town guests were present from Campbellford, Stirling, Belleville, Picton, Toronto and Trenton.

Prior to her marriage, the bride was the honored guest at a kitchen shower given by Miss Patsy Bush; a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. Harry Heaton behalf of the employees of the engineering department of Batawa, and her girl friends of Frankford, and a miscellaneous shower at the home of Miss Lois Carew.

The bridegroom-to-be was presented with tri-light floor lamp from his fellow workers of department 423 of the Bata Shoe Company.

KAVANER — MANSFIELD

Bridge Street United Church was the scene of a quiet wedding on Saturday, March 21st, at 2.00 p.m. when Rev. Duncan McTavish united in marriage Miss June Mansfield, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Smith, and Ronald Clayton Kavaner, youngest son of Mrs. H. Jones, of Rochester, N.Y., and Mr. G. F. Kavaner.

The bride wore a navy satin gown with matching accessories with corsage of talisman roses and lily-of-the-valley.

Her only attendant was Mrs. Hazel Day, who chose a gown of black and white printed taffeta with matching accessories. Her corsage was of Better Times red roses.

Mr. Bernard Brown of Ottawa, Ontario, attended the bridegroom.

A reception was held at the Eagleers' Hall, Pine Street, for the immediate families.

Mrs. Smith, mother of the bride, wearing a navy blue crepe gown and matching accessories received the guests, assisted by Mrs. Sidney Robinson, aunt of the bridegroom, wearing navy blue gabardine suit and navy accessories. Both ladies wore corsages of assorted spring sweet pea blooms.

For the honeymoon trip to Montreal, the bride wore a cross-maker suit of teal gray gabardine with canary fleece topcoat and navy accessories. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Kavaner will reside on Canniffon Road, Belleville.

Women's Activities

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S.

IVANHOE — The March meeting of St. Andrew's W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. John McIlroy on Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Barton Hagerty conductin gthe meeting.

A poem was read followed by prayer led by the president.

"Africa, Yesterday and Today," was given in an interesting manner by Mrs. Milton Shorey.

The continent of Africa covers 12,00,000 square miles, approximately one fifth of the earth's surface, into which Europe, India, China, and the United States of America can be neatly fitted.

Capitals of Geography—Then and Now

Africa has been described as the captive of geography and history. Most of it lay in the ocean and a sea of sand — other than the Nile River and a few miles on her ancient culture, fears and superstitions.

There are many great things in Africa. The largest supply of diamonds, the largest city of the world — the mightiest rivers, the highest mountains, the largest desert lakes, the deepest copper and gold mines, the richest tin mines, diamonds and gold— It is also an outstanding producer of cocoa and coffee.

Varying Forms of Government

The various forms of government the world are located there, the Union of South Africa, Liberia, Sahara and Malakat. Like other things in Africa, the forms of government vary widely. In some areas, the white man has imposed upon the controlling European power. As in Kenya, Rhodesia, the white man is self-rule, and the British are trying to help people from within their area for that day.

Mrs. Shorey's subject's "Program of Advance," reads:

Through the years no other book has been read, studied, memorized, opened more minds, raised more hopes, and fulfilled more desires than Christianity in Africa. Through the power to remove the prejudices which bar the way to lasting advance and progress.

A meditation on the mission study was given by Mrs. W. V. Walker.

Other nations have striven for Africa's lands and wealth — Equal opportunities have never been won for the souls of her people —"May we, who profess to be followers of our Lord, be leaders of all selfishness, hatreds and prejudices and equality for the people of Africa."

A Resurrection message was given by Mrs. Harold Thompson.

Business was discussed.

Day of Prayer

"Women's Day out of Prayer in Africa" was read by Mary Ann Fleming telling of a deaconess who braved dangers to observe the Day of Prayer meeting in Angola. Between her and the village lay a dangerous swamp and the swollen Ku Kema River. This home-like meeting puts many to shame who sometimes forget to attend their meetings.

After the meeting closed refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants.

Readers' Saturday Column

(Conducted by MARY MOORE)

I can't locate the Brazilian or Mexican milk dish you asked for. It's a custard made with 2 cups cream and is called Dorilio and calls for 2 cups sour milk, ½ cup brown sugar. These are heated together in double boiler until thick, then chilled. Sounds as if it has possibilities, doesn't it?

QUESTION:

Here you say cookie recipe that could be used with fig filling to take the sweetness of fig bars? I haven't been successful in making dough that turns out tender but not rich or sweet . . . Someone asked for method of cooking potatoes and carrots with the roast. You may be interested to hear that I've found it satisfactory to do this by placing the vegetables as close to the meat as possible, then cooking the roast tightly with aluminum foil. Do not push the foil between vegetables and meat but tuck it in on both sides.

Ernestine L.

ANSWER:

As you doubtless know it is impossible to reproduce the dough that commercial cookie manufacturers use in their high speed extruding machines to handle the dough, which is then rotated from mold in the ovens to bake them to perfection. The nearest I can come to it is this recipe:

FIG FILLED COOKIES

One-half cup shortening (preferably butter), 1 cup white sugar, 1 egg, 2½ cups sifted cake flour, 1 teaspoon each soda and vanilla, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ cup sour milk. Cream together the shortening and sugar until light. Add vanilla and beat in eggs. Mix and sift the flour and salt with the salt and soda. Add the dry ingredients alternately with the sour milk, beating until dough is smooth. Roll out on floured board to ¼ inch thickness and cut out with round cookie cutter. On half of the rounds put a filling of figs made this way: Add together 1 cup figs, ½ cup sugar and 2 tablespoons flour, and add 1½ cups chopped figs. Cook, stirring, over boiling water until thickened. Cover with remaining rounds . . . and seal edges well. Bake at 375° F. for 12 minutes, until delicately browned.

Thank you for your vegetable roasting ideas.

QUESTION:

I missed the recipe for cocoanut dreams and clover leaf buns. I would like to make a small amount of white or brown bread, is there anyone in the hot kitchen or kneading? I never have any luck with my yeast while trying a recipe should I use all-purpose or cake flour? For the sugar content of the yeast, is it one tbsp. to the pound or 2 1/3 cups?

Edith A.

ANSWER:

For 1 pound sugar allow 2 cups plus 2 tablespoons. Cake flour is best in the white fruit cake, but all-purpose flour will do nicely. I have mailed you the recipe for whole wheat bread described in the column also cocoanut dreams.

To make clover leaf rolls from some of the whole wheat dough in the recipe I am sending you you could follow directions for shaping described in recipe below.

CLOVER LEAF ROLLS

Two dozen.

Mix 1 cup luke warm milk, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 teaspoon salt. Soak one package dry granular yeast in ¼ cup lukewarm water for 5 minutes without stirring. Then stir well then stir into the first mixture until mixture is smooth. Stir in one egg and ¼ cup very soft shortening (shortening may be melted and cooled instead, if desired). Sift flour and measure 3 cups and stir in half of it with a spoon until smooth, then add remainder and mix it in with the hands. The dough should be soft and sticky. It is advisable to use a bread flour if you can buy it in your community. Turn the dough into lightly floured board and knead it until dough is smooth and elastic and squeezy. Put dough back into greased bowl and allow to rise, covered and in warm place, until double in bulk. Grease pan with fat in bowl, pull edges to centre and turn smooth over once. Cover. Let rise again until almost double—about 15 minutes is usually enough. Break off small dough into balls by rolling between palms, about 1 inch in diameter. Place 3 balls in each greased muffin tin. Brush with melted butter. Let rise until quite light to touch—about 30 minutes in warm place. Bake in 400° F. oven for about 12 to 15 minutes.

SISTERS ALL

By Jean Love Galloway

So many people never save any money because they spend all their time trying to budget their spending instead of their saving. There isn't much use trying to cut outgoing expenses, if you make no provision to salt the savings away.

Best quotation along this line ever appears on a deposit slip of the Royal Bank which quotes Andrew Carnegie, "The best way to accumulate money is resolutely to bank a fixed portion of your income, no matter how small the amount."

325 Delegates, Visitors Attend W.M.S. Presbyterial Meeting

The 325 delegates and visitors attending the annual meeting of the Belleville Presbyterial of the Woman's Missionary Society of the United Church of Canada on Wednesday in Bolloway Street church were thrilled to the depths of their being by the stirring addresses given by their Dominion Board Home Mission executive secretary, Mrs. C. Maxwell Lovery, who had first hand information for the Presbyterial as to what is done with their money. Mrs. Lovery has travelled with United Church missionaries from "ocean to ocean" from Newfoundland to the Yukon, serving fellow Canadians by means of Christian education through church schools, training of candidates; providing hospital, medical and surgical care; improving home life and economic conditions; and bringing the Christian gospel of love peace and good will to hungry folk of spiritually starved areas inland and ocean ports.

Every Means of Travel

She has used every means of travel, streamlined planes, trains, ocean steamers, rolling stock, dinghies and dories. She knows and experiences with the W. M. S. workers in their hardships, heartaches, and thrilling joys. Miss Stella Burry, St. John's, Newfoundland, says "We looked forward to Mrs. Lovery's visit—she came and saw and went, assuring us that she approved of our work and encouraged us in all our undertakings." It has often been said of her: "Mrs. Lovery is a real helping somebody to do something that they want to do." She read from her own stamina the help and encouragement needed by missionaries to hold fast to their service. No one knows the work in Canada better.

Newfoundland Work

Mrs. Lovery took her listeners to Newfoundland in the afternoon where she gave them a graphic view of the work done by Miss Miss Ruth A. Tillman, Bessie French, Stella Burry working in the Bonavista-St. John's Presbyterial, Bruin, Carbonear, Grand Falls-Twillingate, Gambo-Lewisporte; Miss Nancy Edwards at Gander Airport and Miss Margaret Kenaghaus, Port Worker at Halifax.

Newfoundland. How often men and women have had narrow escapes but still they voyage on through storm and fog and the Dominspeck. Through these hazardous voyages one sees these folk encouraging one another and it is then that one understands why Newfoundlanders like to sing hymns like: "Will Your Anchor Hold?" These are the songs they have brought up by. But they are also interested in the program of the church.

First Presbyterial

The first Grand Falls-Twillingate Presbyterial was held at Lewisporte. Schools were closed for that day, the teachers taught on Thanksgiving Day so they could go to Presbyterial. Many women came by boat taking five hours but it was a thrilling day for them. These are the people of the Christian missions. As one sits here in his comfortable offices he can not measure the influence and money that is spent in Canada and overseas. The Dominion Board has the responsibility of spending your money that has responsibility in a great opportunity.

In her all too short period of time, Mrs. Lovery also told about the Home Mission work in Northern Canada. There are never enough women to fill the vacancies. The Woman's Missionary Society offers young women wonderful opportunities for service and invitations are extended to all young women who might interest themselves in the work.

Feast of Knowledge

Mrs. Lovery's addresses were climaxed by a symposium in the evening conducted by Mrs. Ralph Nayler, Mrs. Wm. Mayor, Mrs. T. Taylor, Mrs. M. Davidson, Mrs. G. Mrs. Ross, Mrs. Wm. Bowerman who was really treated to a "feast of knowledge." Mrs. Nayler's campaign theme for the United Church Training School in this district was "Every auxiliary a part" in planning and executioning that building." Also a tribute to the part of the ministers have played in their congregations, accepting the call, encouraging, preparing for service as deaconesses, nurses, missionaries, and deputy workers. When the new training school building with the comfortable living accommodations available the W.M.S. wants to have sufficient young women from United Church congregations take its course of training and prepare themselves to go into the work of the church.

Need of Workers

Mrs. Davidson told of the present need of 25 nurses, 30 school teachers, four doctors, 14 church workers and 52 other workers.

Mrs. Ross, daughter of her wealthy storehouse, gave many personal experiences she had in the "Vacation Church Caravans." Groups of young people trained and prepared to go out on caravans. Each takes messages of hope and the Gospel to the isolated places and "Young Peoples' Camps; in their training the caravan personnel get a better insight at what the church is doing, and how it tackles its problems. The Woman's Missionary Society is a strong supporter of these caravans and all are interested in recruits.

Mrs. George Greer presented ways in which the C.G.I.T. may interest young people to give themselves for full time service in the great United Church either in Canada or overseas.

The fine worship service given by Rev. S. E. Larman, minister of Holloway Street Church, "The Bible in My Life" was a splendid opening for the. Presbyterial depicting how God was kept on speaking even after Bible went to press. It was God who inspired the writers of the great books and He continues to inspire and guide the people of this day; "that is why Presbyterials are meeting," said the speaker.

Mrs. Lovery gave the afternoon worship service on "The Bible in My Home." Following her portions of Scripture from John 5:39 and Isaiah 35:1-3 she said: "Every woman should maintain an altar in her home. "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path." We recall the first lamps—the little cruse of oil and we have come part that stage of the cruse light and today we talk about 100, 300 and 500 watt bulbs; we think we cannot do without them." She asked, "are we apt to depend too much on the indirect lighting rather than the divine lighting of the eternal? Could the Word of God be our tri-light lamp lighting up the dark places in our own lives with the radiance of Christ Himself? May our memories be as a lamp to guide us."

Evening Worship

For the evening worship service Mrs. C. Maxwell Middleton spoke on "The Bible and The Nation." She read Deuteronomy 8:1-11, 18. She referred to the assembly of Christian leaders of world churches in Northern India in 1938 to discuss the tasks of the world church. The message that came back from that assembly was: "Continue the reading of your Bibles, the inspirator and sustainer of your faith."

Mrs. Middleton challenged her listeners to read their Bibles, keep them within reach and have them in sight because they tell about God's dealings with men, pass judgment of ways of living, point out to us repentance and to new life. God has a word for every man and woman in the nation."

Memorial Service

The Memorial Service was conducted by Belleville Bridge Street Evening Auxiliary. Mrs. Helen Jones and Mrs. Pauline Clare placing the roses in their container, one for each Section, and reading memorium excerpts. Miss Norma Arriss sang "Prayer Perfect" with Mrs. Lorne Jones accompanying at the piano. The 62 deceased members' names were read by Mrs. C. Holmes.

Mrs. Clarence Holmes gave a full and interesting report of the corresponding secretary's work.

Mrs. Dennis, secretary of Christian Stewardship, presented the allocation for 1953 which was accepted by the Presbyterial—$20,600.

Mrs. F. B. Mills, the retiring treasurer, reported the 1952 allocation had been exceeded by $400. This was divided between two worthy projects—$200 sent to the Korea and the building fund for a school in Angola.

Mission Band

Mrs. Fred Bell, retiring secretary of literature, had a grand deal of work to end in her usual charming manner introduced several new books and other literature.

Mrs. F. Townsend introduced the Christian Citizenship Leader and Packet; one of which every auxiliary should have a copy.

During the luncheon hour, Rev. Mr. Lane brought greetings from Belleville Presbytery in the absence of the chairman, Rev. C. A. Puttenham, who was ill. Mrs. Arthur Davidson brought greetings from the Presbytery W. A. and Mrs. H. Jarmey, first vice-president of the Belleville Presbyterial, also brought greetings from officers who graced the head table; Mrs. R. N. Broad, Mrs. F. B. Young Peoples' Camps; in their training the caravan personnel get a better insight at what the church is doing, and how it tackles its problems. The Woman's Missionary Society is a strong supporter of these caravans and all are interested in recruits.

Mrs. George Greer presented ways in which the C.G.I.T. may interest young people to give themselves for full time service in the great United Church either in Canada or overseas.

Chapter 15

PILATE'S FIREPLACE

In the dark and early chill of Friday, April 7, Pilate was waiting. Because of what was going on in the Hall of Hewn Stones, he had to remain up all night in his gloomy reception hall. He must be ready for the official hearing he would soon be called upon to give the Nazarene prisoner.

Pilate felt a persecuted man himself. The Roman governor, a warrior and a most distinguished soldier, hated the mean fate that had sent him to rule a poor colony like Palestine. In the present turmoil he knew that while he was facing a local situation, it nevertheless had explosive political aspects, dangerous to his own interests.

Unhappily for him, Annas and Caiphas held him actually at their mercy. One more complaint to Rome, one more uprising in Palestine, and he would be out of the imperial favor. His position enraged him; if he could help Jesus, he would, just to frustrate Annas.

The air of the dark house before dawn was damp and cold as a dog's nose.

Pilate shivered a little suddenly he heard a lictors sounded on a Flemish horn; signal that Annas and his prisoner were at the gate.

A Pagan's House

Annas knew what would happen: Pilate was coming out to them instead of asking them inside. In their earlier confab the procurator had agreed that he would hear the case out of doors, beyond the gates of the Praetorium, as a concession of Pilate to the religious immunities of the people. Because this was the Passover feast, they had a ceremonial objection to entering the domain of a Gentile; they would have to purify themselves, and there would not be time for that before the feast. To enter a pagan's house meant contracting impurity for seven days.

Annas and Caiphas stood a little to one side—Annas rubbing his long nose reproachfully and Caiphas playing with his beard. They were making room for the prisoner, who was pushed forward so that He stood with them before the still-closed gates.

The prisoner had been ill-used, one could see that. One tanned cheek, gleaming in the flickering torchlight, showed a red splotch where someone had struck Him; His left eye was bruised and the skin under the lower lid was turning color. Loosely around His throat hung a napkin knotted at the back; it had fallen there from His eyes; they had blindfolded Him, as loafer after loafer struck Him, crying: "Prophesy, now! Who is it that struck you?"

His beautiful seamless robe was stained with phlegm where many had spat upon Him. Yet the open eyes were still serene, they had pushed Him by the shoulders while He was blindfolded, buffeted Him back and forth, spun Him around, and mocked Him with blasphemous oaths, yet He seemed preserved by some inner force, some grace that rose above the buffoonery and actually brought it to an end.

His hands held before Him, still knotted at the wrists, He kept His eyes on the gate. There came a rumbling of wheels and rusty chains, the screak of hinges, and the Praetorium gates fell inward.

There was Pilate sitting in his chair of ivory and bronze on the high platform.

Like a Friend

Jesus, bound and delivered, lifted His keen face to meet His judge. Pilate, still robed against the morning chill, cast Him a brief but appraising glance, then stopped; the official's first startled feeling was one of recognition. Where had he seen this man before? He had an insane impulse to lift his hand in the salute and greet Him as a friend. That was why he turned away so hurriedly from the prisoner to the villainous faces of the mob.

The procurator heard the low buzz-buzz of their chatter—and then, shaking himself free of foreboding, he turned to Annas with a cynical expression and asked for the indictment.

"What accusations do you bring against this man?"

"We have found this man perverting our nation and forbidding to give tribute to Caesar"and saying that He is Christ the King!"

This man with His wrists bound, in this soiled robe, and His lacerated face — a king! Perdition! These people had never seen a real king! Thus thought Pilate, who had twice broken bread with Tiberius. He chuckled to himself and leaned down toward Annas.

"This King, you," he suggested, with a lenient clearing of his throat, "and judge Him wholly according to your own law."

But Caiphas shouted back angrily:

"It is not lawful for us to put any man to death. You know that."

Like a Grand Jury

Of course Pilate did know that. Their elaborate process had been no more than a sort of magistrates' court held to establish a primafacie case; or even less than that, these elders of Jerusalem had acted as a grand jury and all they could do was return a true bill.

Pilate turned to the accused and with a wry turn of his mouth, which showed a broken tooth, he suddenly roared:

"Are you the King of the Jews?"

Jesus returned his smile and answered:

"You say it."

Again Caiphas stepped forward and lifted his forefinger warningly.

"We know this man to be the son of Joseph the carpenter, born of Mary, but His followers say that He is the son of God and a king."

Again Pilate chuckled.

"Tell me how I, being a procurator, can try a king?"

Caiphas, having no sense of humor, protested:

"We do not say that He is a king, but they say that He is."

Pilate looked down at Jesus, and this time it was a long scrutiny. The bruises and blood gave Pilate the creeps. All his life he had missed something, a mystery forever eluding him. How did he see it, like a bright and wonderful light, in the face of a condemned man? Now, if he had found it, must he kill it?

Pilate made a brusque motion; the prisoner was to go inside; Pilate would talk with Jesus alone.

Man to Man

The big, heavy-breathing official, with his clinking bracelets and perfumed armpits, led the way boldly inside to the same fireplace from which he had just been called. He kicked a second chair toward the hearth and with a rough, almost threatening motion of his arm, bade Jesus be seated, facing him. One was the judge and the other the condemned prisoner, and yet now the expression on Pilate's face was that of man to man.

"Are you," he repeated with a gleam of amusement that emphasized their privacy, "the King of the Jews?"

Jesus, back and head erect, leaned forward, palms on knees; Pilate was conscious of the intense personal magnetism in the great eyes. In that moment of deepening attraction a soldier appeared between the drapes of the farther door and gave a salute. He brought Lord Pilate a perfumed note from the Claudia Procula. Scowling, the Roman read what his wife had written:

"Have nothing to do with that righteous man; for I have suffered many things this day and dreamed a dream because of Him."

That dream again. Why should she dream so powerfully of Him? Pilate was known as an unsuperstitious man, foolishly and extravagantly devoted to his wife. But he had not expected tonight that she would try to interfere in the conduct of his office, a thing she had never bothered to do before in all the time they had spent together in this frontier outpost. The moment Procula interfered, Pilate stiffened and was chilled with resistance. No woman could tell him what to do.

Anarchy and Treason

At once he began to think of the counts against the prisoner. He was said to be a seditionist. By all reports He stood for demolishing established social ideas, a rebellion, after which a new sovereign would take over, a God-anointed king with his throne in Jerusalem. Did Procula know her husband to encourage that? Now the governor looked at Jesus with a restive eye, while at his thick fingers tore the letter. Messianism, that was what it was! And messianism meant anarchy and treason — a dangerous thing in this spot of infection in the empire. The heart of Pilate hardened.

The Jewish aristocrats would all like Pilate better if he condemned this Nazarine straight to the cross.

"Are You," Pilate repeated truculently, all chuckle gone from his voice, "are You the King of the Jews?"

"Say you this of yourself?" asked Jesus calmly. "Or did others tell it you concerning Me?"

"Am I a native?" barked Pilate. "Your own nation and the chief priests delivered You to me.

He was startled at the aptitude with which Jesus had met the first question. The prisoner had demanded that Pilate make clear his own position. Was it that he was searching into the political side of this problem, which would be a proper position for a Roman judge? Or was he concerned with blasphemy, a charge of no importance to Rome but abominable in the eyes of Jerusalem? In effect, Jesus was asking Pilate: "Do you ask Me this, fearing that I am an earthly pretender to an earthly crown and hence an enemy of Caesar's empire, or do you want to know if I claim to be the Messiah?"

"Not of This World"

Then Jesus replied with final explicitness:

"My kingdom is not of this world."

In those seven forthright words Pilate had his reply; yet it was hardly the answer he wanted. It would have been all right if only Jesus had been willing to utter a simple one-word denial. How can anyone have a kingdom without being a king? Hadn't Jesus already convicted Himself?

Jesus, in His quiet voice, was explaining:

"If My kingdom were of this world, My servants would certainly strive that I should not be delivered to the Jews, but now My kingdom is not from hence."

Pilate's blue eyes blinked as he grated in hard repetition:

"What I want to know is—are You, then, a King?"

To this question Jesus made an answer for the ages:

"You say that I am a king. To this end was I born and for this cause I came into the world, that I should bear witness to the truth. Everyone that is of the truth hears My voice."

And Pilate, hearing His voice, feeling the near presence of that mystery that had eluded him for so long, leaned forward and asked in a deep whisper:

"What is truth?"

Pilate was not jesting, but he did not stay for an answer. He read it in the eyes of the prisoner. He rose from his chair, bent over Jesus, and said pleadingly:

"Do You not hear how great testimonies they allege against You? Look in how many things they accuse You. Do You answer nothing?"

Jesus answered nothing. Pilate threw up his hands.

"He Forgave"

"You don't answer me? Don't you know that I have power to crucify you—as I have also power to release you?"

Then Jesus answered:

"You should not have any power against Me, unless it were given to you from above. Therefore, he that has delivered Me to you has the greater sin."

Pilate's eyes gleamed with the joy of a wholly irrational relief. This man understood. Why, He even forgave! He was reasuring Pilate that He really did appreciate the difficulties of his position. Pilate would do anything for a man like this!

It was no longer for Procula's sake only, it was for the sake of the prisoner Himself that Pilate would try to free Him. Past the torches of the guards they marched, the accused and the judge, and out again into the open courtyard.

DIXIE HERE TONIGHT!

It will be a grim, determined Black Hawk junior squad that steps on the ice tonight against the Dixie Flashers squad in search of their third victory in this surging junior "B" playdown quarter-finals series. At the moment the teams are deadlocked at two wins each, all victories coming on the squad's home ice. It looks from here as though the team that "breaks through the other fellow's service", to use a tennis expression, stands a good chance of copping the series confusion and go on to meet starry Weston Dukes who are sitting twiddling their thums, champing at the bit, and aching to get a crack at whatever squad emerges the victor in this Belleville-Dixie series.

The Hawks cannot afford to lose tonight's classic, for that is what it should be. They lost a heartbreaker in Dixie the other night; their belated effort not being good enough to haul the victory coals out of the fire after a weakish first-period effort. The Cook-Barrett crew will likely open the joust with a sustained offensive as they have done in the games played here and which produced victory.

The Flashers are a fast, hard-checking crew who snap at every opportunity offered them and the Hawks cannot afford to let up even for a moment. This department feels that the Barrettmen can defeat Flash Hollett's bevy of puckchasers but it is going to take the best they have to do it. The same grin under way at 8:30 and a full house would go a long way towards helping the youthful Hawks to their third victory. The next game is being played in Dixie on Monday night and if the seventh tilt is necessary it will be iced here on Wednesday.

BASEBALL MEETING POSTPONED

The meeting of the Belleville Baseball Association scheduled for the city hall council chambers for tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock has been postponed until some might next week, secretary treasurer Tyler Denyes announced late yesterday.

Reason for the postponement is that up to last night no word had been received from representatives of the newly formed Border Baseball League as to the number of possible entries, although this is supposed to be available at a meeting of the league being held in Kingston on Tuesday next.

Meanwhile the BBA will send out feelers to the meeting of the Lakeshore Baseball League being held over this weekend to ascertain whether a Belleville entry would be welcomed providing the Border League set-up proves unsatisfactory.

Manager Jack Carson of the BBA, was supposed to receive word from the Border League headquarters in Watertown Thursday night as to the number of definite entries and what they are. As was said, no word had been received up to last night, and Carson does not want his ship left out in the cold when there is a possibility of entering the Lakeshore League.

WELCOME STRANGER!

Speaking of baseball, a new and welcome arrival in the city of a baseball personality is seen in the person of Harvey Hall, formerly of Fort Erie, who has moved to Belleville. He is connected with the CNR. Harvey is a former baseball player and played some twenty years in and around Buffalo and also in Canada. Harvey has had a wealth of experience in coaching baseball and hockey, especially among the minors and his appearance and offers to help in any capacity was doubly welcome at the minor baseball meeting held on Thursday night.

But don't go away. There is more to this Hall story. Harvey has a son, Don, nineteen years of age, said to be a starry junior hockey player and baseball catcher. Don did not move with his family to Belleville but will join them in the near future. He will reside here with them. He played junior and other types of minor hockey in Fort Erie and should be an asset to baseball and hockey teams of this city.

The Big Four and The WIFU Climb Into CRU Driver's Seat; 'Greatest Change in History'

By Graham Trotter, Canadian Press Staff Writer

EDMONTON (CP)—The Canadian Rugby Union bowed to the glitter of the dollar sign Friday and in so doing averted a wide-open split between its professional and amateur components that would have toppled it from its pedestal as the Dominion's supreme regulatory football body.

Threatened with secession of its two big money-making conferences unless they were given a greater say-so in how to manage their own affairs, the CRU shifted voting control from the minor league factions to the East's Big Four and the Western Interprovincial Football Union.

The two big unions, which make the CRU solvent, now hold a 6-to-4 voting edge. At the 1952 annual meeting—before there was talk of pulling out—they were out-voted 5 to 4 in an attempt to gain control.

The Big Four and the WIFU, whose teams have provided all the last decade from play-for-fun football to individual annual budgets of $250,000 or more, now have three CRU votes apiece instead of two.

Will Be Stronger

The defunct Western Intercollegiate Football Union, a thorn in the side of the CRU since with its one vote, although inactive, resigned from the CRU. The votes held by the inactive Rugby Football Union and the one each held by the Quebec Rugby Football Union and the Eastern Intercollegiate Union were left unchanged.

CRU president Art Chipman of Winnipeg, who hands over the reins of the office today to Norm Perry of Sarnia, said at a banquet tendered by the Edmonton Eskimos Friday night that he was confident the CRU would be stronger and go on to better things under the new setup.

WIFU president Walter Sprague said the shift in voting power was the greatest constitutional change in the CRU's history.

The move was accomplished to the two-hour session behind closed doors and no real fireworks were apparent. It was expected that only Toronto Argos of the eight big-minded teams were lukewarm to the proposition, but they were outvoted on the issue in their own league.

Before heading into contentious rule changes at today's wind-up of the first CRU annual meeting west of Winnipeg, the football executives tackled the price of Grey Cup spectator tickets, split up a $15,000 pot from 1952 Grey Cup game incidentals, set a uniform deadline for signing of American import and Canadian senior players, and put the props under intermediate football.

Tickets to the Grey Cup game, to be held Nov. 28 in Toronto, a week after the country's first Grey Cup semi-final in the West between the WIFU and ORFU champions, were boosted to $6, $5 and $3.50 from $5.50, $4.50 and $3.50.

The $15,000 from television, radio, movie and program rights at the 1952 Dominion final that the CRU had originally kept for itself was divided to give the CRU $5,000 and Toronto and Edmonton $10,000 between them.

A CRU committee to investigate and be responsible for all these incidentals growing out of the Grey Cup final and semi-final was to be set up today.

Oct. 1 of each year will be the deadline for the signing of all American import and Canadian seniors.

Teams will be allowed replacements for signed American imports called up under United States military draft after the Oct. 1 cutoff, subject to CRU investigation.

Paddy Young Verdicts Durando

NEW YORK (AP)—Paddy Young Friday night smacked his way into an American middleweight title fight with Carl (Bobo) Olson by scoring a unanimous decision over rugged Ernie Durando in a bruising Madison Square Garden 12-rounder. Young, an 11-to-10 favorite, weighed 160 to Durando's 157½.

Ears over both eyes by the fourth round and rocked twice within the same span, the lion-hearted New Yorker came on like a prairie fire to win impressively in his first meeting of the two sloggers.

The scoring, all for Young, was: referee Ruby Goldstein, 6-5-1; judge Bert Grant, 7-5, and judge Harold Barnes, 7-4-1.

CRU Boosts Intermediates

EDMONTON (CP)—The Canadian Rugby Union adopted the first set of rules and regulations for intermediate football at its annual meeting Friday.

Included in the resolution was a clause saying the CRU, at the discretion of its executive, would "guarantee against loss" in the intermediate East-West final.

"This puts the props under intermediate football in Canada," said Bill Fry of Toronto, head of the CRU intermediates committee and one of the prime boosters of this classification.

The CRU in 1950 recognized an Intermediate East-West final for the Canadian championship. But the sole contribution in the last two years was the awarding of championship crests.

Intermediate football in the past was largely an eastern proposition, with Manitoba providing the only competition for the bona fide Canadian title in the last couple of years. It is reported that 1953 will see Calgary and Saskatoon join Winnipeg and St. Boniface in the western picture.

Under the new regulations, the Canadian intermediate final will be alternated between the East in the odd-number years and the West in the even-numbered years.

The cup for the Canadian intermediate championship will be the Percy Page trophy, which is the trophy for the eastern championship the Dr. Ferguson Trophy.

Orono Swamps Tamworth 13-1

Definitely outclassed from the start, the Tamworth Braves, champions of the North Hastings Hockey League went down to a 13-1 defeat before the strong Orono team in Memorial Arena last night.

The game was the first of a three-of-five series in intermediate "B" playdowns.

The Orono outfit played in the strong Lakeshore Intermediate "A" league during the schedule season, and drew a bye into the lower bracket because of its size of population.

The next game is being played in Bowmanville Monday night.

Black Hawk Coach Sid Abel Hopes History Repeats Itself; Bruins Confident of Victory

By The Canadian Press

Their ranks bolstered by three farmhands, Montreal Canadiens travelled today to Chicago in hopes of stretching their lead over the Black Hawks in the Stanley Cup hockey semi-finals to three straight.

The Canadiens went through an hour's workout Friday at Montreal. Coach Dick Irvin had 25 men on the ice, including regulars and three players called up from farm teams.

Accompanying the regulars to Chicago for Sunday night's game are rookie Jacques Plante and forwards Callum MacKay and Doug MacLaren. Plante and MacKay were called up for the series from Buffalo of the American Hockey League. MacLaren, who was used a couple of times in Thursday night's game at Montreal, will suit up 4-3, was summoned from Victoria Cougars of the Western Hockey League.

Irvin Confident

Irvin indicated he will play Dickie Moore in place of Paul Meger, hustling little wingman who suffered an eye injury from Jimmy Peters' stick Thursday night.

The Montreal coach was cheered by the impressive showing of his team-mates in the first two games of the best-of-seven series. Boom Boom Geoffrion leads the scoring parade with two goals and two assists. Dick Gamble, Moore and Meger have tallied one goal each.

The Black Hawks were hopeful that their own home crowds might enable them to overcome their two-game deficit.

Coach Sid Abel said he wasn't convinced that the Hawks were too far behind to take the series. He summed up the Chicago performance in the first two games as: "Spirit and aggressiveness, good defence, good offence and—a lot to be desired."

Supporters of the Black Hawks took comfort in the recollection of Chicago's amazing comeback in 1950. After losing opening games to the Canadiens and New York Americans, the Hawks won both those series and then downed the favored Toronto Maple Leafs to win the Stanley Cup.

At Boston, the Bruins-Detroit Red Wings semi-final also resumes Sunday night with the series tied 1-1.

Coach Lynn Patrick of the Boston team thinks he's found the formula to stop the high-flying Detroiters.

"The only way to beat the Detroit Red Wings is to keep right on top of them, checking them every second," he says.

He warned his players they had better not give Detroit a chance to get set if they want to take the third game of the best-of-seven series, adding:

"Give those Wings an opening and they'll beat your brains out."

Detroit swamped Boston in the first game of the set. The Bruins staged a fighting comeback to take the second game in Detroit 5-3, thanks to Ed Sandford's timely shooting and a terrific performance in goal by Sugar Jim Henry.

Boston was cheered by word that the club's physician that winger Real Chevrefils, who missed the first two playoff games due to a knee injury, may be back in action Sunday night.

Cambridge Wins Historic Boat Race Over Dark Blues by Eight Lengths

By ROBERT MARX

LONDON (Reuters)—Cambridge University today overcame a "Coronation jinx" and rowed away from Oxford to win the boat race, Britain's annual rowing classic, by eight lengths.

The official winning time for the 4½-mile Thames course was 19 minutes, 54 seconds The record of 17:30 was set by Cambridge in 1948.

Before the start the 99th renewal of the famed race was considered a toss-up. But as the starting flag went down the Cambridge eight moved into the lead and never lost it.

Oxford had won the event in each of the past two coronation years—the 1911 crowning of King George V and the 1937 Coronation of George VI. But they were not able to make it three in a row for Elizabeth II.

The official time was about par for a windy, rainy day.

The Cambridge shell started off quickly and gradually edged into the centre-water lane.

Oxford, remembering its ignominious sinking in a rough tidal stretch two years ago, brought out a "secret weapon"—today—long strips of canvas to keep water from spilling into the shell. They didn't sink, but they didn't come close to winning, either.

Cambridge put the race away in the long straight stretch past Duke's Meadows. Oxford never really had a chance of getting back into the race, and the crew, straining at its oars blurred with spray in the choppy waves, seemed to know it.

The winners finished fresh and smiling. The Oxford rowers collapsed over their oars.

Cambridge now has won 54 times—including 7 in the last 21 years—to Oxford's 44. There was a dead heat in 1877.

Some 250,000 fans, yelling and waving the light and dark blue colors of the two crews, lined both the banks all along the course. Millions of others followed the race and running commentary by radio and TV.

Family Licence For Non-Residents To be Abolished

TORONTO (CP)—Issuance of family fishing licences for non-residents of Ontario will be abolished, the Ontario legislature's fish and game committee decided today.

Dr. W. J. K. Harkness, head of the lands department's fish and wildlife division, said he felt issuance of the licences permitted infractions of the game laws. Six or seven persons would often fish independently on the same licence and it was impossible to check on their activities.

The committee accepted Dr. Harkness' proposal of a new type of individual licence.

A non-resident man and wife desiring to fish in Ontario would be given cards that individual licences themselves and for any child over 16. The novel type of licence, one man, wife and children 13 and under.

Local deputation officials could not say whether the new type of licensing will go into effect this summer.

Importance of Flood Control

(Noted Sportsman, Author and Creator of the Selmar Tubes)

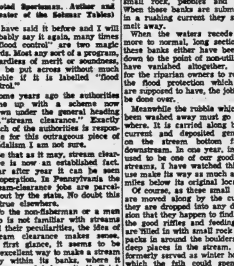
By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT

I have said it before and I will probably say it again, many times more—"flood control" are big words. Most any sort of a program, regardless of merit or soundness, can be put across without much trouble if it is labelled "flood control."

Some years ago the authorities came up with a scheme now known under the general heading of "stream clearance." Exactly which of the authorities is responsible for this outrageous piece of vandalism I am not sure.

Be that as it may, stream clearance is now an established fact. Year after year it can be seen in operation. In Pennsylvania the stream-clearance jobs are parcelled out by the state. No doubt this is true elsewhere.

To the non-fisherman or a man who is not familiar with streams and their peculiarities, the idea of stream clearance makes sense. At first glance, it seems to be an excellent way to make a stream stay within its banks, where it belongs, and thereby, it is argued, it is this.



Using bulldozers, or power shovels or both, the contractor's crew takes off the high spots and deepening the channel and piling the accumulated rubble in orderly fashion along the edge of the streamside, usually where the original natural banks were located.

Remove Islands

Islands are removed, twists in the channels are straightened, and, when the job is completed, what was once a troutstream or a bass river has been converted into a makeshift drainage ditch for the first year or so, if luck is with the contractor, moderate high waters, such as normal spring run-off, are held within bounds and everything works out according to plan.

Then comes a big rain and real high water. Too much water descends from the hills to be confined in the artificial ditch and the stream overflows its artificial confines. Then the trouble starts.

It must be remembered that the disposal banks, which in theory should confine the stream to its

Three Old Pros, Youngster Receive Honors from Writers

This story is one of a Canadian Press series on outstanding players and teams in the National Hockey League. Selections were made in a poll of sports writers and sportscasters in NHL cities.

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—Three old pros and a comparative youngster with a total of 33 years' service in the National Hockey League have received signal honor from sports writers and sportscasters of the NHL cities.

Between them, they hold four titles in a poll conducted by The Canadian Press. They are:

Fastest: Metro Modenko of Chicago Black Hawks, a 12-year veteran;

Best stickhandler: The ailing Max Bentley of Toronto Maple Leafs who had 11 seasons of the league play behind him.

Most underrated player: Bob Goldham, Detroit Red Wing defenceman with nine years' big-league experience.

Best two-way player: Red Kelly, Detroit defenceman now in his sixth NHL season.

Eleven Veterans

The high-flying Modenko is a 32-year-old Winnipeg-born right-winger who started pro hockey with Providence in 1940. Goldham, one year his junior, broke into the money ranks in 1941 and Bentley, who celebrated his 33rd birthday at his Delisle, Sask., home March 1, went up to the Maple Leafs from Moncton Quebec seniors 13 years ago.

Kelly, 25, has been a mainstay on the Red Wing defence since 1947 after graduating from junior ranks with Toronto St. Michael's College.

Modenko showed his heels to a field of seven nominated by the experts. He polled 17 votes, 14 more than veteran Milt Schmidt of Boston Bruins and 15 up on Fleming Mackell of Toronto, Eddie Kullman and Wally Hergesheimer, New York Rangers, and Marcel Pronovost of the Wings.

One selector, Joe Valle of The Associated Press, Detroit, saw it this way: Howie Morenz of Toronto Maple Leafs is the fastest during his "first minute on the ice" and Johnny Wilson of the Wings is the fastest "for the whole game."

Easy for Bentley

Bentley had an easy time winning his title but Kelly and Goldham squeezed to the top over a field of 11 and 12 respectively.

Bentley, dizzy-dodging centre, received nine votes, more than Elmer Lach of Montreal Canadiens received in

T. Bata Given Farewell Dinner By Associates

TRENTON (Special)—Thomas Bata bade farewell to his many friends and associated in the Trenton and Belleville district last night announcing that he was off on a trip three-quarters of the way around the world, beginning immediately.

The occasion was a dinner given for 14 technical experts from all parts of Europe, Africa and Asia, visiting Bata, after touring industries in the United States.

Elmer Sandercock, M.P.P., of Belleville, brought welcome to the "Tectour" people from Premier Leslie Frost.

Lee Grills, of Belleville, in his few remarks, said that Bata's locating near Frankford in Sidney township, was one of the nicest things that ever happened to the township.

Air Commodore W. W. Brown said he was proud to be associated with the Bata Company, explaining that he thought Canada was doing the best they could with the RCAF by putting the bulk of their strength in the defence of the cause of democracy. He said Trenton and the district was the hub of the world, both Coucil for naming Trenton the "Air Force City."

President of the Bata Company in Canada, W. W. Perry, Q.C., of Toronto, welcomed the guests, warning Canadians not to become too self centred and forget what is going on in other parts of the world. He said we must contribute to the rest of the world so that all can live in peace.

Colonel G. R. Johnston, of Brockville, was among the guests from the district present at the banquet.

Chairman of the program was William Jamieson. William Ritchie introduced the the head table, while R. Duncan lead the gathering in song.

Car Lands on Top After Hitting Curb Driver Injured

Trenton— (Special) — Flying Officer Glen S. Parslow, 23, Sidney Street, Trenton and pilot at the Trenton Air Station went flying through the air in his car Thursday night after it hit a 16-inch curb on the north west corner or Gilmour hill in high speed skid along Dundas street east. Two police constables Bruce Westfall and Grenville Carter sitting in the cruiser in front of Gould's Jewellery store said they saw a car speeding west on Dundas street east and at the corner in front of Clarence United Church go into a skid missing the west curb then turn around and slither on striking the exaggerated curb on the north west corner of Gilmour hill.

The car landed heavily on its top and one door flew open exposing the driver unconscious inside. Sparks started flying from a short circuit underneath the hood and with gasoline running out over the roadway police pulled the hurt pilot from the wreckage. The car was badly wrecked with damage estimated at $700.

Warrant officer Parslow received the injured flying officer to the R.C.A.F. Hospital where he was found to be suffering from fractured ribs.

The annual fashion show at the Trenton Country Club attracted scores of local and out-of-town people on Thursday night. Lady and gentlemen members acted as models while local merchants supplied the wearing apparel.

JOHN STILES
Stirling

Ill for only four days, John Stiles, of Stirling, died at his residence on Friday. He was in his 84th. year.

Born in Rawdon township, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Stiles, he had been a farmer in Welman's mort of his life, but retired to live in Stirling 28 years ago. He was a member of St. John's Anglican Church and of the I.O.L., No. 442, at Springbrook.

Surviving are his wife, the former Mary Tanner, one son, J. Ward Stiles, of Ottawa, and one daughter, Miss Mary Elizabeth Stiles, of Frankford. A sister, Mrs. Sarah Badgley, of Lomond, Alberta, and a grandson, Daniel, also survive.

The funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this edition.

FRANK C. BONNYCASTLE
Campbellford

Campbellford — A lifelong resident of this district, Frank Cassan Bonnycastle, died suddenly at his home on Second Street on Thursday evening. He had been in poor health for some time and was in his 74th. year at the time of his passing.

Mr. Bonnycastle was born about 3 miles south of Campbellford, son of Richard Henry Bonnycastle and Elizabeth Cassan, who predecessed him many years ago. His wife, the former Mary Florence Martin, died seven years ago. One daughter, Evelyn Frances Luttrell, of Belleville, survives him.

Mr. Bonnycastle was well known in this town, having been a photographer for some time, and more recently an insurance agent.

Fishing and hunting were his favorite sports and he spent much of his leisure time this way.

He was a member of St. John's Anglican Church and held the office of warden for some time, and was very active also in the Masonic Lodge and was a District Deputy Grand Master.

The Masonic lodge was in charge of funeral services which were conducted in Howard Bennett's Funeral Parlors. The bearers were: Hilton Beatty, George Free, Frank Long, L. B. Glover, N. A. McColl and James McMullen.

Messrs. W. J. Hall, Wilbur Wood, George Atwell, James Archer, Archie Sparks and Anson Connor were honorary bearers.

Interment was in Christ Church cemetery.

MRS. DORA E. SHANNON
Marmora

Marmora, Ont.—About seven months from the death of her husband, Ernest Shannon, Mrs. Dora Elizabeth Shannon died in St. Joseph's hospital, Peterborough, late on Thursday night.

She was born in Bunston, Ont., daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Lockhart.

After her marriage in 1914 she lived with her husband in Marmora for a time and then in Deloro where her husband was on the laboratory staff of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Co. Ltd.

Upon his retirement about two and a half years ago they returned to Marmora to reside on Forsyth St.

In her passing, the village loses a highly esteemed resident whose fine characteristics have been treasured by a large number of friends over the years.

She was a devout member of the Sacred Heart Church and belonged to the Catholic Women's League and the Altar Society for many years.

She is survived by one son, John, of Croydon, England (who recently arrived by plane); and two daughters: Mrs. William Monk (Marjorie), Toronto, and Mrs. Brock Cooper (Teresa), of Bay Shore, New York.

She is further survived by three brothers and two sisters, namely: Abe Driscoll, Marmora; John, Toronto; Edward, Ottawa; Mrs. F. Harkness, Cornwall, and

Motorists Warned To Keep Off City Boulevards

Keep cars off the boulevards is the warning of the city engineering department, which claims such areas are being extensively damaged by cars.

With the frost now coming out the ground is now soft and saturated with water with result that auto wheels cause deep ruts when boulevards are used for parking.

"Boulevards were never intended for parking," Keith Cowan, assistant engineer stated. "They are merely a protective strip between the roadway pavement and the sidewalk and motorists should never drive onto them."

These areas have to be maintained by the city and the cost of additional upkeep comes directly out of the pockets of city residents.

Mrs. R. Wesghant, Harrow.

The funeral will be held on Monday morning. Requiem Mass in the Sacred Heart Church, being followed by interment in Sacred Heart Cemetery.

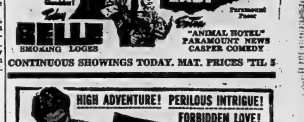
STOLEN CAR FOUND DAMAGED IN DITCH

A West Bridge Street resident was just a trifle late Friday night in reporting she had seen two youths loitering around a car parked in the neighborhood of her home.

Police were on the scene within minutes but there was no trace of either the youths or the car.

A short time later, however, police were notified by Carson Elliott that his car had been stolen in the West Bridge St. area. The car was recovered later by provincial police in the ditch on the Belleville - Trenton highway.

PROPERTY DAMAGE IN COLLISION IS EXTENSIVE



Extensive property damage resulted shortly after midnight last night when two cars collided on No. 2 highway, immediately east of the city.

Irwin Carswell, Madoc, was eastbound when opposite Jury's Garage he had to is said by police, to have attempted to make a left-hand turn. As he did so his car was struck by a following auto driven by Kenneth Attfield, of Belleville. Provincial Constable McNutt investigated.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR SUNDAY, MARCH 29, 195c

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Truly a great day is spreading a week hence—Easter Sunday. And we should pray earnestly for those forbidden to practice religion. Glory to God for all blessings!

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—The Sun, giver of light to the earth, in excellent aspect today favors all good, worthy deeds, self-sacrifices for the benefit of others less fortunate. Accept duties cheerfully.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Just the time and day to show God, your family and your neighbor how kindly and generous you can be. His work includes charity, prayers, attention to children and little duties.

June 22 to July 21 (Cancer)—Ponder seriously on the significance of this day and rise to your finest qualities, instincts. God has shown us by His Resurrection that we can live rightly and happily earn our way to Heaven.

July 22 to Aug. 23 (Leo)—Your planet, the Sun, in most benefic position today giving encouragement for spiritual enjoyment, wholesome and healthy thoughts and deeds. Never discourage, follow His holy way always.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—Set aside worry, doubt, folin family, worthy friends in happy befitting celebration of our great Feast day next Sunday. But keep alert, militant that we may continue to have freedom.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Money, business matters are not favorites today. Jupiter warns against unnecessary work that can, should, be handled the week-days. On this God's Day, let us give Him especial praise.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—No lasting discouraging indications and essential matters to home, family life are under fine Sun rays. Join children in good fun, indulge religious services, pleasant social events.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Some extra care advised now to safeguard health, personal assets. Don't be restless. Attend church and dwell on the inner contentment that comes with prayer.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn) — Do not fret or worry over material gain, at least today. Pray, write letters, enjoy earned rest, a diverting, healthy pastime. Necessary duties can be managed without strain.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Advice to Capricorn pertinent to your needs today. If possible, let unessential work go until later, and enjoy rest, recreation, perhaps a hobby. First, your religious services.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Favorable rays linger from yesterday's fine Neptune aspects. Your personal interests favored, and sound, good activities will boost living. Paying heed to signs speeds wisdom.

YOU BORN TODAY: Top success yours with the courageous, steady development of your best qualities. Aries indicates impulsiveness, vigor, decisiveness, practicality, keenness, artistry, practicality. Your choice of companions is important, also choice of occupations and pastimes. Thoroughly relax ever so often. Prayer is your standby, guidance. Birthday of: John Tyler, 10th U.S. Pres.

Search For a Hero

By Thomas Hal Phillips

"I was so!"

"You're section three. Section one had liberty yesterday."

"I know that. But I didn't get my liberty Monday, and M-I don't get my liberty [illegible] section eight."

"That's not funny." "

"I worked on those charts Monday, Mr. Pruitt said the charts had to be finished, and I could have..."

"What are you doing right now?"

"Copying the log."

"Go back and get at it, and don't you eat or sleep until it's done."

Rayland's face was ironbible. In the mirror he turned to put on his hat and say, "Aye, aye, sir."

"You see what I mean?" the captain said to us. "Too many forces on this ship are working against me. Let's go, and I'll assign your berths."

There were five or six empty bunks scattered about the hold. He pointed to one and said: "This is for you, Jones. Get it looked around as if trying to decide which of the others I should take. The Bible laugh rolled out of him while he grinned at me. "I'm going to put you over here against the bulkhead, so you'll feel at home." The bunk below you is occupied by another Mississippian. You two share the same locker—old and nine. Martin, you share the locker with H. It'll fell better when you aboard." He left.

"Don't take it so hard," I said to Bert.

"But I expected to die gloriously under an avalanche of Italy."

"There's still a chance."

"No. With this king of luck, I'll fall down a ladder and break my neck."

We began to stow our gear away.

Dave appeared at the top of the ladder, grinning. "Prep-eye!" Bert threw a shoe at him. "If you had anything to do with this, I'll kill you."

Dave held both hands up. "I'll swear I didn't know a thing the two minutes ago."

The klaxon sounded and the boatswain piped the words: "Muster on the well deck."

"Something's up," Dave said. "We never muster unless the ship's on fire."

We took our place on deck and waited for the captain to appear. When he came out (Mr. Pruitt on his right and Mr. Belcman on his left) he was grinning. Men, All hands will stand by to take on water and fuel."

The boatswain, Allison Spruce, raised his hand. "What's up, Captain?"

"We're leaving sometime tomorrow for Naples to pick up a load of mail—mostly Christmas packages."

"We always get the dirty work. Christmas is over. I'll bet you asked for it."

"I did volunteer."

"You're not playing the role of lasiah."

The captain laughed. "Spruce, wants us to know he's been to Sunday school."

"Did you ever go, skipper?" Archie Rayland said.

"I used to teach a Sunday school class."

"You ought to pray us out of this trip. If the Jerries put an egg down our stack, my folks would have to pay, 'Archie got killed going after Christmas presents.'"

XVIII

By 8 o'clock that night the ship was very quiet, like a schoolhouse a few minutes after the last bell has rung. I was too tired to wonder what might be going on, if anything, and so I went to my bunk. Bert was already in his bunk, reading a magazine. A dozen other crew members moved quietly, each about the hold or else rested in their bunks. Every word was paused. But I noticed that every two or three minutes somebody would leave, always one at a time. Finally Bert and I remained. The steward's mate came down the ladder; he did not seem surprised to find only two of us. He appeared to be tall, but actually he was not very tall. I had heard the crew call him Kenny; later I learned that his name was Dore Kenny. He smiled in that way which Negroes have of smiling, which seemed to reflect not only all of himself but all of time before his time. "Which one of you is from Mississippi?"

"I am," I said.

"The captain said one of you was from Mississippi. Where from?"

"Old Shiloh. Near Corinth. Where do you live?"

"Oxford. My daddy works at the university."

Bert looking up from his magazine. "Teach there?"

Kenny laughed. "No, he's in charge of the stadium. You know—paints the seats and marks 'em and numbers 'em. And keeps the grass. I used to help some."

I pointed to the bunk below me. "This your bunk?"

He nodded, and remained beside the lockers, as if he must remain there or else, though he did not know how.

"Where is everybody?" I said. They having a secret meeting, in hold two."

"What about it?"

"They all mad at the captain." Bert didn't you go?"

"He might want something, and he'd call for me. Besides, I ain't mad at him."

"Are they going to hang him for something?" Bert said.

Kenny laughed. "I 'spect it's all talk and no do, but they say they gonna steal his false teeth. He never wears 'em at night...

XIX

It was not yet daylight when the General Quarters alarm sounded and the word was passed "Bogies! Bogies! Man your battle stations."

"Where do we go?" I asked Bert. But he had not yet been assigned a station. He shrugged and we hurried on to the main deck. I was sorry that we had not yet been assigned, because it's always better to have something to do. By the time we had reached the topside, the word was passed: "All hands secure from battle stations and muster on the well deck."

When the muster lines were being formed, the captain spoke: "Attention! Men, I've tried to be nice to each and every one of you on this ship. I've stuck my neck out for you when I didn't have to; I've stretched a point and given some of you ratings ahead of time; I've cut watches to a minimum; and now, you've bit the hand that fed you. I'd like to think this is a little joke you have been played—I hope it is. If whoever took my teeth will step forward like a man, we'll all say it's a little joke and let it go at that. I can take a joke as well as the next fellow, but I need my teeth. I'm going to give you one minute; I'll ask Mr. Belman to time you."

"I've spoken again. My watch doesn't have a second hand."

"Whose watch has a second hand? You, Archie?"

"Yessir."

"Mark the time."

"Mark! One minute sir."

The captain walked down one line and back the other, looking each man in the face. Finally, he turned and stood at attention. "I can't believe this would happen to us. All right. The power's in my hands. Be it understood by each and every one of you that had a part in this: I'm going to grind you to your knees. The captain of the ship has absolute and supreme authority. You might say he's like a king. I want you to know that I will not hesitate to use that power of power at my command against the man, the thief, who stole my teeth. I'll crush him! Completely!"

PROBE NURSING HOME FIRE WHICH TOOK 34 LIVES

Many So Senile They Refused to Leave Beds

LARGO, Fla. (AP)—Thirty-two elderly patients, many of them too feeble-minded to save themselves, and a heroic nurse died Sunday in a wind-swept fire that destroyed a one-story frame nursing home.

Their ages ranged from 55 to 94 and many were so senile they refused to leave their warm beds in the early pre-dawn chill.

Of the 37 patients in the privately-owned Littlefield Nursing Home, only 25 escaped as neighbors turned out barefooted and in night clothes to aid rescue efforts of the owners, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Littlefield, who operated the home for 25 years.

Seen Mass of Flames

Five companions from Largo and nearby Clearwater, on the Florida west coast, came quickly but within minutes the sprawling structure was a mass of flames and charred ruins.

Cause of the fire was unknown and Assistant Fire Chief Peter Thesis said it might never be learned.

Three agencies began investigations—the state bottel commission, state fire marshal's office and Pinellas county sheriff Sid Saunders.

The tragedy cost 94 lives in all. Dr. Angus H. Smith, county welfare director, was killed in an automobile collision while evacuating three patients to hospital.

Many of the victims died in their beds, unaware of the danger that suddenly roared at them about 5:30 a.m. a chilly Sunday morning.

Yes Passiby

Of those who gained consciousness, some were too panicky to help themselves and others were too feeble-minded, and some too old and stubborn.

Thinning Ranks of European Royalty Heading for London To Attend Queen's Funeral

LONDON (CP)—The thinning house.

ranks of European royalty headed for London today to pay homage at the funeral of Queen Mary.

The royal delegations were to include young King Baudouin of Belgium, Queen Juliana of The Netherlands and her husband, Prince Bernhard, and Prince Rainier Umberto of Italy.

Greece's Queen Frederika arrived Sunday.

They will journey to Windsor Castle for the simple funeral rites Tuesday for the 85-year-old Grandmother whose death last Tuesday severed British royalty's last living tie with the Victorian era. Queen Mary, who so long had symbolized the monarchy for Britain's millions, will be buried beside her husband, King George V, and her son, King George VI, in St. George's Chapel.

Throughout Sunday and today, a silent file of mourning Britons moved past the dead queen's coffin as it lay in state in ancient Westminster Hall, adjoining the Houses of Parliament.

By dawn, nearly 40,000 persons had passed the candlelit catafalque, resplendent with the royal dress sags and silver pall.

Queen Mary herself had made similar mourning pilgrimages to the hall 18 months ago, when George VI, King George V lay in state there.

The coffin was brought to Westminister Hall Sunday, carried through cordons of soldiers in the streets from Marlborough House, where the queen died.

The present princes and leading members of the Royal Family, the queen's mother, Elizabeth, headed a short religious service preceding the lying-in-state. It was conducted by Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, archbishop of Canterbury and primate of all England.

The procession to Westminster Hall started from Queen Mary's Chapel, a 200-year-old green and gold building near Marlborough House.

Honorary pall-bearers included the commanding officer of the Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, reserve army, Queen Mary was honorary colonel-in-chief of the Toronto regiment.

Behind the gun carriage bearing the coffin walked the royal mourners, including the four royal dukes—Edinburgh, Windsor, Gloucester and Kent—followed by Prince George of Denmark, the Earl of Harewood and his brother, the Honorable Gerald Lascelles. High military officers and state officials marched behind.

Then came men and women from Queen Mary's regiments, including three other officers and 18 men of the Queen's own Rifles, led by Maj. H. F. Elliot of Toronto.

A guard of honor awaited the procession outside the great door of Westminister Hall. The coffin was taken from the gun carriage by a bearer party of the Queen's Company, Grenadier Guards, and received by the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord Great Chamberlain, Works Minister David Eccles and the Black Rod, Sir Brian Horrocks.

The Queen and the other women of the Royal Family...had driven directly to the hall and awaited the procession there. After the royal family paid homage and departed, Prime Minister Churchill, followed by Labor Leader Clement Attlee, inaugurated the long line which walked slowly to the bier, bowed and passed on.

At least 100,000 more people were expected to visit the lying-in-state before the hall closes Tuesday.

As final preparations were made for the funeral, speculation developed that Queen Mary has left large fortunes to some of the less affluent members of the Royal Family.

Among those mentioned as probable beneficiaries were the Duke of Windsor, the Duchess of Kent, the Princess Royal and her sons, and Princess Margaret.

LONDONERS FEAR 'STRANGLER JACK' STRIKES TONIGHT

Believe Seventh Victim Of Sex Maniac Found

LONDON (CP)—Urgent new warnings went out today to all British police that London's "Jack the Stranger," a sex-crazed maniac, may strike again at tonight's full moon. Already investigators had found the remains of six of his victims—and what may be the shattered skull of a seventh.

Police believe the ghastly murders show a pattern of moon madness that could bring another slaying tonight.

They pursued a theory that the stranger at the time of the full moon goes berserk, entices the women into some secluded place, strangles them and assaults them sexually.

Like the notorious Jack the Ripper of the 19th century, the stranger apparently preys chiefly on fallen women. He lured young women who walked the back streets or were out for a night time by asking them to pose for his camera in the nude. Four of the stranger's victims were in their teens or early 20s.

Scotland Yard ordered the search for the killer redoubled. It also ordered a speed-up in the dismantling of the dingy west London apartment house in which the slims were found. The back yard was spaded to a depth of five feet in the hunt because Jack is Notting Hill, a bodge-podge district of faded Victorian houses and seedy near-slums.

The charred remains of two bodies and possibly a third were dug out of the tiny garden of the apartment house on the week-end. Another had been found last Tuesday under the floor boards of the ground floor apartment and three more half-nude bodies, believed to be the murderer's victims, were discovered hidden in a papered-over cupboard.

Police speculated that the murderer used the cupboard as a temporary storehouse for the bodies until he could bury them. For that reason, they said, the search might still may be around the house or in the garden.

One of Britain's biggest police nets was out for Jack Tregaskis Christie, 25-year-old trucking clerk who had rented the murder flat for $5 a week. He is also wanted for six victims.

While the digging detectives turned, up their latest victim—or victims—behind the rotting, flea-infested walls, Londoners stood fascinated outside, eating sandwiches from lunch kits.

Police believe the killer buried victim No. 5—found Saturday—six years ago. This may mean he has been strangling and sealing away women during the last six years or more.

BARGES HELPLESS AT SEA

NORFOLK, Va., (AP) — Six ships were reported aboard two large barges wallowing helplessly in heavy Atlantic seas today. Coast Guard headquarters said the ocean-going tug Marion Moran was towing the barges to Bermuda, radioed that the two craft broke away and were being overtaken by a storm.

UN Staff Studies Red Offer To Trade Ailing Prisoners

Resumption of Armistice Talks Also Requestd

By JOHN RANDOLPH

TOKYO (AP)—The next move is up to the United Nations on a Communist offer to trade sick and wounded Korean war prisoners and reopen the suspended truce talks.

The UN is studying it cautiously and has given no indication of when it will answer.

In a mild 300-word letter Saturday, the Reds said the key accept a UN proposal of Dec. 22 for exchange ailing PoWs. They also asked the UN to resume armistice talks.

First Move Since

The truce talks—started in July, 1951—finally broke down Oct. 8, 1952, over a UN demand that prisoners be allowed to choose whether they want to go home.

The letter was the first Red move since, and it set off a welter of speculation.

Were the Communists sincere—would they go through with an exchange of prisoners?

Would this be a package deal—is reopening of the truce talks necessary before the Reds will swap sick and wounded PoWs?

What's behind it—perhaps some hidden gimmick to benefit the Reds?

The matter of sincerity was met with a "wait and see" attitude here, in Washington, London and other world capitals, along before by apparently genuine Red offers of peace.

At New Delhi, home of the Indian government that has often tried the role of east-west peacemaker, officials said privately:

"We must wait and see. The world has been disappointed too often already."

Question Not Answered

The question of a package deal was answered by the Reds, but the UN obviously viewed the PoWs and truce talks as separate problems to be dealt with one at a time.

In Washington, the state department made it clear it believes the Reds can be worked around without formally reopening the truce talks. A spokesman said it is too early to comment on going back to the armistice tent at Panmunjom.

The best military opinion here is that the sick and wounded PoW exchange would be a "working level" arrangement and not by any means a resumption of the truce talks.

Mass Resignations of OPP Reported Threatening Due to Poor Pay Received

RCAF Plane Finds Missionary, Wife and Son

WINNIPEG (CP)—An RCAF search and rescue aircraft Sunday spotted the lights flashed out by an American flying missionary lost since Wednesday on the west coast of Hudson Bay near the arctic circle.

Rev. Gleason Hines Ledyard, about 35, of Ashland, O., with his wife and three-year-old son, left on a flight from Coral Harbor, on the south shore of Southampton Island, to Wager Bay, about 500 miles north of Churchill, Man.

The plane was spotted between six and eight miles from its destination on the second sweep by the air force craft over the plane's last reported position.

The search plane reported by radio that figures could be seen waving beside the downed aircraft. It did not appear that the small plane was damaged.

It is believed that none of the three occupants of the single-engined, ski-equipped plane is injured, but they are reported to be near the end of their endurance when sighted.

$50,000 Fire In Casket Plant At Haileybury

HAILEYBURY (CP)—A $50,000 fire swept the roof of the Catholic Manufacturing Company here last night and left the owner's family of eight homeless.

The blaze, fought by both the Haileybury and Cobalt fire departments, wrecked the plant which included an apartment where Mr. and Mrs. Paul Oslin, owner of the factory, and their six children lived.

Firemen concentrated their efforts on saving adjoining property, sparing the exterior of both the Matabanic and Lakeshore hotels, threatened by the ranging flames.

More than 100 finished caskets were destroyed in the factory which employs 18 workers. Little insurance was carried.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO. (CP) —Synopsis: A small area of high pressure moving slowly eastward across Ontario has brought about improvement in the weather after several days of persistent cloudiness and snowflurries. Today's favorable weather is the prelude to a rising severely squeezed from both east and west. An intense storm over the Atlantic, causing strong winds and rain over the...Maritimes and northeastern...states, will cause rain to move westward across Quebec to the eastern limits of Ontario. Another storm over the southwestern states, causing rain and thunderstowers from Illinois to Manitoba, is edging eastward toward Ontario.

TORONTO (CP) — Mass resignations of Ontario provincial police on a province-wide scale were reported threatening today because of poor pay.

Force centres at suburban Thornhill turned in their uniforms today while six others are reported to be considering their higher-paying jobs. Five officers recently resigned at Mount Forest.

Commissioner E. V. McNeil of the OPP said he was "surprised" to hear of the resignations. He said there had been the "odd resignation," but he had heard nothing of the reported mass exodus of officers from the force.

Reports from Whitby, 30 miles east of here, indicate a feeling of discontent at the detachment there with five men threatening to resign unless their take-home pay of $60 a week is increased.

Reports of other resignations come from Port Credit and Oakville, west of Toronto, and from Peterborough, east, as saying they will quit at Port Credit unless pay boosts arrive by Wednesday.

Current rate of pay for OPP constables is $2,800 a year, plus a cost-of-living bonus.

The attorney general's department, recently authorized by increases of at least $200 a year to officers above the rank of sergeant.

Britain, USSR Plan to Discuss Air Incidents

BERLIN (AP) — Britain announced today that she will meet with the Russians in East Germany Tuesday night to discuss ways of preventing air raids incidents as the recent shooting down of a British bomber by Soviet fighters over Germany.

The announcement said the conference will be held in the Soviet quarters of the Soviet control commission in Karlshorst.

Indicating that further talks may follow, the British government declared the decision of the next meeting may be in the British sector of Berlin.

The meeting was proposed by the Soviet commander-in-chief, Lt. Germany, Gen. Vassily I. Chuikov, in rejecting a British protest that the shooting March 19 was "unwarranted and brutal act of aggression." Seven British airmen died in the RAF Lincoln bomber, which Soviet MIG fighters claimed violated the sky over a Berlin-West Germany air corridor between the Soviet zone of Germany.

SERVICE FOR MARINERS

GODERICH (CP) — Mariners sheltering in this port were wished good sailing and God's blessing at this season's Passover at the historic mariners' service Sunday night in Knox Presbyterian Church. Rev. R. G. MacMillan, church minister, conducted the service.

Editorial Controversy Arises As Second London Newspaper Asks Duchess be at Crowning

LONDON (AP) — A second London newspaper, the Liberal News Chronicle, today urged the Royal Family to "bury the past" and invite the Duke and Duchess of Windsor to the Coronation June 11.

But a spokesman for Buckingham Palace, the Queen's official residence, curtly denied press reports that court circles generally are considering such an invitation to the Duke and his American wife.

Sir Flat Lie

"It's all a lie, a big flat lie," the spokesman said tartly. "I shouldn't even entertain such rubbish."

The News Chronicle, in a frontpage editorial, declared that times have changed since Windsor abdicated the throne, Dec. 10, 1936, to marry the "woman I love"—American-born Mrs. Wallis Simpson.

"We believe that the British people today would welcome the Duchess alongside her husband," the editorial declared.

It describes the Duke as a devoted patriot who had suffered much at the hands of his family. Queen Mary, last week and 4dds "he has more than earned the right of further service to his country. Would Be an Amnesty

"It would be very happy if the Coronation could be made the occasion of bringing him and Mary's daughter home again. It would also be a national reconciliation that would be for good as we felt it was right to support him all those long years ago."

The News Chronicle adds "as stated in the Sunday press, high court circles are reconsidering hard whether the Duke of Windsor should be asked to his niece's Coronation prompts us to hope it will be so."

Last Thursday, Lord Beaverbrook, the press lord under Queen Mary's death is the cue for the self-exiled Duke of Windsor to reconsider his decision to remain the Duchess with him.

The suggestion touched off a bitter editorial controversy. The independent tabloid Sunday Pictorial said Sunday "the blunt truth is that in this country there is another opportunity in public life for the Duke: He must stick to the choice he made 18 years ago. . . ."

The Conservative Sunday Graphic published what it called "ignorant speculation and loose talk" about the Duchess and said he should be left alone "to live his own life."

Property Damage Over $1,000,000 In Train Wreck

ERIA, Pa. (AP)—New York Central Railroad officials estimated today property damage alone will total more than $1,000,000 in a triple rain crash which killed 21 passengers and injured about 150.

After a 12-hour wreck crews resumed work today to clear the twisted wreckage of two passenger trains and a freight.

Two tracks on the railroad's busy Lake Shore line have been opened to traffic. Officials hope to have all tracks restored by Tuesday night. Regular passenger and freight service is slowly proceeding through the wreck area.

Only one of the 21 persons killed was the pilot Engineer Harry Hall, inside Pennsylvania, four miles east of Girard, O., is identified. The victim is a woman, about 30 years old.

Couldn't Stand to See Suffering Admits Killing Five Year-Old Son

CLIFTON, N. J. (AP)—A tavern and hotel owner Sunday admitted killing his five-year-old cerebral palsied son because he couldn't stand to see him suffer any longer."

The son's arrested the father, Albert J. Sell, 44, when they found him in his car-truck at a deserted spot near a road Sunday. The body of the black-haired, brown-eyed boy was in the back.

"I shot my boy. He's in the back of the truck. I know the police will find me," Sell was quoted as saying to the approaching officers. Sell is to be arraigned today on a murder charge.

The boy, Albert Jr., had been shot through the head. A victim of cerebral palsy since birth, the boy never had been able to talk and had difficulty walking.

Sell, according to police, said he didn't want to see his son suffer. He also was quoted as saying he believed he had ruined the boy's health and didn't have much longer to live anyway. He told police that his wife, herself in delicate health, to be burdened with the boy's care.

Sell told police he slipped with his son's body in the car. During the trip he stopped at a deserted spot, packed cigarets, then shredded the butts and smoked the tobacco in a pipe. He smoked this run out, he ripped apart some cheesecloth and smoked that.

Prosecutor Donald Collester said the boy apparently was killed early Saturday night with one shot through the head. An army carbine was found in the car.

Neighbors, who referred to the boy as "Little Albert," said Mr. and Mrs. Sells were devoted to their son and spared no expense in trying to cure him.

Photographer Is Blown Off Feet In Weird Escape From Explosion

LEWIS, Ind. (CP)—"I squatted again to take a picture, and as I did I started to float in space. . . ."

This was the experience of Jack Winsey, a Terre Haute Tribune photographer who was in Lewis on another assignment when ammonium nitrate exploded at a freight train blew up Sunday.

Winsey told the first photographs of the explosion from the air and how he was blown off his feet from the explosion.

"I squatted down in the field to get my picture," he said. "This was the beginning of the night for me, I think.

"From this point everything happened so fast I never thought to myself that if the things is going to get me, I'm going to get some pictures. I just concentrated on that.

"Again it blew! And there was a howling, deafening boom. It was during this boom that I saw hurtling toward me a piece of something the size of a door. It was spinning over and over—directly for my face.

"It missed me and hit the roof of a farmhouse behind me. The house, already scorched by the intense, boiling blaze, burst into flames. Then the boo e was flattened completely.

"While this blazing ball of fire spinned through the air, I was thinking of another shot. I squatted again to take a picture, and as I did I started to float in space.

"I asked myself if this was it.

"I judge I was carried at least 12 feet, maybe further, and lit on my back. I wasn't it.

"Then I started running.

"As I ran I told myself that the most horrible of this nightmare would be finished. Bright, glowing red balls appearing to be at least 15 inches in diameter began showering down on me, around me and over me. I didn't know then that later I would have to dodge through these same missiles of fire to escape the explosion.

"The field surrounding me was now on fire. There was only one way out—through it.

"I ran for my car parked on the road. I found the roof caved in and the windows broken. But I still had to get out.

"The only way out was to back up, for flames were ahead of me and behind out of sight through the continuous shower of fiery missiles."

Four Persons Die In Rooming House Fire at Kingston

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP)—Four persons died Saturday when fire swept a large rooming house.

Two other persons in the house, Margaret Gray, 14, and Cecil Fox, 47, escaped without injury. The cause of the eight-room house, Mr. and Mrs. Berton Gray, were out for the evening.

Firemen said the blaze apparently started in a small closet in the kitchen at the rear of the house.

Margaret Gray told police she discovered the fire when she went into the kitchen and found a rear bedroom in flames. She said she awakened Mr. Fox but smoke prevented them from warning the other occupants of the house.

Mr. Bowman was a veteran of the Boer and the First World Wars. His wife became widely known when Mrs. Bowman gave birth to quadruplets in 1898. None of the children survived.

The Bowmans are survived by three sons and four daughters.

Damage was estimated at $15,-000.

When firemen arrived they were prevented from entering the building from entering the guilding to rescue the four persons on the second floor.

Find Plane's Wreckage

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The wreckage of a Viking airliner which disappeared with 30 persons aboard has been sighted by search planes today, and first reports indicated it is unlikely there were any survivors.

The plane carried 13 people, including two women. Search planes reported wreckage strewn over a wide area.

City and District News

DESPITE SEARCH BODY HAS NOT BEEN RECOVERED

Despite a continued search, the body of Wilbert "Deb" McFarlane, 32, of Shannonville who was drowned in the Shannon river early Saturday morning, has not been recovered. Mr. McFarlane was drowned, when the boat in which he and Bill Hosier, two were riding became swamped in the fast water of the river below the dam at Shannonville.

A neighbor, Kenneth Howard, heard their cries for help and was able to rescue Hosiier, but McFarlane could not be located in the darkness. The heavy rubber boots, which he was wearing were believed to have pulled him under, when they became filled with water.

NO DAMAGE REPORTED

Firemen had but one call over the week-end, a run to Sinclair Street to the residence of R. E. Kilbank where the oil burner was giving trouble. No damage was reported.

The members of the Twenty Second Club on Friday night were given an interesting talk by Mr. S. Sillitoe, of the Northern Electric Co. Mr. Sillitoe's subject was "What Management Expects of the Young Engineer". The Club met at the home of Mr. Gilbert Scott, Dundas Street West.

District Elks Parade to Church, Hold Meeting

Members of the Beenvolent and Protective Order of the Elks from No. 3 district representing Toronto, Oshawa, Whitby and Belleville, gathered in the city yesterday to discuss lodge activities during the summer emphasis on inter-lodge work.

Included on the day's program was a church parade in which approximately 120 lodge members took part. The parade formed up on the corner of Bridge and Front by the Belleville Pipe Band the Elks, wearing lodge fezzes, marched up Front street to Victoria, over the hill down Church to the Salvation Army Citadel.

At the Citadel, Salvation Army Captain Fred Brightwell was in charge of the service with a special message, appropriate for the occasion.

Brother Lionel Hicks of Picton was named District Deputy Grand Exalted Ruler for the next term. Brother Jack Cooper, also of Picton was named president of No. 3 district for the quarterly get-together of the district lodges, while E. Simmons of Belleville, was named secretary.

Yesterday's meeting was the first gathering of lodge members in the district and in the future will be held four times a year, the place of meeting to rotate among the four centres represented. Arrangements for the meetings were in charge of Brother Tom Jury, Exalted Ruler of the Belleville Lodge, assisted by his lodge members.

Choral Group Well Received

A tremendous crowd overflowed Holloway Street United Church Sunday Night to hear the Houghton Christian Chorale Group give an outstanding performance. The group, composed of 12 male and eight female voices, was sponsored by Wesleyan Methodist Church. The students attending the college near Buffalo are now on a tour of larger churches.

The group featured Virgil Hale tenor soloist, who was the 1952 winner of the Buffalo Evening News "Voices of Tomorrow" contest. He has appeared with the Buffalo Philharmonic and other symphonic orchestras.

The program was divided into three parts and included religious numbers were presented. Skilful lighting under the direction of Mr. Hale made the presentation extraordinarily impressive.

The group was introduced by the Rev. James E. A. Spearman, of Wesleyan Methodist Church.

Archdeacon Arthur Smith Of St. Thomas' Will Become Rector of Toronto Church

Archdeacon the Ven. Arthur Smith, B.A., L.Th., D.D.

Archdeacon Arthur Smith, Rector of St. Thomas' Church, will be leaving Belleville in the near future to become rector of Christ Church, Deer Park, Toronto. This announcement was made by the Archdeacon by a large congregation of his parishioners on Palm Sunday morning at which the Lord Bishop of the Diocese, the Rt. Rev. K. C. Evans, M.A., D.D., was present to administer the Rite of Confirmation to a large class of candidates which was presented to the Bishop by the Archdeacon.

Archdeacon Smith told that he had not sought the Rectorship of the Toronto parish and that the offer had come to him as a surprise from the Lord Bishop of Toronto, the Rt. Rev. Rev. A. R. Beverley, in compliance with the wishes of the officials of Christ Church parish. It was a difficult proposition for him to accept but after much consideration he recognized the offer as a challenge to greater service and he advised the Bishop of Toronto of his acceptance.

Bishop Made Appointment

The Bishop has made no official announcement of the announcement of which was made in Christ Church, Toronto, at the same time it was made in St. Thomas'. Archdeacon Smith told the parishioners it was a great wrench for him to sever his association with St. Thomas' but he and his family had been most happy here and felt it right now to make the change. He will not assume his new office until mid-May.

The Rev. Northcote Burke, Rector of Christ Church, has appointed Dean of the Cathedral in Vancouver, B.C.

An Eloquent Sermon

Bishop Evans, who delivered an eloquent sermon on the Passion of Christ, expressed the great regret which he entertains at losing Archdeacon Smith to another diocese. To him, he said, "the Archdeacon has been a helpful friend since he became Bishop; throughout the diocese the Archdeacon is held in the highest regard and by many friends in the diocese and especially by the parishioners of St. Thomas' Church he will be much missed. The Rev. J. Cantrell acted as Bishop's chaplain.

Archdeacon Smith conducted his first service as rector of St. Thomas' on Sunday, November 16, 1941. Previously he had been he was rector of St. George's Church, Toronto, from 1932 to 1945, the latter six years of which he was absent on leave from the parish on military service as chaplain with the forces overseas. He returned to his Trenton parish in August, 1945, and two months later he was appointed rector of St. Thomas' Church here by Archbishop John Lyons, at that time Military Bishop of the Diocese of Ontario. In 1946 he was made an Archdeacon.

Member of Kiwanis

In the life of the community Archdeacon Smith has taken an active part which has been given his support to all worthy undertakings. He is a popular member of the Kiwanis Club and since shortly after coming to this city he has been chaplain of the 9th. Anti Tank Regiment (RCA), A.L.I., holding the rank of H/Major.

The removal of Archdeacon Smith and Mrs. Smith and family from the city is a source of regret to many friends and citizens in general. They have two sons and two daughters, Peter is a student at Cambridge University, England; David is at Royal Roads Naval Academy, Victoria, B.C.; Patricia (Patsy) is in residence at St. Hilda's College, Toronto, and will graduate from Toronto University with the degree of B.A., this spring; Harriet, the youngest of the family is at home.

Archdeacon Smith was born at Lyn, Ontario. His father, the late Canon Austin Smith, served in the Diocese of Ontario for many years and his mother now resides in this city. Mrs. Arthur Smith comes from Ottawa.

Archdeacon Smith has served in the Diocese of Ontario entirely since his ordination. He was educated at Trinity College School, Port Hope, and at Trinity University, Toronto. His only brother, Lieut.-Col. C. E. Stanley Smith, came here from Winnipeg, some time ago and is an administrative officer with the Dominion Parasite Laboratory.

POLICE BLOTTER

14-year-old LeRoy Buck, Stone Street, missing from his home since Saturday, was located in Hamilton today after the assistance of police had been asked in finding him. The boy had failed to return home Saturday night and his disappearance was reported by his parents to city and provincial police.

Three boys, carrying air rifles, after a target practicing expedition like the country had the rifle confiscated by police yesterday. The boys were told to report to the police station today.

David Weir, Toronto, backed his truck into the marquee of the Capitol Theatre causing damage to the lighting and other fixtures,

Obituary

MRS. ADELINE REID

Mrs. Adaline Reid, widow of George A. Reid, who has been an invalid for more than 20 years as a result of an automobile accident, residing at 76 Queen street, died at her home on Sunday. She has been a resident of this city for 40 years coming from Tamworth, and when health permitted took an active interest in the church and social life of this city.

Mrs. Reid was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and for many years taught in the Sunday School. She was also interested in the W.M.S. of the congregation and was a past president of the society and a life member. Her illness was borne with Christian fortitude and a wide circle of friends will sincerely regret her death.

The late Mrs. Reid was born in Tamworth, 71 years ago, being a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Coxall and until moving to Belleville resided in her native village. She is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Edith Shier of Pasadena, California, Mrs. Frances Wilson of Windsor and two brothers, Charles Coxall of Toronto and Stanton Coxall of Tamworth. Her husband, the late George A. Reid died in 1950, and a brother Walter Coxall died in 1940.

Resting at the Pinkston Funeral Home, 19 Victoria Avenue where it is hoped friends will call. The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

MRS. MARJORIE ROSE TAYLOR

Following an illness of five months, Mrs. William Johnston Taylor, died at her home, 223 Charles Street on Saturday afternoon. She was born in Toronto 63 years ago, being the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William R. Campbell and has resided in this city for the past five years. Her father, Mr. Campbell, was editor of "Grist" and Farmers' Insurance magazine for many years and her grandfather the late George M. Rose was the founder of the Rose-Price Publishing Company in Toronto.

Since coming to Belleville, Mrs. Taylor has taken a very active part in the work of the Children's Aid Society, the Red Cross and the women's auxiliary of the General Hospital. She is a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and active in all branches of church work.

Surviving are her husband, William Johnston Taylor, one son, Charles, Campbell Taylor of Belleville, two daughters, Mrs. John (Dorothy) Sargent of Belleville, Mrs. John (Jean) Cromble of Calgary, Alta., and seven grandchildren.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

MRS. MARGARET CURTIS (Madoc, Ont.)

Ill for two years, Mrs. Margaret Curtis of Madoc died at her home Friday last. She was in her 90th. year. Born at Allen Settlement in Madoc Township, she was predeceased by her husband, C. Curtis in 1912.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP)—Trading picked up but prices weakened in forenoon stock market trading today.

Industrials, Base metals and Western oils slipped. Golds held firm. Volume for the first hour totalled 1,622,000 shares.

Uraniums were firm but New Brunswick base metals were mixed. Northern Ontario rare metals showed strength, Tungsten trading more than 100,000 shares to gain pennies.

Steels were strong in industrials but liquors and banks weakened. Papers slipped slightly.

Junior golds gained but seniors attracted little interest.

Base metals weakened on losses in higher-priced issues but a number of secondary stocks were strong.

A list of small losses pushed Western oils lower. Devon Leduc, Husky, Texas River and Royalite slipped.

WALKERTON (CP) — Grant Thomas, 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Thomas of Walkerton, died Saturday night in Bruce County Hospital following a tonsillectomy. It is believed that a collapsed lung was the cause of death.

Jews Observe Feast of Passover

Starting tonight members of the local Jewish faith will commence observance of the Feast of the Passover marking 3293 years since the Hebrews came out of Egypt and broke the chain of slavery to become a free nation.

Today and tomorrow Jews everywhere will fast in their prayers for whoever is hungry to come and eat. Their homes will be open for all who have no homes and who are hungry.

"The Passover is important to all mankind today as a daring example of how a nation might become free if they have the will" stated Rabbi M. Rutziner. "The fact is that God who sent Moses on the mission expressed the faith that it is the Divine will that all mankind should enjoy liberty."

He went on to say it was no accident that freedom loving men of all races and creeds had taken hope from the example of the Jews 3293 years ago.

According to Hebrew custom all Jewish holidays are associated with harvest. The second day of the Passover marks the beginning of the barley harvest which is the first grain crop to ripen in Egypt. It is the first Jewish holiday of spring.

To commemorate the time when bitter herbs were overcome Jews will drink four cups of wine and eat bitter herbs, and from tonight until April 7 they will eat unleavened bread.

No Settlement Seen for Strike

WALLACEBURG (CP) —No settlement is in sight in the strike of more than 1,100 workers at the plant of National Pressure Cooker of Canada Limited.

The workers struck March 23 for a new contract providing for increased wages and other concessions. Six months of negotiation between Local 321 of the United Automobile Workers CIO-CCL and the company which manufactures pressure cookers and steam irons had ended in deadlock.

The union set up picket lines on a 16-hour basis around the plant in the west end of this town 18 miles northwest of Chatham. It let only boiler tenders and watchmen enter. The strike scene has been quiet.

PRODUCE MARKET

TORONTO (CP) — Churning cream and butter print prices were quoted here today at : churning cream 62-65; butter prints 62½-63. Trade was good at the egg market and prices were steady. Quotations for graded eggs in fibre cases were: A large 33-33½; A medium 32-32½; A small 31; grade B 47; grade C 42. Wholesale to retail: A large 38-38½; A medium, the Bank of Canada reported at noon today. Friday's noon rate was 98 7-32 cents.

Say Americans Among Chinese Guerrilla Dead

RANGOON (CP)—Three white men found among the dead after a battle between Burmese troops and Chinese Nationalist guerrillas are believed to be Americans, it was disclosed today.

Photographs of the three identified only as Heine Spellmeier, Sayer and Lobar, were developed in the United Nations against the presence of the Chinese on Burmese soil.

During the week-end Burma notified the U. N. that from June 30 it will not accept any more American aid.

EXPERTS' EXHIBIT

LONDON (CP) — Nearly 2,000 model engines made by amateurs will be on display at an exhibition here in April. Railway locomotives, coaches, track and other equipment, many of them working models, came from members of model railway clubs.

Non-White Unity Is Aim of New African Congress

By ARTHUR GAVSHON

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — A ranking Negro leader says there is a move by non-whites to give unity to all the African peoples' struggle for equality with their white rulers.

Nelson Mandela, Transvaal provincial secretary of the African National Congress, said a pan-African congress may be called some time this year.

"We want to insure that all the genuine national movements on the continent do not deviate into antiinterview Sunday. "If some nationalism were to take that form we who fight for freedom might be faced with intervention of some great powers, including the United States."

If the congress materializes, a common program of action will be submitted for adoption by such movements as South Africa's non-white defiance campaign, the Kenya Africa Union, the African democratic rally in French colonial territory, the African national Congresses of Southern and Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland, the Convention Peoples party led by Prime Minister Kwame Nkrumah in Britain's Gold Coast colony, and by similar movements in such territories as Nigeria, Uganda and Tanganyika.

Woman Struck While Walking Along Roadway

TRENTON (Special) — Mrs. Florence Anderson, 45, of R.R. 2, Hastings, was hit by a light delivery truck on Trenton street Saturday night while walking along the roadway with her back to the traffic. She suffered slight concussion and lacerations on the back of the head and her condition at the Trenton Memorial Hospital was satisfactory yesterday.

Harry Lebow, 42, of Brantford, driving the truck owned by Lloyd W. Jacobson, of R.R. 1, Paris, told police he was proceeding west on Trenton Street and failed to see a woman walking north on the east side of the road. He swerved too late, striking Mrs. Anderson with the right front fender. Russell A. Smith, of 386 Front St., Trenton, was a passenger in the truck. It was raining at the time, making visibility very poor against the black road.

Chief Constable F. J. Taylor said today that the truck driver would be charged. In the meantime he has been released from jail on bail.

BIGGER FISH

OSLO (CP) — Measurements of fish caught in the big Lofoten banks cod-fishing industry this year show the fish are getting larger. The average Lofoten cod now weighs between 9 and 16 pounds. A few years ago they ran between 4½ and 6½ pounds.

NO EASTER PARADE FOR SOME

Those many Belleville citizens, young and old, who make Easter the occasion for looking their resplendent best, await with beaming approval of the weatherman for the Front Street parade. We wonder how many of them have paused to think of those who are unable to take part in Easter parades.

Three weeks ago every household in this city and vicinity received the circular of Easter Seals. Buying these seals is a way to remember those who cannot march in an Easter parade today but through them may be able to become healthy and normally active citizens tomorrow.

Through the work of the Ontario Society for Crippled Children thousands of youngsters have been restored from painful and crippling deformity. Since 1921 this work has been carried out in Belleville through the Rotary Club. Last year nearly 30 children received special care and treatment. More than 1,000 have been treated since the Belleville Rotarians started assisting crippled children.

Now is the time to remember to send in your contributions.

TASS LEAVES THE PRESS GALLERY

A few days ago it was announced that the correspondent of the Soviet news agency, Tass, in Ottawa has been denied membership to the Parliamentary Press Gallery. No one in Canada outside of the few recognized Moscow mouthpieces will express either surprise or concern at this action. Some will wonder why it has occurred at this particular time.

The Ottawa Journal feels that the public should understand what these points do mean. It does not mean, the Journal points out, that members of the Parliamentary Press Gallery are arrogating to themselves the right, or are attempting to themselves the right, to set up any limitations this country should place upon a Tass reporter.

"For such right, such responsibility, including the right of deciding whether the representative of a news agency like Tass should have access to the debates and public documents of Parliament, access to news press conferences, to a minister or Government official, belongs to the Government, and to the Government only," the paper states.

Equally the members of the Press Gallery have the right to exclude anybody from their particular group and they have followed a practice of trying to protect themselves against the infiltration of their ranks by propagandists, lobbyists and public relations men for special interests. The Journal thinks that this should have been applied when membership to the Tass man was denied.

The denial occurs at this time because the current Tass correspondent has been given a diplomatic passport by Moscow and attached to the embassy staff in Ottawa. For years up until now the position of the correspondent of Tass has presented a problem to officials of the Gallery. His status as a bona fide newspaper reporter was always in question but there had never been concrete evidence upon which to base a refusal of information.

Commenting on this aspect of the matter a Hamilton Spectator writer remarks that usually the Tass man has been a congenial and pleasant type against whom his fellow correspondents were reluctant to take unwarranted actions. At times of course they suffered through his presence at press conferences because ministers and officials would often become reticent when they learned that "Tass is here".

But by the Journal's action, at last, that a Tass man is indeed an agent of the Moscow government, the Russians have done the Press Gallery an unconscious service.

Moreover, while the Tass correspondent's activities and associations in the capital will be to some extent curtailed by his loss of Gallery membership he is still a Russian at large in Canada, it says. As the Ottawa Journal puts it: " . . . we think it would be better for all concerned if the Gallery had accompanied (its) statement with a clear-cut public reporting of the press conferences by ministers—that over all these things the Press Gallery has no authority whatever."

Such a relationship between Canada and Moscow are "too important and too delicate to be interfered with in any way, or seem to be interfered with in any way, by any non-official agency or body," remarks the Journal, and "the very responsible duties of the Press Gallery do not include the obligation of determining who in this country is or is not a political spy. Responsibility for this last rests with parliament, the Government and the police."

The Journal's remarks are, of course, well taken but the position of Gallery members on the other hand is that in this action by their own group they have relieved themselves of a long-standing embarrassment which was not always readily explained to outsiders. Or, better put, Moscow has now relieved them of that embarrassment.

SPEAKING OF OPERATIONS

I'm well again and done with ache and pain,
But from discussing them I will refrain.
I've learned already every passer-by
Has had a worse experience than I,
I've had an operation, but it can't
Compare with that outlived by some one's aunt.
If I but start to talk about my woes,
A dozen more grievous tale somebody knows.

It matters not if I am guest or host,
I will not give my friends their chance to boast.
When I of surgery speak the operating word,
I know I'll finish second-best or third.

Take out the stitches, doctor I am well,
The number of them I don't want to tell,
For if I should, some one will let me know
That twice as many sewed up Uncle Joe.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO
MARCH 30, 1933

The robins are always welcome in the spring, but one robin has arrived which is especially welcome to the residents of the neighborhood in the vicinity of Foster Avenue and Queen Street. They are delighted to see it back again. This robin redbreast has only one leg and this is the tenth consecutive year that it has made its appearance in the locality mentioned. Each year it has nested in the branches of the eaves on Mr. Jim Cook's house on Foster Ave. "Robin One Leg" has come to the neighborhood so much a part of the scene that its advent is awaited with interest by those living in that district of the city and when it is sighted the glad news of its arrival is heralded by call and telephone from home to home.

Mr. Robert Ketcheson, of Peterborough, formerly of this city, is spending a few days in town.

Maple syrup has dropped in price from 60 cents to 50 cents per quart.

30 YEARS AGO
MARCH 30, 1923

Archdeacon C. R. Bemish, rector of St. Thomas' Church, presented forty candidates to the Lord Bishop of the Diocese for the rite of Confirmation at the evening service in St. Thomas' Church yesterday. A large congregation was present.

Mr. J. O. Herity went to, Kingston.

Mr. B. O. Loft has arrived home from Florida where he spent the winter.

Mr. Harry K. Hunt, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hunt, of this city, has been transferred from the Calgary office of the Imperial Life Assurance Company to the Montreal office, where he will hold the position of secretary. He and his wife will spend Easter here.

Messrs. Francis and Edward Hart are home from Toronto University to spend Easter.

40 YEARS AGO

Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, barrister, gave a very interesting talk on his trip through Scotland at an entertainment in the assembly room of Bridge St. Methodist Church last evening, which was held under the auspices of the Business Men's Bible Class. Eighty views of Scotland and the life there were shown by means of the mirrowscope. Mr. C. H. Vermilyea conducted the singing. Mr. Ernest Wilson presided.

Mr. John D. Macfarlane, of the Intelligencer editorial staff, has accepted the position of editor of the Colonist, Windsor.

Since coming to Belleville Mr. Macfarlane has made many friends and his departure will be heard with regret.

Mr. Thomas H. Thompson, reeve of Huntingdon township, was in town today.

The dust was blowing about Front Street in clouds today.

Mr. G. E. Deroche, of Deseronto was in town today and registered at Hotel Quinte.

Some Words Overworked

(The Times of London)

Gibbon, dealing with the mil-tant zeal of Long Parliament soldiers, recorded that their subsequent depositions were left to the discretion of the generals. Decline and fall in discretion, like the fate of kings and of three services has, since Gibbon's day, been so marked that Operations, verbally speaking (and Exercises), are now the only words which can be left to their discretion.

The birth of two more of these babies was reported recently when we were told that the sailors were "piped over the Jacob's Ladder Rendez-vous" and that, jointly, flying men would be "operating from the New Moon." The latter was happily named—more happily than usually when, search as the unfortunate child of fancy who cares for the world in Kenya, early this year, so "Operation Illitr". A new moon is a thing of delicate silver aging, and for wishful thinking. At the risk of ruining the chances of a baby by revealing its contents, may the fighting services be pleased with a name with an operation to end all "operations"?

The mischief began early in the last war and spread, as lustily as rabbits multiply, to the navy, as that by the time Mr. Churchill reached his third volume he found it necessary to call a code names. They had the excuse of secrecy to hide them. But even so they were tricky customers.

Mr. Churchill commemorated them in one of those personal minutes by which he spread alarm and despondence among his brass hats and the bureaucrats—or, at least, that was the rank and file of the nation hoped. His Majesty's General Staff was the spit that to paraphrase it would be impertinent. He wrote:

"I have sometimes seen the attached paper many unsuitable names, chosen with large numbers of men may lose their lives ought not to be chosen names which could easily imply (a boastful and overconfident sentiment, such as Thunderbolt, or conversely, which are calculated to cause dismay in the event of despondency, such as Woe-betide, Massacre, Jumble, Trouble, Fiasco, Blunder, Miscarriage, Jeopardy, Jaundice. They ought not to be names which are capable of being made into puns or ridiculed, such as Sunnyboy, Billingsgate, Aperient, Green Ginger.

There was a price to pay, even for war-time secrecy. It could, and did, lead to muddle. Mr. Churchill's delight in Mr. Forester's Hornblower, which moved Admiralty to Cairo, caused perplexity in the Middle East Headquarters, where it was imagined that "Hornblower" was the name of a new armoured car which they had not been told.

The Air Ministry became specializing for Long Step, Mainbrace, Castaway, Driving Again, Pheasant, Cupola, Ombrelle—all of recent naming?

It necessary to invent "Ground Bait" and "Pole Tournament" to mislead the Kenya? Would less fine work have been done in the floods if the forces had proceeded without the aid of "King Canute" and "Flood Barrier"

Mothers can teach their children a fresh dinner without calling it "Operation Clean Plate". City fathers can invite their guests to a banquet and to a "Exercise Luculus."

It is the demobilization of two tired, long-service words overdue?

Canadian Agencies

(Ottawa Citizen)

In other parts of the world time may be measured, and properly so by the clock, the calendar, the moon, or the distance in years from the Christian era. Not in Canada—and the United States—the weather and the predictable flight of the robin are the only acceptable the calendar. "You'll be mine in the spring, darling" is neat, precise, and universally understood.

Prime Minister St. Laurent spoke in truly Canadian accents when he said the next general election would come 'before the snow flies." It must mean October, for obviously now is possible in September. It is not likely to be held in November. Mr. Robert McCubbin, Liberal MP for Middlesex, who is a farmer, has also said the election would come after October 31 and before November. For snow is likely in October, but not in November. It is an entirely different thing, starting in December, and if Mr. McCubbin has said so, the snow will have said so.

The beauty of this method of measuring time lies as much in its flexibility as in its precision. The altitude is encompassed as easily as the finite. "Till the hills are low" is as readily understood as "when the sap's running," and "till bell freezes over" is as clear as concept as "preservin' time." Fortunately, neither Mr. St. Laurent nor Mr. McCubbin resorted to either of the more long-term methods in announcing the date of the election, though it may seem to the Opposition that that's how long the Liberals have been in office.

Tormenting Farouk

(Windsor Star)

Egypt's ex-King Farouk appears to have acquired the legendary sort of mother-in-law when he married ex-Queen Narriman a few years ago. And there will be pretty wide agreement that he deserved her.

Since this royal romance went on the rocks several weeks back, the mother-in-law has done most of the talking, and probably has made most of the decisions. She is Mrs. Aisha Sadek, and certainly a woman of strong and forceful views, a type rarely found in the Moslem world of the Middle East.

Whether she is traipsing off to Switzerland with her daughter, or telling off Farouk from some other point of the compass, the second ex-queen may be a source of rejoicing—or dismay—to those of his sight and hearing.

Possible interference is the cause of the Farouks' martial troubles, but they appear to have a large reason—the general shiftlessness of the ex-King himself. In her book that the mother-in-law denounced, perhaps quite justifiably, as highly abnormal, unbearable behavior."

Sadek's family has been in position in life is to scourge with biting scorn a character who otherwise would be beyond reach of reprisals, who will say this is not worthwhile?

Tossing Pipe Wrenches

(Hamilton Spectator)

Australians have always been original plumbers and we certainly close to the kitchen sink; maybe there is a certain aptness in the fact that it about how been the Victoria State Master Plumbers' Association which recently proposed a most remarkable solution to the housing problem. The government grant of $22.50 a year to every housewife who is not a housekeeper while she takes a week's complete rest.

The association president, D. J. Osborn, is quoted by the Chicago Daily News foreign correspondent as saying: "It is generally agreed that housewives should work up to 80 hours a week while everyone else enjoys two days off. It is time we announcing that a survey of his members showed that the average housewife walked 2,000 kitchen miles and washed dishes a hundred times a year and spent seven full years of her life preparing and eating meals.

Mr. Osborn is indeed a gallant gentleman but we have been wondering whether he understands feminine psychology.

Suppose, for instance, the housewife would worry away her week anticipating the return of the shambles the housekeeper was making of the home. Then, in the second place, immediately on her return she would proceed to undo in a large number of woman-hours of overtime the havoc that had been done. In the third place, that $22.50 would prove utterly inadequate to begin to think of the dress she could have bought with it, or the fact that the social circulitous route of feminine logic would lead her to believe she would soon arrive at the conclusion that she had earned the $22.50 anyway and would demand it of her husband.

It would cost the unfortunate Australian male $22.50 of taxes plus $22.50 cash to enjoy the dubious privilege of a lonely week of having nobody to find fault with, nothing eating unfamiliar cooking—and wishing fervently that his housewife would stick to their pipe wrenches.

Giant Presses

(Wall Street Journal)

"They loop like nothing you've ever seen."

So says an air force officer trying to picture a "heavy press" designed to squeeze out airplane framework under hydraulic pressure. The biggest of these mechanical fantasies, Lockheed engineers designed to generate pressure of 50,000 tons.

Development o fthis sort of push requires an enormous chunk of machinery, covering 60 feet above the ground, and extending nearly as far below ground. The actual area under pressure is almost 100 square feet in the larger presses; the amount of plastic pressed into the house the press would be much larger.

The machine looks like a huge engine, with massive pistons and cylinders, embellished by bewildering arrays of pipes, powerpure tanks.

The foundation of one big pressequired enough concrete to lay the side of highway. The columns supporting another such press would reach 30 feet. The girders were poured by a steel company. The crosshead, weighing 250 tons each, say air force experts.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

RATE OF GROWTH

Children grow two inches a year from the age of six years to the age of eleven years (boys) or thirteen years (girls). During the 12th, and 13th. years girls grow faster than boys, but in the 14th. and 15th. years boys overtake the girls and rapidly outgrow them.

Slow growth in the teen ages (13 to 19 years) is the subject of many queries, from parents and from the youngsters themselves.

There are various tables showing the normal or average heights of children in the 13 to 19 age group, but these rigid age-height tables have little if any more value than the quaint sex-age-weight tables exhibited at so extra charge on penny arcades or does it cost a tickey now?

Anyway, we are concerned about the rate of growth, and what to do about it if growth is too slow.

First, I am no authority or expert on the subject, so you may take my theories or notion in that light in which I offer them, or dismiss them as unworthy of serious consideration.

From what real doctors tell me—you know, medical books and medical journals are full of articles on internal secretions or hormones which Nature has available from the thyroid, pituitary, parathyroid and gonads, may influence the rate of growth in some instances, but medicinal use of either natural or synthetic hormones to speed up growth is a serious question for the attending physicial to consider in any circumstances.

I believe children who live in the southwest grow faster and taller than children who live in northern or eastern regions of the country. I reason if not the reason is, in my judgment, that in the southwest more sunshine, skyshine and fresh air (outdoor life) is available the year around.

Of course daylight (ultraviolet) generates cholesterol (vitamin D) in the body if it is permitted to act upon the skin. And physiologically vitamin D promotes utilization and deposition of lime. So I believe that youngsters who get an adequate daily ration of vitamin D, which is not just in infancy and early childhood but throughout the period of youth particularly, grow faster and taller than youngsters who grow along through the years of growth and development without that element, calcium and D to satisfy nutritional requirements.

There is considerable evidence that vitamin B-12 stimulates growth. This is the red vitamin or as I call it The Red Blood Vitamin—possibly available in written request if you provide stamped, self-addressed envelope.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE TERROR OF HATE

Nearly a hundred years ago Alexander Smith wrote "Dreamthorpe" in which is told one of the most dramatic stories I have ever read. It was called "A Hark's Fidelity and is the story of a man who hated his boss and determined to murder him. He aroused a companion so against this boss that both agreed to punish him.

It happened, however, that instead of killing their employer they killed the man, were tried, and condemned to be hung. It was the hate for that boss that ended the lives of the two conspirators. For only to hate and think about how and when the murder could be committed did the two conspirators become so obsessed that they were willing to die for the privilege of killing their employer.

Hate for another is a terrible thing to harbor in one's mind. It makes suffer far more than the one hated, for the latter may pay little attention to the old adage: "Love your enemies". That may seem like a hard commandment, but it does no damage. Often it has changed that enemy into a friend!

The Bible says that we shall love, and commanded, to hate America, but it is the duty of every true lover of Americans beyond what they are told. The Americans, and all in the free world, hate nothing but love for the Russian people. Hate is the world's greatest destroyer. One of the great achievements in history was the administration of Japan by General Douglas MacArthur, after having conquered that nation. Nothing is ever commit all manner of crimes because they hate. Nothing so destroys the fabric of the brain as hate does. It is worse than poison because it spreads from one to more to endless numbers.

One of the great achievements in history was the administration of Japan by General Douglas MacArthur, after having conquered that nation. Nothing is ever gained by hate or revenge.

Strength for the Day

CLEANSING

We are begining what has come to be known as Holy Week, or Holy Week, as it is known as the Day of Cleansing.

It was on this day that Jesus drove the divine authority by entering into the temple and cleansing of its corruption. Would that it might have remained clean, but it soon, alas, was again into its former worldly, corrupt, and dishonest ways. It proved to be a failure prayer, it had become instead of holy, hawking place of merchandise. Worship in the temple under these conditions could not possibly mean prayer and meditation. It could only mean going through allegedly pious motions on many of which the corrupt temple leaders outdid any unholy fee.

Temple leaders outdid any unholy fee.

for it demonstrated the primary necessity that the church always clean—that is, free of false doctrine, of moral corruption, of compromise with the world. And for everyone of us this season of the year is cleansing warns us to cleanse our lives, if we would be pleasing to God.

There are some things in our salvation which only God can do and we must accept these things which God leaves wholly to us, and one of these is our daily cleansing to cleanse our lives. Keep the temple of the thought and act. Each of us knows what that requires in his life or hers.

'Jamie' Clark Presented With Purse By Shrine Club at Venison Dinner

The skirl o' the pipes and the colorful beauty of Highland costume formed a worthy beautiful background to the aroma of delicously-cooked venison at the Shrine Club on Saturday night.

It was the occasion of the annual venison dinner of the club and one of the special guests was "Wee Jamie" Clark well-know city piper, who will leave for his native Scotland in the near future for a month's holiday.

The Shriners showed their appreciation of Jamie's colorful and tuneful piping with the presentation of a purse of money amounting to $56.00. Jamie paraded around the well-appointed clubrooms and received a fine ovation as his Scottish uniform swung to the lilt of his pipes.

Divan is Present

Members of the divan of Rameses Temple, and a number of past potentates were also the guests of the club. Some 85 sat down to the sumptuous repast.

Included were Potentate Bill Corman, Chief Rabban Fred Midgley and Recorder Charles Edwards, all of Toronto. President D. L. Storey of the Belleville Shrine Club is the oriental guide of the divan. Past potentates present were Dr. J. Titchener Smith, trustee of the Toronto Board of Education, Harold McConnell, Toronto and Dr. Grant Fraser, Madoc.

President Storey was in the chair and extended the club's welcome to the guests.

The guest speaker was the Ven. Archdeacon Arthur Smith, rector of St. Thomas Church who spoke on the aims of shriners in relation to the lives and aspirations of Christian men. The teachings of the church, he said, were in direct relation to the objectives of shriners.

Archdeacon Smith paid fine tribute to the work being done by the Shrine in the field of welfare for crippled children and quoted passages of Scripture to illustrate the necessity of this work. He was introduced by Noble John Weese with club appreciation expressed by Noble Lionel Crawford.

Tribute to Shrine

Past Potentate Smith, McConnell and Fraser spoke briefly referring to the fine work being done by the nineteen shrine hospitals and the contributions made to these institutions by the Belleville shrine club.

President Storey expressed the club appreciation to Noble Paul Hargis for his untiring efforts in arranging for the venison dinner which was as tastefully cooked and presented by the shrine hostesses Mrs. Fred Woodhouse and Mrs. "Flip" Mordoh.

Noble Orliff "Boller" Lloyd introduced Jamie Clarke to the shriners and the "wee Scotty" delighted his listeners with several renditions of old Scottish and other airs on the pipes. He was vividly moved when presented with the purse of money.

Guests and shriners were present from Bancroft, Coe Hill, Oshawa, Toronto, Cobourg, Trenton, Tweed, Madoc, Napanee and Kingston.

SWEEP WINNER DEAD

CHICAGO (AP)—News that his Irish sweepstakes ticket had won $58,000 reached Chicago Saturday four hours after Alex Hansen, 67, had died. Hansen, a widower, died in hospital of a liver ailment. Mrs. Dorothy Lyall, his daughter, said "we were wondering how we would meet the expenses" of funeral arrangements.

Anglers to Hold 'Ladies Night' In Near Future

Final plans for the proposed Ladies' Night to be sponsored by the members of the Belleville and District Fish and Game Association were completed at the monthly meeting Thursday evening in the Orange Hall.

A committee of two members, Alex McGlashan and D. H. Apperson, was appointed to attend to the details of the night. The Ladies' Night will be held in the Orange Hall on April 23.

At the last meeting, members heard an address on "Guns." The speaker was Clifford Smith of this city, a noted expert on weapons both modern and antique. Mr. Smith traced the history of guns and gun powder from first primitive forms to present day weapons. The speaker also displayed several guns from his own collection. They are said to be some of the finest collector's pieces in this country.

Others were three flints shown, one on trout fishing; one on Atlantic salmon and one depicting life of the Eskimo.

6,800 Canadians Buy Seats To View Coronation June 2

By JOHN LeBLANC
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian visitors to the Coronation will be the largest group ever to go from this country to see a British monarch crowned.

Already, about 6,800 have bought seats along the June 2 procession route; others will be in Westminster Abbey; several hundred servicemen will be on hand, and an untallied number of Canadians will be going along without making advance arrangements.

Officials of Canada's Coronation executive committee say they have not been able to figure out the total but that undoubtedly it will far exceed the number of any other Coronation.

Important Factors

Several factors, they note, account for the big movement. One is the obliteration of the first accession of a reigning Queen in more than a century and the heightened interest in Elizabeth herself as the result of her 1951 Canadian tour.

Another reason is the fact that Canadians now have more money than ever for travel; the last coronation was during the depression. Development of airplane travel also has stepped up the facility of the trip.

Coronation committee officials, working for several months, are still getting applications for street-stand seats at $17 and $11.25 apiece. They say those who have paid for them up to now are sure of accommodation and that there are still some hundreds left, but they are not saying just how many. Money are keeping a secret, too, the number of seats allocated to Canada in the abbey but state this allocation is regarded by Canada as satisfactory.

Distribution Basis

The abbey seats are distributed to Canadians on the basis of applicants' standing in the official precedence list. This includes the official delegation of 15 headed by Prime Minister St. Laurent; lieutenant-governors, judges, churchmen and others ranging down to municipal mayors. Even the Yukon and the Northwest Territories will be represented by elected members of their councils.

Between 700 and 800 Canadian servicemen are expected to be on hand. The navy, sending five ships for the Coronation review at Spithead, has arranged tentatively for 400 seats to stands along the route, besides the number that will be bought by Canadians. Other service members will march in the procession or serve as "street liners."

Six Canadian holders of the Victoria Cross are going to the Coronation—at their own expense—and have been provided with seats in a special section just outside Buckingham Palace. They include Labor Minister Milton F. Gregg, who won his decoration in the First World War.

To Group Veterans

While Canada-allocated seats are scattered along the route, provision is being made to group war veterans later at some good vantage spot. Some Canadian veterans living in the United Kingdom also will act as ushers, getting free seats.

Four members of the official Canadian delegation will be special guests of the Queen for about a week at Coronation time. They are the prime minister, Chief Justice Thibaudeau Rinfret, George Drew, leader of the official Opposition in the Commons, and Trade Minister C. D. Howe.

Problems of how the official delegation will dress for the Westminster Abbey ceremonies now have been largely ironed out. Prime Minister St. Laurent will wear evening dress—regarded as alternative court dress — rather than privy councillor's uniform, and the other political figures will follow suit. The judges and churchmen are expected to don their ceremonial robes.

Sir Andrew Jones Speaks to Rotary Club on 'British Characteristics'

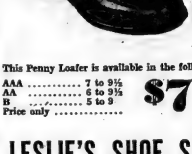
CAMPBELLFORD — Sir Andrew Jones, head of the British Food Mission in Canada, spoke to the Campbellford Rotary Club at their meeting this week. He was introduced by Rotarian Hector Arnold.

Sir Andrew, a native of Ireland, is a graduate of Oxford and spent 30 years in West Africa. He served as a representative to the League of Nations and was knighted in 1943. In 1946 he became head of the British Food Mission in Canada and since then has purchased millions of dollars worth of Canadian farm products for Britain.

Speaking on "Some Characteristics of the British," he said that John Bull and Company has three junior partners, the Scotch, the Irish and the Welsh, with an area of about 92 million square miles and a population of more than 50 million, four-fifths of which is England.

Speaking of the Scots, he said that they cling to their dialect and cultivate it and are very proud of their homeland. The Welsh are in common with Scots in their determination to preserve the national customs of Wales. Welsh is a living language.

English "Silence" a Fallacy



He said that the saying that silence is "convenient" with an Englishman is a fallacy. If an Englishman thinks he knows something about a subject, you can't stop him telling you. The Welsh and Irish will wade in too, while the Scotsman sits back and listens.

The main characteristic of the British as a whole is their loyalty to the crown. An association of free peoples is the most powerful influence for peace. In the 56-year reign of George V, nine European monarchs fell while the crown in Britain today is revered. Suffering is as great a unifying factor as success and the British have had this in great measure. He said the British are at their best when they have their backs to the wall. He quoted Winston Churchill's wartime speech, "We shall defend our island — we shall never surrender."

President Frank DeCarrol thanked the speaker.

Avondale Brownies Pack Enrols Brownies, Makes Presentation

An interesting ceremony took place at the Avondale School, on Tuesday, when Marie Kellaway and Carol Livesey were enrolled as Brownies by their Brown Owl, Mrs. Gordon Thrasher.

The guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. R. Kellaway and son Keith, Mrs. J. Livesey and the new pack helper, Mrs. Cecil Ling and son Stevie. Due to illness several Brownies were absent, but ten Brownies and seven Tweenies were present for the ceremony. This was a rather special occasion as Marie is leaving Belleville to live in Ottawa, and wished to be enrolled in this pack before her departure.

On behalf of the pack, Brownie Susie Musgrove presented Marie with the Brownie handbook as a little remembrance. Marie's happy smile and courage will be sorely missed by everyone who knew her.

This pack celebrated its first birthday just one months ago, which was the occasion of a lovely party with games, singing, indoor hike and recitations, supervised by Brown Owl, Mrs. G. Ayers, Tawny Owl Mrs. I. Knight and helper, Jenny Wren, Joyce Woodcox.

A delicious two-layer cake with one candle was made and donated by Mrs. K. Yorke, mother of two of the Brownies.

Trinity Church W.G. Holds Social Evening

On Thursday evening, March 19 the Women's Guild of Trinity Church, Shannonville, were hosts at a social evening held at the home of Mrs. John Kent. Mrs. Sid Fitzgerald, president of the Women's Guild, and Mrs. Kent welcomed the guests.

Five tables of euchre were started. The prize of high score went to Mrs. T. Whittle; low score, Mrs. Long. Mrs. Clarence Long gave an interesting reading and Mrs. Arnold Porter played accordion selections.

One attraction of the evening was a white elephant table which netted $11.60.

Appreciative thanks are tendered to all those who helped make this social evening a success.

Refreshments were served by the Women's Guild.

Women's Activities

ST. PAUL'S ANGLICAN W.A.

Marmora — The March meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of St. Paul's Anglican church was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Roy Frost with a fair attendance of members.

In the absence of the president Mrs. R. G. Winters, the chair was taken by past president, Mrs. J. M. Brownlie, who opened the meeting. The Scripture reading, Ezekiel 37, was taken by the lay reader, W. J. Cottrell.

A letter was received from Mrs. Kent, of St. John's W.A., Stirling, inviting the members to a special meeting in Stirling on April 22 at which the speaker will be Mrs. A. C. McCollum, of Sydenham. Mrs. R. Frost reported for the Dorcas, outlining the needs for the bale which is to be sent to the Indian Residential School at Prince Albert, Sask. Gifts were brought in for the quilt which is to be included in the bale and further blocks are promised, it is hoped to complete the quilt in the near future.

Chapter 3 of the study book, "Thine is the Glory," was read by W. J. Cottrell, who closes the meeting.

The hostess served refreshments.

COMPLETE LAND SALE

BRANTFORD (CP)—Sale of 90 acres of the Six Nations Indians' Glebe lands to the city of Brantford has been completed and the city may now use the land in any way it wants, Mayor Howard E. Winter said Saturday. The Indians voted in favor of the $160,000 sale.

Club Activities

HOLLOWAY ST. FELLOWSHIP CLUB

The Fellowship Club of Holloway Street United Church held its meeting of the month at the home of Mrs. Everett Pluglhorn, Lewis St., a good number being present, and Mrs. Earle White presiding. The usual business was transacted.

The devotional period was taken by the executive members of the club in the form of a pageant. "The Old Rugged Cross," Mrs. Scriven took the solo parts with on Stevie. Due to illness several Brownies were absent, but ten Brownies and seven Tweenies were present for the ceremony. This was a rather special occasion as Marie is leaving Belleville to live in Ottawa, and wished to be enrolled in this pack before her departure.

On behalf of the pack, Brownie Susie Musgrove presented Marie with the Brownie handbook as a little remembrance. Marie's happy smile and courage will be sorely missed by everyone who knew her.

ELDORADO M.B.

The Eldorado Mission Band held at the home of Mrs. Hurley, was opened with a piano solo by Anne Cook[e] directed and expert reports were given by Joanne Chidley and Gordon Hurley. Four stories were read by Marlene Blackburn, Carol Bailey, Judy Cotton and Gordon Hurley. A poem entitled "March", was read by Joanne Chidley. The vocal duet by Joanne Chidley, Tawny Scriven took the solo parts with members entitled "Mantu of Korea".

"You Can't Please Everybody", was read by Anne Cook and Carol Bailey.

The study book was read by Mrs. Pearl Reid, the worship service was led by Mrs. Gerald Hurley.

A story was also read by Mrs. Blackburn, and a letter of thanks by Gordon Hurley from the flood relief fund.

Refreshments were served by several members.

PREDICTS STEADY PRICES

COLDSTREAM, Ont. (CP)—Beef producers have nothing to fear for the future, Robert McCubbin, Middlesex MP, and parliamentary assistant to the minister of agriculture, told the Beef producers Association of Middlesex here Saturday. "Keep your cows," Mr. McCubbin told members, predicting steady beef prices this spring and possibly higher prices in June and July.

Answer to Readers

(Conducted by MARY MOORE)

Since Good Friday comes in this week I have moved up to today the letters and my answers that would normally appear in this column on a Friday.

Question—Please give me recipe for light and open Johnnycake.—Betty W.

Answer:

JOHNNYCAKE No. 1

Two-thirds cup sifted all-purpose flour, ¾ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon each baking powder and baking soda, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 1-3 cups yellow cornmeal, 2 well-beaten eggs, 1 2-3 cups sour or buttermilk, ¼ cup melted shortening (good bacon fat is delicious.) Combine and sift first 5 ingredients; stir in cornmeal. Combine eggs, milk and shortening and add all at once to dry ingredients. Stir until barely blended. Turn into greased pan about 11 x 17 x 1½ inches and bake at 400 deg. Fah. about 30 to 35 minutes. Cut in squares and serve hot.

JOHNNYCAKE No. 2 (Cornbread)

Three-quarters cup white or yellow cornmeal, 1½ cups plus 2 tablespoons sifted all-purpose flour, 1 tablespoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 well beaten egg, 1 cup milk, ¼ cup melted shortening. Sift together flour, cornmeal, baking powder, salt and sugar. Combine the egg, milk and shortening. Turn liquid ingredients into dry all at once, stir quickly until barely mixed. It may still have a slightly lumpy appearance. Turn into greased pan 9 x 9 x 2 and bake at 425 deg. Fahr. for about 25 to 30 minutes. Cut in squares and serve hot.

Question—My husband is in the poultry processing business and we eat a lot of chicken. Often I use scalded or skinned birds that are not saleable but perfectly edible. We like them prepared differently and I don't hesitate to experiment, but there is one recipe I have always looking for and that is cold chicken loaf—cut nicely with peas and celery, but one with only chicken and stock or gelatin and good seasoning.—Isabel B.

Answer—Ask me up sometime won't you?

PLAIN JELLIED CHICKEN

Soften 3 tablespoons best quality gelatin in ¼ cup cold water 5 minutes. Dissolve this in 2½ cups strained well-seasoned chicken stock which has been skimmed and skimmed free of fat and reheated. Add 4 cups cut up, sliced or cubed chicken meat and 1 teaspoon salt. (The salt flavor diminishes when gelatin mixtures cool.) Pour into loaf pan about 9 x 5 x 3 inches. Chill until set. Unmould on cold platter garnished attractively. Slice with very sharp knife. See tomorrow's column for a perfectly superb hot chicken loaf.

Question—If it is at all possible I would like the recipe for "Heavenly Hash" — I believe it's a fruit salad concoction which is delectable — S. B.

Answer:

HEAVENLY HASH (serves 24)

One No. 2 can crushed pineapple, 1 lb. cut up marshmallows, 1 cup chopped nuts, 2 cups cream, whipped. Mix pineapple and marshmallows and allow to stand overnight covered. Just before serving add nuts and whipped cream folded in, not stirred. Additions are drained canned Mandarin oranges, peeled and cored grapes, sliced green and red maraschino cherries.

Question—My husband has recently been put on a special diet as he already feeling pinched as to what to serve for dinner—what I would particularly like is something else, if small portions. Also beef that is not fried. —Mrs. Frank W.

Answer—See jellied chicken above, also Hot Chicken Loaf tomorrow's column.

SHORTS RIBS EN CASSEROLE

Two pounds short ribs of beef, 2 tablespoons French dressing (optional), 2 sliced onions, 2 cups stock or water, 6 small potatoes. Wipe meat with damp cloth, brush with French dressing (or mixture of half oil and half lemon juice) and let stand ½ hour. Put in baking dish, cover with the onion, pour in stock, cover and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 1 hour. Add pared or unpared potatoes, recover and baked 1 hour longer. Uncover and bake 30 minutes longer. Season as desired during baking period.

Fashion Flashes

A CLEVER BALANCE between printed and plain fabric lends interest to a new model by Dior. It is an evening dress composed of a strapless basis of white organza, slim of bodice, the skirt floor length. Wide side panels that meet at the waist and disclose the dress, redingote fashion, are of red and white poppy-printed silk, and there is a cover-up shoulderette to match.

LAST YEAR'S coats don't look so good, not after a survey of all the new slim and fitted styles Reed-slim is a new coat of silver-beige covert-type wool worsted. Single-breasted, from a high club collar that ends in deep points, the coat has bracelet-length sleeves and four curved, flapped pockets, placed close to the front. Despite its line, the cost is easy.

FLATTERING little hats will please the woman in search of a new Spring bonnet. A small mushroom hat in white straw is prettily trimmed with a large tea rose at the side crown. Smaller rose buds at the opposite side and a rhinestone-studded pale beige veil are other becoming accents

MARMORA

Agricultural Society Revising Prize List

Marmora — A meeting of Marmora Agricultural Society was held on Thursday evening at the home of the president, Carl Heath.

The chief item of business engaging the time for most of the meeting was the completion of the revision of the prize list.

Mrs. T. J. Bateman reported revision of part of the list relating to ladies' work and later with the ladies present, completed that section.

For the men's section, Charles Lajoie reported on dairy products and Leslie Hulsman on grains and seeds. The other sections will be finished shortly to permit an early publication of the classes and prize list.

Permanent Grandstand

The matter of an improved and permanent grandstand was introduced and deemed practical for erection this summer.

The April meeting will be held at the home of Mervyn Le Moy, in Marmora township, when it is hoped more will be present, respecting the proposed Calf Club and Field Crop Competition.

Before the meeting adjourned, a minute's silence was observed out of respect for the memory of the late Sawyer Queen Mary.

Refreshments were served by the ladies present.

MEAT DEAL WITH UK

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (Reuters)—An Anglo-Uruguayan meat treaty was signed here Friday by the minister of livestock, Juan Quilici, and British ambassador Douglas Rowland. Britain will pay a "pilot price" of $450 a long ton for meat—the same as she is paying Argentina.

STIRLING

Miss Marabelle West Honored by Shower

Stirling —Miss Marabelle West was the guest of honor last Thursday evening at a well-arranged miscellaneous shower at the home of Miss Roberta Good. Twenty girl friends gathered in the living room, which was appropriately decorated with pink and white streamers, pompoms, bells and spring flowers.

The evening was spent in games and contests. Bonnets for the bridal attendants were cleverly fashioned from sheets of tissue paper in pastel shades.

During the evening Marabelle was given the seat of honor at the table well laden with beautiful gifts. Here she was assisted by Miss Evelyn Lancaster and Miss Miss Denise Burgess.

After the gifts were opened, Marabelle thanked the guests for their lovely gifts and Roberta for having a shower in her hooor. She invited all to visit her in her home after she gets settled.

Refreshments were served by Roberta, assisted by Miss Grace Carleton and Miss Shirley Aikens.

HAWES' SLOGAN CONTEST

Write a Snappy Slogan or Short Rhyme and WIN one of the 50 GENERAL ELECTRIC FLOOR POLISHERS Being Given Away by The Makers of HAWES' FLOOR WAX The Famous Paste Wax for Hardwood Floors and HAWES' FLOOR GLOSS The Liquid Polish that Shines as It Dries

Every woman will be thrilled to own an electric floor polisher. Hawes' are awarding 25 General Electric Floor Polishers to the senders of the best 25 Slogans in this Contest; and another 25 to the 25 Dealers from whom the winning contestants bought their Hawes' Wax, or Hawes' Floor Gloss.

Have you want a slogan, or short rhyme. You can write one—it's easy! Write one on Hawes' Wax (paste) or Hawes' Floor Gloss (liquid).

ENTER NOW—READ THE CONTEST RULES

Buy a tin of HAWES' FLOOR WAX (Paste)—or a tin of HAWES' FLOOR GLOSS (Liquid). Read the directions carefully. They will help you find a good Slogan or Rhyme that will convey in 20 words or less the superiority of either of these HAWES' Products. Contest closes at midnight June 15th.

Get your tin of HAWES' now, and mail YOUR entry to Contest Dept., EDWARD HAWES & CO., LTD., 421 Dundas St. E., Toronto

CONTEST RULES READ CAREFULLY

1. Write a Slogan or Short Rhyme—not more than 20 words—which you recommend best describes the superiority and remarkable features of either HAWES' WAX or HAWES' FLOOR GLOSS.

2. Submit as many Slogans or Rhymes as you wish, but not more than one prize will be awarded to any one contestant.

3. Slogans and Rhymes must be clearly written (or typed) on one side of the paper only, and your name and address clearly written or printed at the top of the first page. Mail to Contest Dept., at the full home address given above.

4. Contestants must state the name of the town where you purchased your tin of HAWES' Wax or Gloss that has inspired a prize.

5. To qualify for a prize—buy a tin of HAWES' FLOOR WAX (Paste) or HAWES' FLOOR GLOSS and count the number of times the word HAWES' appears on the tin. If HAWES' FLOOR WAX is used, the number is three. If HAWES' FLOOR GLOSS is used, the number is four. Write this number (and dealer's name), as follows:—"The word HAWES' appears ..... times on my tin." No entry will be considered for a prize unless this is done.

6. Contest closes Monday, June 15th, 1953. All entries must reach our Office by that date. Address all entries to Contest Dept., Edward Hawes & Co. Ltd., 421 Dundas Street East, Toronto 5, Ont.

7. The Judges will be—F. J. Chorley, Editor, "Canadian Home Journal"; Gordon Sinclair, Broadcaster; and Miss Ann Taberner, B. Ed., McKeown, A. A. Dunn & Co. Ltd., Advertising Agency.

8. All entries become the property of Edward Hawes & Co. Ltd., and will not be returned. The Company will not enter into any correspondence, or enter into any discussion with any contestant. By entering, all Contestants agree to accept as final the decision of the Judges.

Names of winners will be published in this paper about week of June 29.

CHRIST PRESENTED TO THE PEOPLE

Chapter 36

THE DRUNKEN KING

Pilate sat out of doors in his ivory and gilded bronze chair. This was a defiant moment in his life. His simple, uncomplicated brain was whirling with discordant arguments: what Procula dreamed and what Annas had already reported to the Emperor about the procurator and the disorderly night in the eyes of the condemned man. He kept them waiting for his decision as he groped for words.

How would he defend himself, if he made the wrong decision and Rome called him on the tape? He knew the law. Anyone who offered a claim to being equal to the king committed treason and was open to a sentence of death. If what Jesus had said constituted high treason there was no greater crime known.

Pilate, by the gods, make up your mind! In your heart of hearts, do you really believe Him guilty?

Well . . .

Without a glance at Annas or Caiphas, nor yet at Jesus, Pilate stood up and announced:

"I find no cause in this man!"

They were thunderstruck! No fault in Jesus at all! That judgment can't be final! Yes, it was the finding and order of reversal of the case which had come to the procurator on appeal. He had held a hearing and had decided that, in his judgment, the verdict of the trial court was not in accord with the law and the evidence. Therefore Jesus had been illegally convicted and must now be discharged from custody. The hearing on appeal was ended, the verdict pronounced, and it was "not guilty."

"From Galilee"

Roman jurisprudence had done its task; it had acquitted Jesus Christ.

"He stirs up the people!" gasped Caiphas, his flushed face visibly paling in the creeping light of dawn, while behind him the hired mob began obediently to rumble: "He stirs up the people, teaching throughout all Judea, beginning from Galilee to this place."

"Galilee?"

Pilate's hoarse voice broke in on what promised to be a harangue.

"Did you say this prisoner came from Galilee?"

"It is so!"

Pilate smiled affably. Already he had seen a riot beginning in front of his palace. Now he experienced a vast sense of relief. for if Jesus came from Galilee, then He was really not Pilate's problem after all; it was a question of jurisdiction; it was Herod's problem, and Herod was even now in Jerusalem! The princeling who ruled as tetrarch over Galilee could take over the responsibility of deciding this case. What a fortunate solution! Especially as there was no love found or lost between Herod Antipas and Pilate; this courteous gesture in protocol might put an end to an old animosity.

"Take Him to Herod!"

Annas grumbled and Caiphas roared, and his mob roared with him, but to no avail. There was nothing else to do but to turn about and march through the dark streets to the palace of Herod. They had been outfoxed; Pilate's position was politically sound; they could not complain, for what he did was legal.

Just a Trick?

Of course it was nothing more than a trick by which Pilate was trying to extricate himself from a dilemma.

However, Herod Antipas was nobody's fool either. He, too, had a legal turn of mind, when it was necessary. Once before he had executed a prophet. The name was John the Baptist, and like skunk spray the odium of that beheading had clung to him ever since. Would Herod see through Pilate's transparent trick?

On this morning when Pilate tried to leave Jesus at his doorstep Herod Antipas was staying in the ancient Jerusalem castle of his family. There at dawn sat Herod, still carousing before the remains of a gluttonous meal. Around him a group of tawnied, half-naked girls pretended still to be enjoying his company.

"Let Pilate Take It . . ."

"Hail, King, Ha! Ha! How goes it with You, King, old King, hey, boy! Your head stays on for me. If it comes off, let Pilate take it off—not I. Back with you! Soldiers! Salute and bow to the King of the Jews, and take Him away. I thought He was a magician. Wah!"

The captive Jesus was led to the door in His white robe of mockery, when Herod Antipas, suddenly grown serious, staggered to his feet.

"Wait! You remember me three years ago—I wanted to kill You then. You called me an old fox and You said I couldn't kill You, because a prophet must perish only in Jerusalem. How could You read the future like that?"

The door closed. The prisoner was gone. But He left Herod Antipas as frightened at Pilate. Indeed the very next day Herod had a heart-to-heart talk with Pilate. There had not been cordial relations between them for a long time, but after the troubled night they both had known because of Jesus, the Tetrarch of Galilee and the Procurator of Judea became friends.

Bruins Bounce Back To Whip Detroit 2-1; Hawks Rally To Edge Habs 2-1

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

LOTS OF FUN!

Lois has been written and said about the Junior Black Hawks' rather uncanny, if that is the right word, ability to "adapt themselves to the other fellow's style of play. They have proved they are the best little crew of "adapters" to come out of this neck of the woods in some time and Saturday night they proved they are as good with the bumps and fistic prowess as they are with the puck and shillalagh. Sure and 'twas quite a donnybrook, after all, with everybody getting in the pugilistic pageantry and just to show their versatility, both Turk Barclay and Terence Clements, the respective keepers of the citadels, got into the fray and helped share seven major penalties with their mates.

There were 24 sentences all told, with sixteen of them going to the Hawks. The optics of Bob Wilson, in fact both Bobs gleamed with the spirit of battle from the sidelines, as the warriors of both squads swept into fistic actions. True, the Hawks won the game by an 8-3 scoop and a number of disinterested spectators, if you can call them that, voted the Hawks by a wide margin on the finicuffing forays. They tell us young Master Steele is not bad with the "dukes", or as Master Clements found out. Even the "Flash" got into the argument and was given the heave-ho from the bench by the men in white.

Tonight the Hawks go back to Dixie for the sixth game of this blazing series and if they come up with the same brand of hockey as they produced Saturday night should roll home with the group title hanse. If not the boys go at it again here on Wednesday evening in the seventh and final joust of the best-of-seven affair.

GRAND PARTY

Don McKevlin's senior Glen Rays may not have won their group series as hockey players but they remove their hats to nobody as social lions, devourers of turkey with the brimstin's and slivy-footed dymsprutsers of terpsichore on a ballroom floor.

The boys, their wives and sweethearts, some eighty-two all told, were guests of Alderman and Mrs. McKevlin at a dinner dance held in the ROOF club rooms Saturday night and a right royal party it was. Among the guests present were City Comptroller Harold Bateman and Mrs. Bateman, Chairman of the Recreation Commission Bill Vanassel and Mrs. Vantassell, Alderman Jack Vine, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Grandame, officials of the club, and others.

The boys and their guests did wholesome justice to a delicious turkey dinner served by the ladies of St. Margarets-on-the-Hill church, sang the old songs and then proceeded to thwart the ordinary service club, and tripped the light fantastic in as sprightly a manner as you would wish to see.

There were speeches, too, but hardly long enough to be called that name. Frank Grandame acted as master of ceremonies and congratulated the boys on the fine showing, adding the hope that next year will see a championship club in Belleville. In similar vein were remarks made by Alderman McKevlin who extended a welcome to his guests, and promised Belleville hockey fandom they would be represented by a fine club next season.

Coach "Red" Doran added his quota of congratulatory remarks when noting the fine team spirit and harmony which the ranks that characterized the club last season. He expressed his appreciation to the team as a whole for the co-operation given him during the season, and asked for the same next year.

Alderman Tice, this department, Al. Wardhaugh and Comptroller Bateman spoke briefly after Mrs. Jim Large, a versatile pianist, had led the boys in a sing-song. Following an hour or so of social amenities and the party went to the ballroom where the rest of the evening was enjoyed in dancing. It was a grand party and a fine climax to a season of hockey.

IT COULD BE!

We don't as a rule pay much attention to these toutish chappies who whisper tips from the corner of their mouth, but we cannot help retailing what one of these blokes whispered last week. Simply this: "Watch those Bruins, bub. Don't say you wern't warned."

After what has happened to the champion Detroit Red Wings during the last couple of Stanley Cup semi-final tilts, it would seem the chappie has something. Lynn Patrick's Beantowners have won the last two from the so-called invincible Wings and Sunday night there were, in plenty, of scarlet countenances in the Motor City. The fighting Bruins, adopting a "tailing" role, sent their best men to shadow the starry Lindsay, Howe and others and apparently the scheme worked. The Wings had either put off their record-seeking forays until after they've won a game or two. And wouldn't the gussepuris lose face if such a dire thing as the elimination of the powerful Wings takes place at the hands of the guys from the town of the bean and the cod. Stranger things have happened.

And by the same token, the Canadiens are not out of the woods yet. Not by a long shot. The Hawks after absorbing a couple of defeats, one a heartbreaker, roared back with plenty of reserve strength last night and took the third game in another overtime session, after trailing all the way to the seventeen minute mark in the third period. As we mentioned before it would be a strange happening should the Bruins knock off the Wings, but what could be stranger than the Hawks meeting the Bruins for the Stanley penterware, and then winning it. That is not wishful thinking, just the mention of a possibility.

THIRD GAME!

Thoroughly rested over the week-end the Campbellford Greenshirts and the Dukes from Wellington renew hostilities in their Trent Valley Hockey League finals in Memorial Arena tomorrow night. In the last two tilts the Greenies have had the Indian sign on the Dukes, taking the victories by substantial margins. Tomorrow night, the Dukes claim, will be their night to howl. The series is a best-of-seven affair and while from the showing to date the Campbellford club seems to have the edge in ability, anything can happen. The Dukes are determined they won't suffer the ignominy of a four-straight defeat. Game at 8.30.

Underdogs' Night With Both Grabbing Nod in Overtime; Dewsbury, McIntyre, Heroes

By Ed Simon
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The remarkable Boston Bruins have the hockey spotlight all to themselves today.

Lynn Patrick's hard-trying third-placers, barbecued with dismal regularity all season by the formidable Detroit Red Wings, confounded the experts Sunday by whipping the National Hockey League champions 2-1 in overtime to lead by a similar margin in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final.

It was underdogs' night as Chicago Black Hawks defeated Montreal Canadiens 2-1, also in overtime, for their first victory in three tries in the other semi-final bracket.

But the big share of the glory belonged to Patrick and his crew. The climax was provided by Jack McIntyre, a 22-year-old left-winger, who hadn't scored a goal in his last 20 games. The converted defenceman from Brussels, Ont., neared Detroit's goal pass and picked the corner of the Detroit net at 12:32 in the overtime period to break up the game.

The happy youngster shared the credit with his club's corps of veterans, and with coach Patrick himself, who devised his defensive strategy even after the Wings murdered him 7-0 in the series opener and now is watching 1' pay off.

Against the high-scoring Detroit trio of Gordie Howe, Ted Lindsay and Marty Pavelich, the Boston coach sent out three of the oldest men on his club with instructions to stick with them every time they hit the ice.

Opposite the brilliant Howe was 36-year-old Woody Dumart, a 200-goal man himself, who did a perfect job of shadowing the Detroit sharpshooter. Teamed with him were captain Milt Schmidt and defensive expert Joe Klukay, both in their 30s.

While Lynn's greybeards checked the top Detroit threesome to a standstill, the Bruins' youngsters out against the champions' second-stringers and had more to play it cosy while they waited for the breaks.

The first break came in the opening period when Eddie Sandford took a perfect pass from defenceman Bill Quackenbush and drove one past Montreal's net minder Terry Sawchuk.

Little Tony Leswick tied it up in the second period on a back-board relay from Marcel Bonin. Then Boston goalie Sugar Jim Henry, backed by a willing defence, turned aside Detroit's last drives until McIntyre went into his act. The Bruin backstop handled 44 shots to 32 for Sawchuk.

At Chicago the hero was defenceman Al Dewsbury, who set up the tying goal and scored the winner himself after the Canadiens had reversed the pattern of the two previous games by taking an early lead.

Bernie Geoffrion scored for Montreal in the second period, feeding Al Rollins with a slow shot instead of his usual booming drive.

Less than two minutes before regular time ran out, Bill Mosienko took a relay from Dewsbury and Vic Lynn to sink the tying goal. The big defenceman's winning effort, a 30-footer, came off George Gee's passout at the 5:18 mark in the extra session.

It was the first playoff victory for the Hawks over Montreal in 11 meetings.

Turpin, Humez To Fight For 'World' Title

LONDON (AP)—Randolph Turpin of Britain and Charles Humez of France will fight for the "world" middleweight boxing championship here, Jane B. promoter Jack Solomons announced today.

Everything now is "signed, sealed and delivered" for Turpin, British champion and former world champion, to meet Humez at London's White City stadium for the title vacated by Sugar Ray Robinson last December.

The latest move in the international battle over the 160-pound crown came only three days after the American field of contenders for the championship was cut to two. They were Paddy Young of New York, who eliminated Ernie Durando of Bayonne, N.J., Friday night, and Carl (Bobo) Olson of Honolulu.

"After a long discussion with Turpin and Humez," Solomons said "I have solved the purse difficulties by giving Humez the 59 per cent he wanted and by allocating 50 per cent to Turpin, plus a further 10 per cent out of my own pocket."

The joint board of the New York State athletic commission and National Boxing Association in the United States had it all mapped out for Turpin to fight Olson for the American crown, with the winner to meet the victor of the Turpin-Humez scrap in Europe.

Even before Solomons' move today, however, Young said he was interested in meeting Turpin himself without facing Olson. And Olson, too, had said before the Young-Durando scrap that he wanted Turpin without having to face Young or Durando.

Toronto Clubs Win Track Honors

East York Track Club walked away with the men's title, chalking up 49 points, 15 more than their closest competitor, the Toronto Track Club. Claiming High School of Montreal placed third in the men's division with 13 points.

Top three spots in the women's division went to local clubs. Toronto Track and Field Club edged out Silver Heels Track Club 21-20, East York Track Club was third with eight points.

Top man in the meet was Joe Foreman of the Toronto Track Club. He won two firsts and was a member of two winning relay teams.

Ends in Tie

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)—The $10,000 Greensboro open golf tournament ended Sunday in a four-way tie for top money of $2,000 with Sam Snead, Doug Ford, Art Wall and Earl Stewart, Jr., tied at 275, five under par. They meet today in a 36-hole playoff for the top four money awards.

Remember When

By The Canadian Press

Detroit Red Wings, who have just established a record by winning their fifth straight NHL title, won their first league champions hip 19 years ago tonight by beating Toronto Maple Leafs 1-0 in the deciding game of the best-of-five series. Wings won the league title again in 1936, 1937 and 1943 before starting their present string in the 1948-49 season.

Black Hawks Whip Dixie Flashers 8-3 To Take 3-2 Edge In Series

Near-Donnybrook Features Penalty-Riddled Junior Game, Dixie Coach Given Heave-Ho

By C. D. T.

In a penalty-ridden game, that saw seven majors and one misconduct handed out, Belleville Hawks went ahead of the Dixie Flashers, three games to two in their group playoff for junior ("B" honors at the Memorial Arena on Saturday night by defeating the Flashers by an 8-3 count, the period scoring being 3-1, 4-2. The locals were much the best in this torrid series and should wrap up the series on Monday night in Dixie, where the sixth game will be played. It is to be accomplished the teams will meet in Belleville on Wednesday night for the final game. The winners will meet the Weston Dukes, winners of the Junior B crown last season.

It would be hard to say what the outcome would have been had the teams enjoyed equal strength throughout the contest. At few intervals were the teams at full strength due to the 34 penalties imposed, the Hawks garnering sixteen of the tripe to the sin bin. A "standard" for gladiatorial proportions developed four minutes before the close of the second period and Cromble and Heffering chased players into benches following the general mêlée that developed. It all started when Belford was caught near the crease of "Turk's" citadel. Barclay shoved the player out of the crease and Belford took a slash at the goalie. That was enough for Barclay and the fists started flailing and soon every player was into it with his pet opponent.

Goalie Storms In

Clements, the goalie for the Flashers stormed into the melee but he picked on the wrong guys when he took on Stocco, because that worthy gave the slight petmeister a real hockey lesson in a few seconds. By this time fights were breaking out all over the ice, Belford went away for a repair job, while "Flash" Bellett, coach of the Flashers and Mr. Bellegham, the manager, got into the act. Cromble warned both to stay out of the fracas but they persisted in sticking their "irons" in and Stocco was ordered off the bench by Heffering and he was removed by a gentleman.

Finally quiet prevailed and Barclay, Belford, Clements and Stocco were given majors. Previous to this outbursts, Casey had been given a major and no sooner had play resumed than Thermien took a slash at V. Webster and he received a major and he was soon followed by Henry with a long sit. Ron Halstead, previous to the free-for-all, tried to tell the referees, where they needed into and he was banished for ten minutes for misconduct. Through it all, none of the players was injured but their feelings were considerably ruffled and there was no love lost between the teams for the rest of the pastime.

Barclay Stood Out

Getting back to the play, Barclay stood out with a grand performance. On many occasions, he had to be good, due to the lack of manpower up front and he manfully performed his task. He was aided and abetted by sound defence tactics, especially by Goyer and Delbosco, who incidentally helped himself to one of the scoring clubs of the evening. Up front, Halstead, Hull and Jacklin carried the heavy end with Halstead and Hull having two goals apiece. George Jacklin has not looked better this winter in racking up a good five assists to be the top point getter of the squad for the night. The other goals were scored by Goyer and Gilmour. The third line of Hermiston, Brant and Casey killed off the penalties in beautiful style. They checked the opposition dizzy.

The Flashers caused many anxious moments but they could not cope with the tremendous speed of the Hawks. They were continually beaten to the puber by fast play. The Hawks changed their tactics of previous games and were continually dumping the puber out of the danger zone and the Flashers could not get their vaunted attack under way. The opposition has a number of fancy dan stick handlers and are tricky but the Hawks made them bring the play to them and were left on about their business of scoring goals. There were some beautiful goals scored during the evening especially the one by Hull from an almost impossible angle after taking a sharp pass from Jacklin and the two that Halstead scored, which Clements has not seen yet.

Dixie Opens Scoring

Dixie opened the scoring near the ten minute mark of the first frame when Gordaneer registered from Bain but the Hawks were soon back in the picture when Goyer blasted on from the point position on a power play, after receiving Jacklin's pass back. Jacklin then tipped in Hull's pass and then the Hawks were away winging and never looked back.

Gilmour completed the scoring of the period, when he went in alone to lift one over Clements. In the second frame Halstead registered from Jacklin on a beautiful effort and Delbosco put on a one-man exhibition to best the Flasher's goalie. Halstead was put in the clear by Jacklin and they worthy made no mistake. Dixie finally got into the picture with a tally by Gordaneer with the help of Bain, who incidentally played a terrific game for the losers.

Late in the third frame V. Webster got one unassisted but Hull and Halstead with Jacklin assisting on both put the game beyond the reach of the Flashers. Bob Wilson and his son, Robert, who played last season with the Hawks were interested visitors at the game. The chief scout for the Black Hawks, liked what he saw. He praised the team as a whole and mentioned two or three specially but the names will be a secret. The Hawks should wind up the series on Monday evening. If they bind back to the form they showed on Saturday night, the kind of a lapse on their part will bring the teams back for the next session and that is too close for comfort.

The lineups:

Belleville: Goal Barclay; defence Goyer and Stocco; centre Delbosco; wings Halstead and Hull; alternates, Delbosco, Green, Jones, Thernien, Gilmour, Brant, Hermiston and Casey.

Dixie: Goal Clements; defence Mitchell and Bain; centre Boscardo; wings B. Webster and V. Webster; alternates Copeland, Reynolds, Gordaneer, Belford, Courtney, Gibb, Sinclair, Henry.

Referees: Cromble of Bowmanville; Heffering of Whitby.

Bosiaks, Gourleys Lead Commercial Loop

The Men's Commercial Bowling League commenced their playoffs Friday night at the Bowl-O-Drome, and the Bosiaks entry took a slight lead in the "A" section with a total pin-fall of 3526, followed by Courtleys with 3514, Quinte Distributors with 3433 and Welding Gases with 3026.

Star Welding took a commanding lead in the "B" section with a total of 3632, followed by Stephens Adamson with 3377, O'Neil Sales, 2994, Alexander 2827 and Quinte Bros. 2781.

The high triple of the session was racked up by Dave Batchelor with 852, while Bill Trumpour rolled the high single of 338.

Other high scores were rolled by: Piperni, 331 (301), H. Thrasher 758 (306), B. Trumpour 752, H. Phillips 748, A. Mikle 739, Fitzgerald 738, B. Dennis 723 (335), A. Muskeluke 703 (307), K. Peacock 703, S. Mulholland 703.

Grid Prexy Installed

EDMONTON (CP)—Norm Perry of Sarnia, a former mayor of the Ontario city and a one-time football great, was installed Saturday as 1953 president of the Canadian Rugby Union, succeeding Art Chapman of Winnipeg.

Dr. W. A. Campbell, Kingston, was named first vice-president.

Myer Insky, a past president, involved CRU in its first international meeting in Montreal. The decision was left to the executive.

Barrie Flyers Whip St. Michaels By 4-1 Score

TORONTO (CP)—Barrie Flyers Saturday took a 1-0 lead in the best-of-nine Ontario Hockey Association Junior A finals when they downed St. Michael's Majors 4-1.

The Flyers' goals were divided among Skip Teal, Jim Robertson, Orv Tessier and Don Cherry. Bill Dineen tallied for the Majors.

Barrie took a 1-0 lead in the first period when Teal nabbed Jim Robertson's pass and fired a hard shot from 20 feet out that caught the top right-hand corner of the net. Robertson tallied in the second with a flip shot over Ed Chadwick who was sprawled on the ice. Tessier was given credit for the third counter but it appeared to have been deflected in by a St. Michael's player, again while Chadwick was flat on the ice. Dineen got home from a scramble in front of the net. Cherry took a pass from Tessier to finish the scoring.

The Irish were outclassed by the Flyers. In the third period the Barrie team toyed with the Majors and kept them on the defensive for most of the session.

The second game will be played in Barrie Tuesday.

Timmins Combines Lead Series 2-0

NORTH SYDNEY, N.S. (CP)—Timmins-Porcupine Combines got a firm toehold on the Eastern Canada Memorial Cup Hockey quarter-final Saturday night by defeating Northside Pirates 5-3. The Combines lead the best-of-seven series 2-0, with one game tied.

Lino Demarch opened the scoring for Combines at 6:30 of the period. Each team scored two goals in the second. Dicker MacDonald and Bert Dalling scored for Pirates and Graham Savard and Demarch counted for the visitors.

In the third, Flo Guarda, Bruce Savard and Graham Towers scored for Combines as Aubrey Guthro registered the Northside tally.

Seagram Team Bowling Champs

TORONTO (CP)—The Seagram team of Toronto Saturday won the Eastern Canada five-pin bowling championship, scoring a total of 6,915 points in five games.

The Seagram total was 27 pins better than its closest competitor, Toronto's Ace Bowling Centre, Midland, which finished third.

Seagram will go to Regina April 10 to meet the western winner for the Canadian championship. It will be the first Canadian bowling title match ever held.

Best single was rolled by M. Chorney of Sudbury. He scored 401.

Champs, All-Stars May Play Exhibition Game

EDMONTON (CP)—A charity game in August, 1954, between record fall's Grey Cup champions and the 1953 all-stars of two major football leagues is a distinct possibility and may become an annual affair.

Brailsford of Winnipeg's Kharlum Shrine Temple, the idea was brought before the Canadian Rugby Union annual meeting Saturday by Ralph Misener of Winnipeg and won unofficial support. Misener, past president of the Western Inter-provincial Football Union was later requested to investigate further and report back to the CRU executive.

The game would be played in some large Canadian city a week before the regular football season opens.

The "dream" squad opposing the Grey Cup champions probably would be made up of the official all-stars of the Big Four and the WIFU. Any athletes in the Grey Cup winner would play for their own team.

Misener noted that football had a chance through such a game to raise between $125,000 and $250,000 for crippled children.

American League 'May Break Up' Says Report

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The Globe-Democrat said Saturday that "unless some sensational turn is before the next season opens," St. Louis fears of the American Hockey League may move out of St. Louis or drop into a league of lower classification.

The newspaper also reported there is "a possibility" the American Hockey League may break up soon.

"Cincinnati and Indianapolis dropped out this season," the newspaper said, "and far-flung leagues has heavy travel expenses and there has been heavy friction this year over many matters."

Three things stand out in the decline of the AHL, the paper said, the year they were champions in the 1945-46 season and drew 320,381 to the present time when they finished ninth in a seven-club league and attracted an all-time low of 132,298," the Globe-Democrat said.

"The TV set is the second culprit. The second is the tie-up with major teams, with the farm-club Flyers coming out on the short end in quality of players received. The third is the inept front-office management."

Arthur Wirtz of Chicago and Jim Norris of Detroit own the controlling interest in the Flyers and the arena here.

MINER FATALLY HURT

SUDBURY (CP)—Leo Gelinceau was fatally injured Friday in an accident at the International Nickel Company's refinery in nearby Copper Cliff.

Goodyears Edge Oshawa 3-2 For Group Title

Kingston, March 30—Kingston Goodyears edged Oshawa Truckers, 2-2 Saturday for their third consecutive triumph and capture the Ontario Hockey Association Senior B group title as a record-breaking crowd of 4,512 thundered in acclaim. Goodyears held a wide edge in territorial play and were more alert than the Truckers.

The Oshawans, who had erected a 3-1 series lead before they faltered and lost two in a row, did not easily submit to elimination. The desperate rallies they staged during the last 20 minutes provided thrilling highlights of the battle.

A breakaway from an Oshawa ganging attack netted Goodyears the payoff marker. Jack White escaping from the pack at 4:56 to take Johnny Wyda's long pass and skate unmolested to score.

White's goal lifted Goodyears into a 3-1 advantage. Then the Oshawans stormed to the assault and clicked when Regina Tisdale counted at 6:32.

Oshawa struck again and it became a 3-2 score when after taking a pass from Dickens near the bench, Hanson steered the rubber past Ken Johnson.

Skating Champ Sets Record

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP)—World champion Tenley Albright performed with near-perfection Saturday night to win the United States figure skating title and become the first American woman-ever to win the sport's grand slam.

Using the same program of free-style skating with which she won the world and North American titles, 18-year-old Tenley simply executed all her spins and jumps and added her own interpretation and combinations to leave the opposition trailing badly.

Otto 'Otto' Know Better

LAUSANNE (AP)—Otto Mayer, chancellor of the International Olympic Committee, said today he felt the 1956 Olympic Games should be taken away from Melbourne, Australia, and awarded to another city.

The IOC will meet in Mexico City next month and make a definite decision on whether to move the games.

"We gave Melbourne the 1956 games four years ago and up to now they have done exactly nothing," Mayer said. "It will take them at least three years to build a stadium and the Olympic village and make the necessary preparations."

Frankford Sport

Frankford — Frankford Bowling League wound up their regular schedule Thursday night in Trenton, and records fell by the wayside. Ray Scott's Outlaws took seven points from Bob Arnoldi's Hopefuelers, thus establishing a new record for the first place team, compiling a total of 129, as compared with the 126 held by the Top Hatters of four years ago. Another record was set, as two teams finished in a dead tie for first time in the history of the league. Gib Gilmour's "Gibs" Gang" took five points from Karl Austin's Curlers, gaining a tie with Ross Huffman's Racketeers, who took two games, but dropped high total to Austin's team. Peterson Chase's Jets. Taking the wooden spoon, and being awarded second place, since they had a playoff coming up before the can the Racketeers, as compiled by the secretary. Jack Farley's Jokers clinched fourth place, by virtue of their five point win over Lloyd Cooke's Robbers. Latest to join the 300 Club for '53 was Gene Lohnes with a 304.

Hidden scores were drawn on the Outlaws team for the month, in the blow bank, and the winners were Edythe Babcock, Jean Austin, Orval Berry and Dick Reid.

Next week will see the first round of the playoffs, and the teams will line up as follows: Outlaws vs Hopefulate, Gib's Gang vs Robbers, Racketeers vs Curley's Crew, Jack's Jokers vs Jets Alleys will be drawn for on the night of the bowling.

Final Standing: Outlaws 129, Gib's Gang 106; Racketeers 106; Jack's Jokers 101; Hopefulate 82; Robbers 81; Curley's Crew 83; Jets 59.

FRANKFORD — With only one more night of the schedule remaining, division "B" of the Frankford Bowling League is going right down to the wire for the pennant. There is a possibility of three teams finishing tied for first place. Elmer Rogers' Screwballs took over the league lead for the first time this year, by taking seven points from Solomon Barlow's Kareless Kids. Earl Rogers' Merry Macs, who led the league for better than half the schedule, climbed back into a contending position, by taking five points from the Aristocrats.

The league will not be bowling on Good Friday night, but will bowl next on Thursday night, April 9 at 8:00, closing division "A" of the league. The playoffs will begin on the following night, April 10.

How they stand: Screwballs 114, Aristocrats 109, Merry Macs 107, Kareless Kids 78.

CRU Approves Major Rule Changes Also Shrine Bowl All-Star Game

By GRAHAM TROTTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

EDMONTON (CP)—The Canadian Rugby Union ended a surprisingly harmonious annual meeting Saturday by approving two major playing rule changes and giving unofficial blessing to an August, 1954, Shrine Bowl all-star game.

Along with the shift in CRU voting control from the minor league to the East's Big Four and the Western International Football Union, retention of the eight-man American import quota and the increase in Grey Cup ticket prices, these two features ranked as the big business of the two-day meeting.

No Heated Debates

At no time in the meeting, which installed Sarnia's Norm Perry as 1953 CRU president, was it necessary for the two big conferences to use their commanding voting power. Absence of any heated debate was conspicuous.

The rule changes:

1. Any pass thrown in a forward direction, including the shovel or screen pass, is regarded as a forward pass whether or not it crosses the line of scrimmage. Blocking by linemen 10 yards ahead of the receiver is permitted as before on the shovel pass, thrown behind the line of scrimmage to a receiver also behind the line.

2. Unlimited blocking by the receiving team on kickoffs from one goal line to the other—not just to the line of kickoff as last year, provided the receiving club has at least six men within 10 yards of the line of kickoff at the instant the ball is kicked.

3. Use of tee permitted on kickoffs if the ball is not elevated more than one inch above the ground.

4. A 15-yard penalty to teams taking "unfair" advantage of free player substitution to set up a "sleeper" play.

5. When the receiving side on a kickoff has fewer than the required six men in the restraining zones, the kicking side will be awarded the kick again 10 yards ahead of the previous kickoff line, dispensing with the former illegal interference penalty.

The rule-makers, at the insistence of the WIFU, clarified their "roughing the passer" definition by stipulating that a passer must not be hit, either intentionally or unintentionally, at the moment he passes the ball.

The all-star benefit game, suggested to the CRU by Winnipeg's Kharum Shrine Temple through WIFU past-president Ralph Misener, will be acted upon by the CRU executive after further investigation by Misener.

To be held a week before the regular 1954 season, the game would pit the 1953 Grey Cup champions against the official Big Four and WIFU all-stars of the same year.

Barons, Warriors Split Week-End Playoff Games

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cleveland Barons and Syracuse Warriors split two week-end games but Cleveland still leads their best-of-five semi-final American Hockey League series for the Calder Cup 2-1.

A late goal by Jack Gordon gave the Barons a 2-1 win Saturday night but the Warriors came back Sunday to defeat the Barons 5-3.

In Sunday's tilt the Warriors moved into a 2-0 lead in the first period, but Cleveland took advantage of a penalty in the second session to score twice, and Fred Shero's goal tied it early in the last frame.

Armand Lemieux broke the deadlock at 8:30 of the period and Leo Curick clinched it with his marker at 17:43.

Harry Pidhirny also got a pair of goals for the Warriors, while Ray Cressione and Ray Gove registered the second-period tallies for the Barons. The fourth game will be played at Syracuse Wednesday.

Goalier Gil Mayer was the standout Saturday night as Pittsburgh Hornets beat Hershey Bears 4-1 to take a 2-0 lead in their best-of-five semi-finals. The Hornets, defending Calder Cup champions, wrapped up the game with first-period goals by Willie Marshall and Johnny McLellan.

Quakers Thrash Royals 11-4

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Saskatoon Quakers thrashed New Westminster Royals 11-4 Saturday night to win their second straight victory in the best-of-seven Western Hockey League semi-final series.

Ray Manson sparked the Quakers with two goals and four assists. Alex Kaleta and rookie Dale Swarz also fired two goals for the winners.

Calgary Stampeders came through with a 4-2 victory over Edmonton Flyers Saturday to lead their best-of-five quarter-final series two games to one. Goalie Glen Hall blocked 33 Flyer shots as George Agar paced the Stamps with two goals.

Seattle Bombers nipped Vancouver Canucks 3-2 to take a 2-1 lead in their best-of-five quarter-final series. Lorne Nadeau, Eddie Robinson and Rudy Filion notched the Seattle markers.

Jim McAvity Named Prexy of Tennis Body

MONTREAL (CP)—Jim McAvity of Montreal was re-elected president of the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association at its annual meeting here Saturday.

Main problem facing the association is an indication from Mexico that it will ask that this summer's Davis Cup tie with Canada be played in Mexico. The two warring tennis factions in Mexico—the amateurs and the association—have amalgamated and have said they may stage Davis Cup play in their own country.

Major portion of financing of the CLTA annually is derived from Davis Cup play. McAvity said that with the peso being approximately one-seventh the value of the Canadian dollar, the CLTA is worried over the amount of revenue which would be received from play in Mexico.

McAvity said he will point this out to Mexican tennis officials but is said the Mexicans have the right to stage the tie in their own country.

Williams Wins Over Cardell

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Ike Williams, former lightweight champion from Trenton, N.J., won a unanimous decision over Vic Cardell, Hartford, Conn., Saturday night in their 10-round nationally-televised bout here.

Williams, who outweighed Cardell by four pounds at 152, made his second win over Cardell in a bout in Detroit in January, 1951. Williams won by a technical knockout in the ninth.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

BY FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR TUESDAY, MARCH 31, 1953

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Home budget activities are as essential as those of business. Be careful lest you try to handle more than you should financially. . . .

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Taurus natives are often too determined, and today is one when you should not be so inclined. Take sound advice, especially in weighty matters.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—What's good for one, isn't always good for another. . . That's why each person should study his or her problem separately. Do so.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—You have extremely fine feeling for your fellow man, but this can be abused. Especially be cautious today.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo)—There may be annoyances now. Don't become involved in arguments. Hot retorts never help!

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo)—Check each action, intending endeavor, and be sure not to scatter energy or intelligence on useless things.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Stars indicate little assistance during most of today. But they are not hostile and you can make some progress in routine duties.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Hold back tendency to force or become irritated. You'll accomplish just as much and be happier.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Show your real worth, sturdy background; live up to convictions. Have faith in you; don't depend on others.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—Stars rather restricting, so be sure you are right before acting. Don't be on the fence in matters of principle, faith or creed.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Uncertain for the timid. You will have to check on yourself and what's happening around you.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Use your God-given talents, co-operate at right time and place, and you will achieve. Exercise your strong will wisely.

YOU BORN TODAY: Speedy in decisions, action; a knack of judging best angles to follow and personality help lead the Aries nature. Your intellectual and emotional natures differ, each powerful, in many others. Concentrate on happy medium. Have patience; co-operate at home as with outsiders.

Birthdate of: Ewd. Fitzgerald, poet, translater of the Rubaiyat.

No Specific Cause Known for Mystery Ailment Hitting Youth, Young Adults

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

CHICAGO (AP)—A business man felt that something ought to be done about a mystery disease, so there's a new laboratory now at the University of Chicago medical school.

The mystery ailment is ulcerative colitis, a stubborn, damaging, dangerous disease that strikes mainly at youngsters and young adults. A considerable number of patients die.

Its victims get tiny ulcers of sores lining the intestines. The sores bleed at the slightest irritation. Colitis hangs fever, diarrhea, infections, often alarming loss of weight, vitamin deficiencies, sometimes skin or eye diseases, sometimes complications which can blind the eyes.

How widespread it is is not known.

Perhaps thousands of people suffer from it. It may be claiming more and more victims.

No specific cause is known, no germ has been proved to be responsible. Emotions are strongly involved, but it's not purely emotional or psychosomatic. Doctors have been stymied in finding any sustained cure.

In face of this frustration, Leo Wallach of Chicago, whose son had a long battle with colitis, took up the cudgels against the disease. He is providing funds to maintain an ulcerative colitis laboratory, contributing money himself, obtaining more from friends and anyone he can interest.

Dr. Joseph Kirner is directing the lab's research. He feels that "emotions plus some biological X" are involved in causing colitis," but the "X" factor is not yet pinned down.

The disease feeds on itself. The patient gets weaker, more worried and the disease gets worse. The condition may improve temporarily, then take a downswing. Emotional stress, colds or other respiratory infections, improper eating all may trigger another severe attack.

In extreme cases, part of the intestine may have to be removed but this may halt the disease.

Most patients ultimately recover, but usually only after a long battle. Those who do recover, says Kirner, say that "controlling their emotions is very important in shaping well."

Just why no one even knows how widespread ulcerative colitis is, One step may be to pool doctors' to learn how many victims there are. There's some sentiment also to form an organization to assist severe cases financially.

Meanwhile, Wallach continues his one-man campaign.

LAUNCH SEALS CAMPAIGN

TORONTO (CP)—Nearly $5,000 was raised Sunday when crippled children across the country in a special broadcast from a packed Maple Leaf Gardens in the kick-off of the Easter seals campaign. The show, presented by the entertainment industry, was broadcast over 80 radio stations from St. John's, Nfld., to Victoria.

FAIL AT SEXY LEADERS

VIENNA (AP)—Prague radio announced Sunday night a Czechslovak court has sentenced six leaders of Jehovah's Witnesses—6 months to prison terms ranging from five to 18 years. They were accused of "spying" for the United States and having "one dermined defence abilities of Czechoslovakia." The group was sentenced by a Prague court Saturday.

We did not go to Bonbo, nor anywhere for four days. There was no liberty and the ship did not move. Then one afternoon the captain called a muster and told us with some satisfaction that we had been assigned as flagship for the LCT's and manoeuvres for an invasion would start within a very few days perhaps the next day. He added as he told us that we would lead the LCT's into the beach, and remain there until the beach was secured. Naturally, we thought it was only a threat.

That night, in the crew's quarters, K-K, the gunner's mate (called K-K because he came from Pulaski, Tenn., where the KKK originated) deciding that perhaps the teeth should never have been stolen.

"We'll have a debate," Spruce said. "Resolved, that they should never have been filched."

The pharmacist's mate, called "Farmer" and considered to be the philosopher of the ship, said, "All debate questions are always stated in the affirmative."

"Okay. Resolved, that they should have been filched. Anything to keep peace in the family. Martin and Meadows and Kenny will be judges. They're innocent. I will preside."

"Martin's not here. He's got the gangway watch." That was Blackwell, the first-class signalman, who rarely said anything.

Meadows, you judge by yourself," Spruce said. His decisions were always quick. "Gentlemen, I give you two of the most distinguished orators of our day: on my left, wearing blue dungarees, white T-shirt, black socks, and no shoes, weighing 100 pounds, is that famous Tennessee hillbilly orator, Mr. K-K, who will defend the negative. On my right, wearing white broadcloth shorts, T-shirt, no shoes, no socks, and a silly grin is Archie Rayland, affirmative, the first speaker!"

* * *

"Gentlemen, through no act of congress, this is indeed a great question, the essence of which is: has a wrong been committed? I ask you to review the case with me. First of all, the deed is done and as Shakespeare said once you have reached the middle of the stream there's no sense in turning back. In the second place, in court of law, there are mitigating circumstances—in other words reasons, reasons. If a burglar breaks into your house and is shot in the process, you are not held guilty in the eyes of the law. Thus, I pleaq self-defence for this crew; I plead that this crew was time and again unduly provoked; and I plead, therefore, that no wrong has been committed. Thank you."

Spruce stood up. "Thank you, generously...now...I give you, Mr. K-K!"

"Folks. I am just an ole farm boy from the state of Tennessee. I don't know much law. Plowed most of my life...was plowing when the Army got hot on my neck, so I joined the Navy. I can go along with Mr. Rayland and Mr. Shakespeare as far as saying the deed's done. But after that we separate. I reckon we see things different in Tennessee. I reckon we use a different code. Because, where I come from, if a man calls you a liar you don't go out and steal his horse..."

The speech was interrupted by the sudden appearance of Bert on the ladder. "Got a red-hot scuttle-butt! We're pulling out to made an end-run around Larcone. Early in the morning. I think The British are directing it."

"I'm anti-British," K-K said.

"Shut-up," Farmer said. "You don't know enough history to be anti-British."

"Go on with your knitting," Bert said, "but there's a bag of mail in hold three!"

* * *

I was careful to open Mek's letters according to the date of the post mark. The first was written New Year's Day.

Dear Don,

I couldn't let New Year's day go by without writing to you—and besides there are lots of things I want to tell you. Mother and Father were married last Friday night —does it need explaining? I was not surprised and yet I was. Right now I don't know how I feel about it. He had a two-week furlough. Both will go back to Fort Benning where he has been assigned to teach some kind of army mathematics. They have four more days here anyway. And then, I am to move in with Miss Audie. T'had rather stay here by myself but Mother would never hear of that. The only other choice seemed to be with Saint Savanna. Maybe I should have chosen her—at least she doesn't have any dogs. She has heard from Foster. He was shot down somewhere in Germany, was taken to a prison camp and later escaped into Switzerland. That's why it took so long to hear from him.

I have not heard from you in a long time. More and more I am afraid for you, because more and more I believe The Immenent Design swings its scythe without reason. M.

I lay down and turned my face to the wall, away from the light, from the past like a child. I thought of the men in the store and all the things they knew and all the things I didn't know.

The captain heaved his head, not in defeat, but in meditation, like Brother Molock, waiting for someone to come to the mourner's bench.

The captain threw his head back. "Mr. Pruitt. Take a muster. And each of you, when your name is called, answer: 'I know nothing about this, sir.'"

Mr. Pruitt stepped forward, tall, alert, like a centre waiting for the toss of the basketball. "Captain, I don't think that's legal."

"Why?"

"This is a muster, not a court."

* * *

The aptain moved his head in a half circle, taking in all of us. "Well, you mad at me; that's it. You're mad because you didn't get liberty, and because we're going to Bonko. I'll bargain with you. Give me my teeth back, and I'll promise you we won't go to Bonko. I'll tell the Commander we're only got one generator, which is the truth, I'm playing fair with you, now you play fair with me."

We could hear revelle being sounded on other LCI's near us, and a voice: "You deadheads get a move on. Even old man Yard and his hands are up over there."

The captain raised his hand; his fist was clenched. "That's all. I vow to take you into the most dangerous waters you've ever been through, and sooner or later I'll crush you, I'll break you, I'll grind you to our knees."

It was dark but the captain had his blackboard on the well deck. He stood before the blackboard and announced: "Men, this is nearly it! At 1400 tomorrow we lead a group of LCT's out of here for an end-run beyond Larcone. Don't think because it's an end-run it's going to be easy; we'll be up against air attacks, submarines, and maybe some shore fire. Here's the picture." He stepped aside and revealed what I later learned was a small segment of shore line between Petitville and Bizerte.

K-K, who was close to the blackboard, said, "Captain, dost them three swastikas and just one American flag mean the Germans outnumber us three to one?"

"No," said the captain, "I didn't have room to draw three flags." He turned to the blackboard and erased two of the swastikas. "Now listen while I explain this. The Larcone area is pocketed at Larcone because they're short on heavy ammunition. We've got to get ammunition into Red Beach or else make the Germans think we're going to land at Green or Yellow. It's almost impossible to get through to Red Beach because of the Island of Tone. So we'll make an end-run to Green. That may relieve enough pressure so they can break out of the pocket."

"We may not get back, then."

"That's right. I advise you to go down and hit your bunk. It may be the last good night's sleep you'll ever get."

When the captain was gone, Spruce said, "You children go on and catch a few winks so's you won't be red-eyed when you gits before St. Peter."

Twice during the night we were alerted, but there was no raid. When everything was secured after the second alert, the crew's quarters was very quiet, much quieter than if we had all been asleep. Dave said to everybody, "We may get shot up."

"So what?" Bert said. "We're only human. Some heroes have to die."

"I didn't came a-purpose," K-K said. "And I sure want to get back in one piece."

"Selfish."

"Who ain't? Just respond to me that."

Crowds Mourn Queen

Crowds of Londoners, some of them using stands erected for June Coronation ceremonies, watch the funeral cortege of Queen Mary turn from the Mall. Crowds were packed deep along both sides of streets as the 85-year-old Queen's body was taken from her Marlborough House residence to Westminster Hall adjoining the Houses of Parliament. Westminster Hall the coffin was met by Queen Elizabeth II, Elizabeth the Queen Mother and Princess Margaret. — (CP from AP.)

Queen Mary To Final Rest In Historic Window Tomb

By ALAN HARVEY

WINDSOR, England (CP)—Queen Mary went to her final rest today in the tomb of 10 British monarchs.

In a simple burial service at St. George's, private chapel of the House of Windsor, the coffin of "Grandmother England" was slowly lowered through the chapel floor to rest temporarily in the chancel.

Later the coffin of the gentle queen, whose long life spanned the Victorian, Edwardian and Georgian periods, will be taken to the royal mausoleum to lie beside the coffin of her husband, George V.

Ten Sons There Also

In the same lonesome, originality built by George III, lie the bodies of four of the queen's sons —George VI, laid to rest 13 months ago, and the Duke of Kent, killed in a wartime air crash in Scotland in 1942.

At the climax of the service, the present Queen sprinkled earth on the coffin of her grandmother who did so much to school her for her royal duties.

The Queen then led the ladies of the Royal Family past the grave and made a gesture of obeisance to the coffin, which had been lowered beneath the chapel floor.

The funeral service was conducted by the archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, in the choir of the chapel which Edward III set aside in 1348 for knights of the Order of the Garter, Britain's most exalted order of chivalry.

Sing Favorite Hymns

Two of the Queen's favorite hymns were sung at the simple 45-minute service — "Abide With Me" and "Glorious Things of Thee Are Spoken."

The Duke of Windsor, eldest of Queen Mary's sons, appeared to show slight emotion.

Among the mourners were half a dozen kings and queens and leading members of foreign royalty, including King Baudouin of the Belgians, Queen Juliana of The Netherlands, Queen Frederika of Greece, and the Queen Mother of Iraq, Crown Prince Olat of Norway, Prince Bertil of Sweden, Prince Nicholas of Yugoslavia, Prince and Princess Felix of Hungary, Prince Axel of Denmark, Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse and the Crown Prince of Luxemburg.

Also in the congregation were great officers of state, leading members of the British cabinet, diplomatic representatives and high military officials.

Simple Service

The simple service, epilogue to the life which encompassed six reigns and saw the evolution of modern Britain, lasted under half an hour. After hymns the dean and by the congregation the organ then played the Dead March of Saul.

The sun streamed through the large stained glass windows of the chapel, home of six centuries of the oldest order of European chivalry.

The sunlight touched the richly-colored stalls of the Knights and Ladies of the Order of the Garter, to which Queen Mary was admitted in 1910.

With Queen Mary's death there now are only two remaining Ladies of the Garter—Queen Mother Elizabeth and Queen Juliana of The Netherlands. Both were present today.

Queen Mary's coffin, after resting first in the chancel, will be moved in a month or so to the double tomb where the remains of King George V lie. Nearby also lie the stead king, designed by Sir William Bird Dick, lies on the ledge of the tomb. It shows George in his uniform as admiral of the fleet. Two angels guard his crown and a lion lies at his feet.

Queen Mary's casket is brought to the tomb, another effigy, this in white marble, will be beside that of the king. Queen Mary's effigy also was carved by Sir William Reid Dick, and has been kept in Windsor Castle since 1938.

The Queen was the first to do personal obeisance in the final solemn moments of the service.

A moment later came the Duke of Windsor, who stood for silent seconds reflecting beside the opening in the floor of the chapel into which the body of his mother had been lowered.

Then he bowed deeply and walked out into the sunshine with shoulders erect.

Through the service, the Duke stood at the foot of his mother's coffin while the catafalque rested on the chancel floor. Behind him were the other royal dukes, the Duke of Edinburgh, the Duke of Gloucester and the Duke of Kent.

The Queen took an active part in the service. She stood nearest the coffin, in a place ordinarily reserved for a Knight of the Garter. At a nod from the archbishop of Canterbury she stepped forward as the casket was slowly lowering.

House Decides To Continue Theatres Act

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario legislature decided Monday to let one sleeping dog lie.

Premier Frost told Opposition leader Oliver that a section of the Theatres Act which Mr. Oliver had been questioning has worked well for 25 years. The House decided to continue it.

Mr. Oliver suggested revision of a section which would require municipalities to issue licences to theatres which had already been licensed by the provincial government. Mr. Oliver said the act conflicted with the Municipal Act which gives broad licensing powers to municipal governments.

Mr. Frost agreed that the Theatres Act did in fact take from the municipalities a power granted them under the Municipal Act, but said that provincial theatre standards were high enough for any municipality.

"Anyway," he said, "this appears not conflict that existed for 25 years. Why disturb something that has been working well for that period?"

Chesley to Vote On Sale of Beer

CHESLEY (CP) — This township for many years, will vote soon on the sale of beer in men's and women's beverage rooms.

Council Monday night decided on a plebiscite after the Chesley Canadian Legion branch requested it.

A May 1st rate of 60 mills, a five-mill increase over the 1952 rate, was struck. Chesley is 25 miles southwest of Owen Sound.

Silk Hat for Skipper

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Capt. W. E. Garrett of St. Catharines, master of the B. A. Peerless, today got a silk hat.

His vessel, one of the largest lumber on the Great Lakes, was first through the Welland ship canal for the season.

Canal traffic was reported heavy on this first day of navigation.

Man, Who Died at 100, Spent 53 Years of Life in Major Jails

LEEDS, England (CP) — Robert Woolridge, 100, who spent more than half of his life in jail and finally decided several years ago that crime doesn't pay, died today in a home for the aged here.

He said on his 100th birthday last month he spent 53 years in all the major jails in Britain and the United States.

He last appeared before a court in 1948, when he was 94, on a charge of attempted burglary. He was let off, because of his age, and finally decided that crime does not pay.

That ended a career which began when he was birched for stealing coal as a boy.

He said on his birthday he had stuck to a strict honor code of his own. He never stole from a child, never took objects of sentimental value, and never used violence in his crimes.

His wife and two sons were killed in the San Francisco earthquake in 1906.

Scotland Yard Grills Suspect In Stranglings

LONDON (CP) — John Reginald Christie,* Britain's most hunted man, was taken meekly by police today and grilled six hours about the grisly "murder house" strangling of six, and possibly seven, women.

Crowds of curious milled outside the police station in suburban Putney where Christie was brought for questioning by Scotland Yard's ace detectives.

Strolling on Street

The 53-year-old clerk, unshaven and shabbily dressed, was nearly nicked by an alert policeman who saw him strolling along the street in Putney suburb, near the Thames.

It was only five miles from the murder house in London's drab Notting Hill gate district where Christie lived before his disappearance a week ago.

The bodies of four women, including Christie's wife, were found sealed beneath the floor and walls of the house. The remains of two and possibly three others were found in the garden where police are still digging for possible other victims. The women had been strangled in radiatic sex orgies, Greatest Britain said.

Christie had been the object of the greatest manhunt in London since the days of Jack the Ripper more than 60 years ago.

Thomas Lane, police policeman who spotted him, stopped Christie, asked him to remove his hat and quickly recognized him from pictures widely-circulated throughout Britain.

He challenged him and Christie calmly walked to the local police station in Putney, Thames-side suburb not four miles from the neighborhood in Notting Hill where the shabby murder tenement stands.

Detectives hurried to the Putney station to question Christie on his knowledge of the grisly contents found in the house a week ago. Sleep in Trees

Police cordoned off the Notting Hill area early today after being told that Christie was seen sleeping in the back of a truck on a parking lot.

Earlier they were following a report that he might have gone to the north of England. Every available policeman in northwest London was switched to the district as officers closed in on the site.

But by the time the suspect was gone, only to be brought in by plainclothes Thomas Lodger.

Lodger spotted his man walking along the main shopping street, Upper Richmond road, in the Putney suburb in bright spring sunshine this morning at 10 a. m. Christie went along quietly.

Crowbar Father

As the news spread, a large crowd gathered outside the Putney police station. People jumped off buses, flocked out of nearby stores and houses hoping to catch a glimpse of the face which has stared, with a faint smile, from the front pages of every British country.

Detectives continued to rip up the old tenement searching for more hidden remains. Three young prostitutes believed to be prostitutes were found bound, strangled and sealed up behind wall-paper in a wall recess a week ago.

Christie's wife, Ethel, was found in a shallow boxwork, also strangled.

The decomposed remains of two — possibly three—more bodies were found buried in the back yard.

County Home Sale to Goodman Given Approval by Council; Large Expenditure to Be Made

City council yesterday gave approval to the government of Ontario which would turn the former county home and approximately five acres of land over to the Belleville Properties Ltd. for a sum of $27,000.

The new owners, headed by Sam Goodman of Toronto and Belleville intend to renovate the present building at a cost of $150,000 and build motel units costing $165,000.

Final approval of the sale of the county home property did not go through, however, without considerable discussion on part of members by two of the men who were in the field for purchase of the property.

Two weeks ago the committee recommendation for the sale of the property was unanimously accepted by council.

When the recommendation misunderstanding with respect to authorizing signing of the agreement of sale was tabled Mayor Haig opened the discussion by stating that there had been in the possibility of a beverage license being granted for the property some time in the future.

He said tribute to the special committee appointed to consider the sale of the county home property, which he said still stood at the city's $165,000 cost.

Ultimately the only source of sale for the property was from the hotel or motel purposes, the noted.

Against Agreement

He did not agree with the agreement of sale for the reason that there was nothing to prevent an application for a beverage license. He said he was personally opposed to a licence at the present location "now or at any time." He would oppose a licence because of the proximity of the new firehall, the hospital and the new housing development. He was opposed to a licence on a motel site.

ONE DIED IN FLAMES

TOLEDO, Spain (AP) — A mental institution, built in 1483, was destroyed by fire Monday. Two inmates died and 150 were evacuated with 351 others, shut himself in his cell and died of the flames, officials said.

Third Explosion In Spring Test Series Heard

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—The third atomic explosion of the spring test series flashed bright in the pre-dawn sky over this desert resort today.

The blast, however, was not as brilliant as in the two earlier 1953 shots.

As usual, the atomic energy commission gave no indication of the type of nuclear device detonated at its proving ground 75 miles northwest of here.

In contrast to the first two blasts, on preceding Tuesdays, no troops participated in today's exercise, latest in a series to be climaxed by the firing of the first atomic cannon.

Observers here were puzzled by the fact that five minutes after the explosion, the familiar mushroom cloud was to be seen rising over the Yucca Flat test site.

The most previous time the fast-rising cloud became quickly visible from here.

Air force planes again flew over the proving ground area in maneuvres primarily designed to train crews to keep calm during an atomic explosion.

Automobiles and animals, the former for civilian defence experiments, the latter for bio-medical studies, were exposed to the blast.

A Handsome Bier For Tavern Death

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—A century-old "coffin register" owned by an undertaker records that in 1862 a local resident "was smothered to death by the foul air in a beer vault." He was given a stylish funeral with the best hearse and a team of horses—and a local brewery paid the bill.

HOWE SAYS WHEAT SALE SAFE WITH, WITHOUT PACT

Still Hopes for Favorable Outcome at Conference

By GLEN CLEMENTS

OTTAWA (CP)—Trade Minister Howe is confident Canada can continue to sell wheat on the markets of the world "at reasonably satisfactory" prices—with or without a new international wheat agreement.

He said in the Commons Monday Canada still hopes for a "favorable outcome" in discussions for a new agreement now being held in Washington. He refrained from direct comment on the negotiations, but said Canada will not be "really satisfied" as regards prices.

The government did say a new agreement would benefit both exporting and importing countries. But if "mutually satisfactory terms cannot be agreed upon, we can, as we have done in the past, sell our wheat successfully without an agreement."

The minister said he does not mean that "the world will beat a path to our door clamoring for our wheat or that we shall always get the prices we would like to get."

Will Require Wheat

"What I do believe is that importing countries will require wheat in substantial and growing quantities over the years to come and that Canada is in a good position to get a share of the market sufficient to dispose of our available surpluses at reasonably satisfactory prices."

He spoke as the Commons gave third and final reading to a measure establishing the Wheat Board as the provisions of the Canadian Wheat Board Act under which the board handles the marketing of wheat, oats and barley. Its powers are to be extended next July 31.

Endorse Extension

All parties endorsed extension of the Wheat Board's operations. A Social Credit spokesman, Robert Fair (SC-Battle River, suggested the board should be made permanent, but Mr. Howe said the government "does not contemplate now" in a position to decide from time to time if there should be any change in marketing grain.

Body of Man, Weighted Down Found in Creek

MONTREAL (CP) — The body of a man, shot through the head, and found weighted down with rock at a stream near St. Mathieu de Laprairie, has been "almost positively identified" as that of Jean Lefebvre, 28, police said today.

Mr. Lefebvre had a long criminal record and was known here as "Strongarm Jean."

The body was found, weighed down by a 250-pound stone, at the bottom of a creek at 11 a.m. today, 15 miles from Montreal. There was a bullet hole in the forehead, police said.

Police said they believe the victim was shot Friday night or Saturday morning and then thrown in the creek.

Thieves Take Mink Coats Worth $25,000

MONTREAL (CP)—Police reported today seven mink coats, valued at $25,000, were stolen from a west-end furrier last week-end by thieves who also got away with $7,974 in cash, post-dated cheques and bonds. It was believed the thieves hid in the store Saturday. They took the most valuable coats and left scores of less expensive numbers.

BOSTON (AP) — The worst river was rising about an inch an floods in New England since 1936 hour before dawn in the New appeared to be easing in most Hampshire area hardest hit by the sections today but the second flood flood waters during the week-end. in four days threatened the Ossipee area of New Hampshire.

Emergency crews stood by to evacuate scores of families endangered by rising flood waters and Maine as fears were expressed that a flood-battered dam on Lake Sebago at Naples—Canada Falls, Ft. Hi, might not hold. The bearcamp

Some 1,200 persons still were not allowed to return to their homes at Mexico, Me., although the Swift and Androscoggin rivers were well below their flood crests. More than 1,000 persons fled their homes area from Bilderford and Saco, Me. The Saco river still was out of bounds as it was calming down at its headwaters.

Gen. Clarke Wants Reds' End-War Offer In Writing

Requests Detailed Version Of Chou En-Lai Proposals

By WEBB McKINLEY

TOKYO (AP)—A wary United Nations command told the Communists today to get down to business if their startling new offers to end the Korean fighting are sincere.

Gen. Mark Clark, UN Far East commander, said he would agree to reopen the suspended armistice talks if the Reds agree to details of exchanging sick and wounded war prisoners.

The UN in effect told the Reds to come up with an official, detailed version of Monday night's Peiping proposal by Red China's premier. Chou En-lai, to compromise the standoff on voluntary repatriation of war prisoners.

Broke Up Talks

The unyielding UN demand that Peiping have the choice of returning to their native lands was the only issue blocking an armistice and it broke up the talks last Oct. 8.

Chou offered to send home those Peiping says want to go back and send the others to a neutral state where both sides can talk it over with them.

But he didn't say what the UN would do to hear whether, even there, the prisoners would have the right to say. For the UN, that had been a must.

Contained in Letter

Clark's proposal was contained in a letter delivered to the Reds at Panmunjom in Korea.

It was an answer to a Communist proposal Saturday to swap sick prisoners and reopen the talks. Clark originally had suggested the trade Feb. 22.

In his letter today, Clark proposed that a liaison group from both sides—each headed by a general or an admiral—make the exchange arrangements.

After that is done, he said, negotiations for resuming truce talks could follow "as a second order of business."

Receives Letter

Red liaison officers received the letter in a two-minute meeting and gave no hint when there would be an answer or when Chou's new proposal might be delivered.

Clark asked that there be a brief visit two hours before his letter was delivered.

He told reporters he was ready to give careful and sympathetic consideration to Chou's proposal once it is made official. Until then, Clark said, there was no comment.

The world waited to see if the latest Red moves are truly the beginning of peace—or another blind alley.

Ontario House To be Prorogued On Thursday

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario legislature will be prorogued Thursday at 5 p.m.

The House almost cleaned up its list of government bills Monday as 84 items dealt with in 6½ hours. At adjournment, Premier Frost said the House will sit at 11 a.m. Wednesday and continue through the day and possibly into the night session.

The house will resume Thursday at 10 a.m. to clear final items.

The House will not sit today on account of St. Patrick's Day.

Club-Wielding Police Smash Communist Riots

By WEBB McKINLEY

Thousands of demonstrators, including 1,000 in Rome alone, were taken into custody in new riots Monday night. Scores were injured. But there was only one reported fatality—a policeman killed when his riot jeep overturned en route to a demonstration.

Angry Communists resorted to violence after their one-hour to 24-hour general strike, in protest against Premier Alcide de Gasperi's new tactics designed to keep his government in power, had largely failed.

The law, passed during a bitter brawl in the Senate Sunday, gives the party or bloc winning 65 percent of the popular votes at least 65 per cent of the parliamentary seats.

Disorders Lack Steam

The Communist disorders lacked the steam of similar outbursts just a few days ago, but nevertheless appeared to be the most serious since last January.

Mario Scelba, tough interior minister, declared the "situation is very satisfactory."

Four victims of the riots were hospitalized. One is a photographer Mario Tortial and three other newspaper photographers who were clubbed by police and taken into custody temporarily for taking pictures of the violence. All are Italian citizens.

Other riots were reported in Turin, Reggio Emilia, Modena, Venice, Verona, Milan and a dozen other places.

In the canal city of Venice, demonstrators fled into a church for refuge when police broke up a forbidden meeting and injured several.

Three Babies Suffocate Within Hour of Each Other

TORONTO (CP)—Three babies suffocated within hour of each other in Toronto district today. In each case, they had been sleeping in their parents' bed with pillows, said.

Firemen made unsuccessful attempts to revive the infants with inhalators.

The babies were Susan MacDonnell, five months; James Baxter, 11 months; and Alan McDowall, four weeks.

Child Drowns In Deep Well On College Street

Harry James Dewey, three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dewey, 172 1-2 College Street East, lost his life early this morning, when he fell into a well on his parents' property and drowned in eight feet of water.

The little boy had been playing near a small creek, while his mother attended to household duties. Discovering her son playing near the water, the woman rushed over and took him to higher ground. Missing him again a few minutes later she began searching once more.

It was at this point Mrs. Dewey noticed the top from the well had been removed. Rushing across to the open well she spotted the little rubber boots floating upon the surface of the well-water.

Her mother then left to neighbors and spread the alarm and James Gardiner and William McKay managed to drag the boy from the well by means of a rake and spear tied together. Firemen applied the resuscitator with Dr. F. R. Ross in attendance but the child failed to respond. Dr. J. Rushbrook Scott, district coroner, pronounced the boy dead.

Mr. and Mrs. Dewey have two other children, Billy, seven, and Laura, five.

Brokerage Firm Now Occupying New Quarters

The Biggar and Crawford brokerage firm, formerly located at 35 Bridge Street East, Monday moved into new quarters at 16 Bridge St. E.

Many improvements have been added to the new location, Manager John Ryan explained to the Ontario Intelligencer today. The completely-redecorated office features light green walls and a shade which has been scientifically proven to ease eyestrain. The ceiling is white and acoustically sound-absorbing. The floors are the modern linoleum tile.

Mr. Ryan's office, and that of D. P. Ross, statistician and consultant, are enclosed in birch plywood.

A feature of the office is the new "ticker" machine, which resembles a television set with its screen and eye-level. The seating arrangement affords a good view of the machine, as well as the new quotation board and two bulletin boards. The office is also equipped with excellent washroom facilities.

Free parking spots are available as the lane beside the building leads to the river front parking area.

New Executive For Chamber Is Elected

Trenton (Special)—The financial statement read by treasurer Ed Hagerman at the Chamber of Commerce annual meeting last night showed that the organization had a balance of $95 in the bank. L. Wallley moved that the statement be adopted.

President Fred Parker announced that part time secretary had been hired at salary of $1,200 a year. Employing retired railroader Herb Smith set with the approval of all those present.

It was announced that of the 25 or 30 industries in the town only about 6 of them belonged to the businessmen's group, and provided approximately 20 per cent of the income for the organization.

Fortunately Ken Allore was up early this morning because he was just in time to notice a fire caught in the roof of his house at 19 Wagg Street. A spark from a bonfire was blamed for slight damage to shingles and a trip for two fire trucks.

NEW ORGAN READY

The new $16,000 pipe organ recently installed in St. Peter's Church will be played for the first time at Easter services this Sunday. The instrument obtained through donations from church members, is being given a final tuning check-up.

Bells Installed

On Sunday of this week carolonic bells installed in King Street United Church recently will be dedicated at the Easter Sunday service.

The bells chiming out their inspiring reverent message have already prompted considerable favorable comment. They are in memory of the late Mrs. N. J. McNair and Mr. J. A. Sutcliffe.

IN MEMORIAM

COLDEN. — In ever loving memory of my dear mother, Hannah Pauline, passed away March 31, 1945.

Gone, dear Mother, gone forever,
We now no more smiling face,
But you left us to remember
That we must meet you in place.
A happy face we long remember
How sweet the memory still
But that heart is at a standstill
The world can never fill.

Sadly missed by her only daughter, Mrs. L. D. Morris, 72 Carlton Road. M31

DERMOTT. — In loving memory of dear husband and father, Thomas Dermott, who died March 31, 1949.

We watched and suffered, we heard and saw
But all we could do was just stand and pray.

For when the time came we suffered the most
For we had to see him go
Sadly but peacefully he went through.

CLARK. — In loving memory of my dear wife, Annie May Clark, who passed away four years ago, March 31, 1949.

Four years have passed and gone
Since we loved so well
We think of you each day
And talk of you as well
With Jesus Christ to shield,
Your fairest place he'll give
May wither and decay,
For those who sleep and those who serve
Shall never fade away.

Proudly remembered over remembered by husband and son Maynard. M31

CLARK. — In loving memory of my dear friend, Mary Clark, who passed away March 31, 1949.

Four years have passed and gone
Since we lost our friend
But love and fond memories ever linger
Never remembered by Mrs. Conway. M31

SHORNES. — In proud and loving memory of our darling son and brother, Private Lance Bombardier W.O. Kenneth Shornes and the members of his platoon grew with an active service March 31, 1944.

Proudly remembered and bravely he died
Freely their all they gave to stem the tide
Of wickedness and greed.
What they gave
Their youth, their dreams, their future days
No more had they left.
Bravely they offered all that we might live,
When least expected, death doth give
No hand on shoulder
The fair, the healthy and the strong,
This certain take a liking
There was a flower too tender, sweet
For this sad earth
To bloom and wear the thorns of sin and care.
Jesus took Earl from the midst of sin and vice,
To bloom with Mom in Paradise.
Memories live on though mine years have flown
Sadly missed, ever loved,
—Too dearly loved, too sadly missed to be ever forgotten. Still loved and remembered by Mom, Dad, sister Frances, Fred, Nancy and Kenny. M31

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP)—Golds stood out above a weak stock market in forenoon trading today.

Industrials, western oils and base metals continued Monday's decline.

Uraniums regained strength after opening losses but continued weak. Nesbitt Labine was a leading loser. New Brunswick base metals were slightly lower. Northern Ontario rare metals were mixed.

Senior golds gained and juniors showed a small majority of gains.

Industrials weakened on the list, manufacturing companies, mechanical issues and papers. Textiles and refining oils also slipped.

Most western oils traded lower.

Higher-priced base metals weakened slightly and lower prices in other issues confirmed the trend. Cassiar, Campbell Chibougamau and East Sullivan showed losses ranging to 30 cents.

James Kennedy Given 4 Years On Six Charges

James Kennedy, 24, of this city was given four years in penitentiary when he appeared for sentence before Magistrate T. Y. Wills on six charges.

Kennedy had pleaded guilty last week to two charges of breaking and entry with intent, two charges of shopbreaking and one charge each of housekeeping and theft. He was given four years concurrent on each charge.

Kennedy was arrested in Toronto on a warrant by Belleville police department and when apprehended had stolen articles in his possession. He was charged by Toronto police with shop breaking and sentenced to three years in penitentiary.

DOLLAR RATE

MONTREAL (CP)—The United States dollar was at a discount of 1 2-32 per cent in terms of Canadian funds, the Bank of Canada reported at noon today. Monday's rate was at 98 5-32 cents. Pound sterling $2.76 5-16, against $2.76 3-8.

SCOTLAND YARD

Pathologists, meanwhile, were examining a find of bones dug up from the garden of Rillington for mer home to determine whether they had constituted a second victim.

As Christie was picked up, pretty girl policewomen in old duty clothes stalked London's back streets in an effort to lure another stranger, believed by police to be a sex maniac.

The little clerk had been last seen in the Notting Hill neighborhood since March 24, several days before the first gruesome find was made in the back yard he had occupied for 15 years.

A prospective tenant for the apartment who lived on an upper floor of the house broke through several thicknesses of wallpaper over an alcovehead discovered a body. Police found more bones on ses there, another—that of Christie's daughter—was under the floorboards of the living room. Other remains of at least two other women in the house.

The four women found inside the house had been strangled, and pieces of bones remained of the other victims.

Peculiar Type

Doctors who examined the four identifiable bodies said the women had been subjected to "unconscionable outbursts of passion" by the slayer. Others described him as a middle-aged man of abnormal sex tendencies who practised sadism of "a peculiar type."

These four, the pathologists said, died about a month apart, with the last killing late in February. Police suspected that the killer might have been impelled by some weird type of "moon madness," geared to the appearance of the full moon.

Some 40,000 policemen took part in the search for Christie, the bigfeet manhunter ever to be staged. He crawled through the East End in 1888 and knifed eight streetwalkers—never to be caught.

Monday night, a neighbor, Mrs. Thereze Evans, told police that Mrs. Christie on Sunday watching from a street corner while the police were digging up the garden of his house.

The remaining tenants of the house were forced to vacate during the week-end by a month again, four of Jamaican families lived in the three-storey house. Earlier two of them said they had had enough and moved out voluntarily.

New Quinte Area High School Debenture Issue Lacks Single Vote for Approval by Council

Although city council voted 11-3 in favor of issuing the required debentures, technically we are still holding up construction of the new high school proposed by the Bay of Quinte High School Area.

Yesterday council members went through the motions of giving the first and second readings to the by-law authorizing issuing of debentures up to $875,000 for the construction of the school. However, the 11-3 vote did not give the by-law the necessary three-quarter vote required on a money vote.

At yesterday's meeting one council member, Alderman Calgan Duffy, was absent, and the matter can be brought back to the city council meeting next week.

Mr. Seldon said high hopes that area board will be fortunate in that their application to the Department of Education for grants has been approved as under a recent policy adopted by the department no grant is paid on gymnasiums. The local board will receive $50,000 per classroom auditorium. The department grant will be a total of $300,000 per classroom, to a maximum of $600,000.

Township Share

The city of Belleville and the municipalities of Thurlow, Tyendinaga and Sidney township will share the cost of constructing the new school. Pupils from Sidney township and from Frankford village attend at the Belleville Collegiate. The other municipalities are not members of the area and have to purchase their education.

Sidney township has agreed to continue purchasing its secondary school education from the Bay of Quinte High School area during the life of the debentures. Signing of this agreement was one of the technicalities holding up approval of the debentures issue by the Belleville city council.

There was little discussion by council yesterday when the debenture by-law was presented.

Public School Request

Coming with the presentation of the debenture by-law for the new high school was the request from the public school board for initial approval by council for the expenditure of up to $367,000 to give the provision of additional public school accommodation.

Ald Tice wanted to know if council could refuse the request and place the matter before the people.

Mayor A. M. Haig noted the by-law for the high school was before us and one of the participating municipalities. "This city has more than once indicated its approval of the area high school and been approved as under a recent policy adopted by the department no grant is paid on gymnasiums. The local board will receive $50,000 per classroom auditorium. The department grant will be a total of $300,000 per classroom, to a maximum of $600,000.

Fire Committee Recommendation For New All-Purpose Panel Truck Turned Down by City Council

For the second time in two weeks city council yesterday turned back a fire committee recommendation to purchase a chassis for a new all-purpose panel truck for use by the local fire department.

In his annual report Chief Gerald Vance recommended the purchase of another small pumper to be stationed at the new Dundas street station. The panel truck type "disaster" truck for carrying various types of equipment, including resuscitator, not seeing the way clear to purchase the pumper in the present budget year, recommended the purchase of the panel truck. Two weeks ago this was turned back by the council for further consideration. It was felt that the pumper was needed in the east end and that precedence over the panel truck.

No Mention Made of Pumper

Again yesterday the fire committee recommended the acquisition for the purchase of a small-type panel truck but made not on mention was made of the additional pumper.

Ald. Harold L. Hyde, as chairman of the finance committee, pointed out that there was only last year's budget for the purchase of a panel truck and that the $2,000 deered price of $3,282 was too small to debenture separately.

"I am not criticizing the committee, Ald. Tice said the matter thoroughly. "The fire chief feels the department needs the panel truck," he said.

Alderman Keegan was not so sure the panel truck was needed. "Isn't it possible to do without it for a year?"

He stressed the need for economy and pointed out that Foster Ward was still asking for fire protection. There were many buildings in the Foster Ward and yet fire trucks could be blocked out by the railway trains when going to the scene of a fire.

He suggested that some piece of equipment be kept south of the C.N.R.

Disagree With Statement

Alderman Tice disagreed that Foster Ward was being neglected. "Foster Ward has fire trucks not being able to get across the tracks because of trains is very remote," he said. No area in the city is being neglected.

Alderman Keegan wanted to know if there was any thought given to the purchase of additional pumper recommended by the fire chief.

Chairman Countryman replied that this had been discussed by the committee but it was felt this was not the time. It was felt it would be advantageous to purchase the panel truck.

Alderman McNevin could not see the need for the panel truck, while the chairman felt it was.

Referring to last week's recommendation Mayor Haig noted that the fire committee at least a declaration of intention by the committee as to whether the additional pumper was needed.

This attitude was taken by Alderman Keegan who said he was his understanding that the panel truck was to be used to take equipment to a fire ground and for other purpose not calling for fire trucks, and that a pumper would be all that was required and that additional pumper would be available for the pumper.

Thought Good Business

Ald. Reid said as a fire committee member he thought it against the purchase of a new pumper but the panel truck, and the purchase of the panel truck at this time was good business.

Mayor Haig remarked that there should be a declaration of intention by the committee as to purchase of the pumper, and not purchase the panel truck and only because one was available.

He said he resented the fact that the council in the city had city hall door before it was purchased. "I am not criticizing the committee but I resent the inference that the fire committee had not done as it had been asked. "Last week Ald. Tice brought this matter. This is our report and the recommendation is that we purchase the panel truck.

Season in Full Swing

PORT ARTHUR (CP)—Navigation on the Great Lakes is in full swing during the week-end. Six grain carriers arrived and two large carriers, the Sir James Dunn and the Cornelaire, left their winter berths here.

The harbor was officially opened Friday and since then a large north wind has cleared ice from the northern section of Thunder Bay. Everyone lighthers a clear run to Fort Arthur.

COUNTY HOME

He said, when he was approached by Mr. Yanover regarding placing a tender for the purchase of the property he had told Mr. Yanover he was opposed to license on that site. "Mr. Yanover had made his offer on that basis," he said.

With council members invited to express their opinion on the matter Alderman Tice assumed that any request for a change in licence would have to be approved by the people. He noted that the property was in the East Hastings district, which required a vote of the people. He also felt that the proposed improvements should be completed before a deed is granted.

Alderman Chas. Hyde said he agreed entirely with the Mayor. "There should be an agreement or a licence.

"All this reference to a licence is merely a 'talking point,' it is up to the people to decide whether there will every be a licence there," said Alderman McNevin.

Sewage Disposal

Alderman Neil Bedell said Belleville was growing and with the present council he did not see any right to attempt to rule whether or not there could be an application for a licence. "Belleville is in need of more sewage disposal facilities and I will support the sale," he said.

Alderman Temple said he preferred seeing the purchase price paid now and the deed issued later over on completion of the required improvements and conversion. He had approved of the sale two weeks ago and would do so again.

Alderman Thomas said he had approved of the sale two weeks ago but that he had done so on the understanding that there was no outside knowledge of the tender prices. "Since then I find the amounts had been discussed in committee and then a third tender was handed in. I do not even know the prices before they were opened," he charged.

Said Serious Charge

"That is a serious charge," Ald. Bradford said, a member of the committee of the whole. "If the tenders were known the knowledge of this he should say so."

Alderman Neil Keegan as industrial committee member denied they knew anything of prices until the tenders were all opened and presented to council.

Ald. Countryman, property committee chairman also declared that he had been no knowledge of the final tender prices.

At a previous committee meeting when the sale of the county home property was being discussed Mr. Yanover had made an offer of $15,000 for the property.

He was told that his offer was not high enough and it was suggested if he went in time Chairman Countryman said. He went in time and Mr. Yanover's second proposal was for the city to lease down the old building and clean up the site. He did not know how much the city would realize but of this he was sure.

"I don't know how Mr. Yanover's second offer of $20,000 got out."

Refers to Agreement

Referring to the agreement of sale Ald. Countryman said he thought it should contain a forfeiture clause. He had been told later given to understand that there was no necessity to do so as contained in a sale agreement it is provided for the owner to raise money.

He said if there has been any thought that the sale of tender prices had affected the bids he would recommend that they be to ask for new tenders.

He felt the lack of any reference in the agreement to an application for a beverage licence was the reason why he would be decided by the people.

Did Not Complicate

Speaking briefly to council, Mr. Yanover said he was in an embarrassing position as the successful bidder but at the same time believed he had a justifiable complaint.

He said when he had approached the city regarding the purchase of the property, the mayor had told him he was opposed to any licence at this location. "I naturally assumed this was the feeling of council and I made my offer on that basis," he said.

Mr. Yanover said he was not going to apply for a licence then I could obtain one.

Claiming that "figures had been bandied around," Mr. Yanover said that he had been contemplating an injunction against the sale. He pointed out that his offer definitely stated he did not intend to apply for a licence.

"Can I find out if all this procedure is tied up with an effort to have us apply for a licence in Belleville?" asked Alderman Keegan. He said he would like to if such was the case, he had no idea of it.

Had No Knowledge Claim

Mr. Jake Goodman said he had been told by city hall officials that he had any knowledge of Mr. Yanover's offer of $20,000.

"If Mr. Yanover is imputing that we found out his offer and told Mr. Goodman of it, that is not so," he said. "When you try to sell other you do not bind it by $7,000.

Collegiate Auditorium Packed For First Civil Defence Meeting To Hear Ontario Director

A huge crowd, that packed every corner of the Belleville Collegiate Auditorium for the first civil defence mass meeting ever held in Belleville last night was warned that, in the event of war, not all national defence should be concentrated against the atom bomb.

The man who gave this warning was Major J. A. Adams, civil defence director for Ontario. He was introduced by Dr. R. T. Potter, civil defence co-ordinator for Belleville.

"We must not underestimate the value of all weapons used in the Second World War," Major Adams declared. The aerial bombs of that era including incendiary bombs, could be mass produced and cause great havoc that fact remains a fact."

The atom bomb, the speaker explained, is extremely expensive and requires many critical materials that are in fairly short supply.

"So you may be sure," he told his audience, "that any community that is hit by an atom bomb is of great military value."

Special Targets

Pointing to such Ontario-centres as Toronto, Hamilton, Oshawa, Niagara Falls, Welland, Windsor, Sarnia and Sault Ste. Marie as the most likely victims of atomic attack, Major Adams stressed the need for the setting up of organizations of civil defence to cope with such a calamity.

"Any community in Ontario," he said, "possesses resources of its own capable of comprehending and containing the results that would occur from an atomic attack. It is necessary, therefore, that every community in the province be in a position to give mobile and immediate support to any centre singled out for bombing."

Dangerous Reasoning

The speaker rejected the attitude of certain people who felt that "it can't happen here." This, he said, was dangerous reasoning.

"Modern war is no respecter of civilians," he declared. "The surprise element is of vast importance. Never in the long since passed when gentlemanly declarations of war preceded before a shot was fired."

He said that nothing else in this way. As a result of the monsoon creek of the terrific forward push, air is sucked into this pocket and knocks down anything that has survived the first impact.

"The blast phase is radioactivity," the major said. Again taking as his example Hiroshima he said that about 15,000 persons in the area died, a great many of them lethally.

A fact not generally known, the speaker went on, was the power of the bomb when set off under water. Such a bomb set off in the area of 40 per cent of the lives lost as the result would have been lost in the event of an A-bomb attack. It is estimated that if such an explosion had existed in Hiroshima, the first, "A" bomb dropped there could have been saved."

Efficient fire control, he declared, was one of the most important branches of any civil defence program. He pointed out that during the last war 80 per cent of the bomb damage done in the United Kingdom came from fire which followed bombings.

"Medical facilities must be greatly expanded," he said. "Even hospitals already overcrowded and doctors and nurses far from adequate in number to the results of bombings becomes increasingly terrifying.

Turning to the bomb itself, Major Adams estimated that if such a bomb burst 2,000 feet above the city hall in Toronto at a busy time of the day, 20,000 to 30,000 lives would be killed, it can be seen what destruction an explosion of this kind would wreak in Belleville when destruction is absolute for one-half mile.

Earthquake Fear

The main reason large buildings in Japan and Kamakura were not obliterated, Major Adams explained, was due to the fact that their base had been built to withstand earthquake shock. No structures in the Belleville area were built on this eventuality in mind.

The explosion of an atom bomb has three distinct phases, the speaker pointed out. First is the heat flash, which produces an tremendous amount of thermo energy. While except fragments are never so far released on the amount of heat generated by the explosion, scientists have admitted that at a point one mile away from the blast the temperature has "dropped to 4,500 degrees fahrenheit. This is tremendously powerful fire problem.

In a city of any great population density, he said, therefore certain that there would be 30,000 victims and countless others with varying degrees of burns. These facts, it is pointed out, immediately, Major Adams said. As a result, the medical and hospital problems would be almost insoluble.

"The second phase of an atom bomb explosion," the speaker said, came with the blast which followed the heat flash. This is unlike any explosion any soldier of the past two wars has ever experienced. It is almost like a of cyclonic proportions multiplied by hundreds. It knocks down an air pressure with a sort of hurricane effect."

Veterans Greeted

This forward push, he explained, is the force which flattens everything else in its way. As a result of the monsoon creek of the terrific forward push, air is sucked into this pocket and knocks down anything that has survived the first impact.

"The blast phase is radioactivity," the major said. Again taking as his example Hiroshima he said that about 15,000 persons in the area died, a great many of them lethally.

Efficient fire control, he declared, was one of the most important branches of any civil defence program. He pointed out that during the last war 80 per cent of

HOWE SAYS

At the start of the sitting Revenue Minister McCann announced a handsome new old-age security policy on television.- He said it may not be the last word, and more stations are allowed to operate in the near area.

Wheat Extension

Agriculture Minister Gardiner announced a two-year extension to March 31, 1955—of the government's butter stabilization program by which the difference between daily production periods and then recent the price of butter in the months of winter shortage. The wholesale floor will not be changed—at 58 cents per pound at Montreal and 57 cents at Vancouver.

The House, in a flurry of activity, passed legislation implementing tariff and excise tax changes made in the budget.

Can Be Used

The treasury board bill, besides extending the life of the board, provides that unclaimed balances in Canada Savings Bonds, after a six-year dormant period, be used at the government's discretion for the benefit of producers.

Mr. Howe said he would favor a suggestion by G. M. Ferrie (Markham) that the money be invested in government bonds and the interest used to set up scholarships at Prairie universities for the sons and daughters of farmers.

However, he said, most members seemed to have other ideas and the matter will be left in abeyance in a special fund until the best use for it can be found.

M. J. Coldwell, CCF leader, said he hoped there would be a new international wheat agreement with satisfactory prices. He hoped importing nations would realize that farm costs had been drastically increased.

Welcomes Extension

Mr. Fair, speaking for the Social Credit party, also welcomed the extension of the board's life. But he disagreed with the government's policy of selling wheat to markets and renewed claims that Prairie producers have been subsidizing Canadian consumers through the linking of domestic wheat prices to export prices.

Douglas Harkness (PC-Calgary East) said the great majority of farmers are in favor of the wheat board.

He suggested more producer representation on the board, either through appointment of trade commissioners or by establishment of producer boards at the markets and more power than the existing advisory body.

QUEEN MARY

From an attendant holding a silver bowl, she took a bit of earth from the garden of Frogmore House where Queen Mary spent most of the happiest years of her long life.

Three times she reached out over the flower-covered casket and three times she dropped the earth—"Earth to earth, ashes to ashes, and dust to dust." Then the flowers covering the casket place beside Queen Mother Elizabeth, Princess Margaret and Mary, the Princess Royal—Queen Mary's It was a service of strict formality and of great beauty such as Queen Mary doubtless would have chosen herself. It followed in general the funeral service of the Anglican church as laid down in the Book of Common Prayer.

There was no sermon, and the archbishop of Canterbury alone taking active part, the dean of Windsor.

The catafalque was at the identical spot at which the coffin of Queen Mary's father rested 43 years ago.

As the coffin were only the flowers and wreaths of Queen Mary's children and immediate members of her family.

Queen Mary had many thousands of other floral tributes but may be crowded into any churchyard. She said on to a great and colorful expanse of the green lawns which slope upward to the chapel.

A mound of red roses in fact that the simplest of the bouquets were given the most prominent place.

At the main entrance of the chapel they were heaped together in mounds, little handful of violets and many giant bunches of regimente-nots. They were such bouquets as children might have picked and many were from obscure friends of the old queen.

A number of royal representatives of continental royal families, in addition to the full brigade of the garter, many following carrying the printed order of the service.

Several of the royal visitors included Archbishop Spellman of Roman Catholic style. At the conclusion of the service at which the British Royal Family had done its obeisance, they came up slowly in single file to the catafalque for a courtly fashion and the women curtsied low. Then the coffin of Queen Mary was lowered to the vaults below.

After the royal families came the other distinguished persons who had been invited to attend Queen Mary.

At the head of this line was Prime Minister Churchill with Mrs. Churchill.

The service was of a private character, but an effort was made to bring many of Queen Mary's older friends represented among the mourners.

There were bent old men and feeble women, and many proudly wore decorations which for 50 years they had received from Queen Victoria and Edward VII.

Among the mourners was Oscar Humfrey, 78, who was born in the room Mary and her husband.

Two former governors-general of Canada were prominent places among the mourners. They were Lord Alexander and Lord Tweedsmuir.

Lord Athlone, who will be 79 in April, came back from his South African holiday, accompanied by Princess Alice, when he heard of the Queen's death.

Canada Represented

Canada was also represented in the procession of the funeral coach. Acting as honorary pallbearer was Lt.-Col. J. N. Gordon, Canadian representative of the Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, reserve regiment from London to which he is a black bearse early today, unaccompanied through the silent, deserted streets from Paddington to Westminster Hall. The body had been brought from Sandringham. Mourners filed past in final homage since Sunday.

SHARING THE TAX DOLLAR

Along with many another urban municipality in Canada, Belleville has known the cost of rapid expansion and population growth over a short period. In the 10-year census period between 1941-51 the urban population of Canada had risen by 38 per cent. From a statistical viewpoint the figure may be cited with pride but those municipalities which have shared in this new growth find little to cheer about.

The sore point is emphasized in some recent figures out of Ottawa. In the period between 1939 and 1951, in terms of what the statisticians call, constant dollars, municipal revenues increased from $281 million to $404 millions. This is far less than the proportionate increase which should have been derived from the growth in population.

More significant from the viewpoint of the municipal taxpayer is that in the same period federal government revenues have increased sevenfold, while provincial revenues more than doubled in terms of constant dollars.

Ranking junior in the field of government, the municipalities get the lean share of the tax dollar. Yet the municipalities must provide the simple but essential amenities of community life for the bulk of the population. And some homes for more citizens in the urban community mean new roads, water and sewer services, schools and hospitals, fire and police protection, expanded welfare and general services. It is certainly true that it costs an average of $2,000 to establish such services for each new home.

All these factors add up to the penalty paid by the municipal taxpayer for the new and rapid period of growth in Canada. He gets the least part of the tax dollar and pays the lion's share. In Ontario, at least, the provincial treasury of late has been considerably swung toward a fairer adjustment of the tax burden. But surely there is a day of reckoning to come with Ottawa.

The way cannot much longer be enjoyed when a federal-provincial-municipal conference is brought together to face this vital problem of the distribution of tax revenues, and a realistic formula of sharing them is worked out.

COLD WAR AND CHINOOK WINDS

It is well, in the atmosphere of the chinook winds which have been wafting across the cold war scene since the passing of Stalin, that the hard-headed realists behind the scenes in the Western capitals are still tending to their knitting.

A few days earlier we commented on a report from Washington in which the foremost atomic experts of the United States had found that by a conservative appraisal of all available facts the Soviet Union had gained a decided advantage in offensive potential for atomic war and that U.S. defences were dangerously weak. Now from London comes another study of U.S.S.R. power which was presented to the House of Commons by J. P. L. Thomas, British First Lord of the Admiralty.

Fifty years ago the entire Russian fleet was sunk or destroyed by the Japanese and not since that time has Russia been considered a naval power. Today, Mr. Thomas disclosed, Russia is a naval power and a formidable one.

The U.S.S.R.R is already possessed of a navy second only to the United States, he declared, and is building more cruisers than all the North Atlantic Treaty Powers put together. The Soviet Navy has about 20 powerful cruisers, more than 100 destroyers and more than 350 submarines.

The British admiralty chief in the Commons assured his listeners there is every indication that the Soviet ships are well built and well armed, with the Russians profiting from allied ships lent to them during the war and from German experience after the war to secure the most up-to-date technical advice and equipment.

He said that the Soviet Union possesses also powerful naval air forces, including an increasing proportion of jet planes that can be used for bombing, torpedo attacks or mine-laying. The Soviet Navy, Thomas believes, not only could meet the defensive commitments but also could lend powerful support to land amphibious operations and wage an offensive campaign against Allied sea communications, including the use of submarines fitted with latest mines and torpedoes, atomic bombs and in due course with guided missiles.

"No one, surely, is qualified to discount official reports of this kind which have originated with the most authoritative sources in Washington and London. Yet we have a few days of the Malenkov era behind us, a thaw in the cold war and we witness a sharp break in the markets in anticipation of a curtailment of defence programs on this continent.

Perhaps anything as sensitive as the stock market is not a dependable barometer, but taken with some of the current headlines it is indicative of a lot of very foolish thinking in the minds of people who should know better.

"I believe in the true aristocracy of energy, learning, and ability, and integrity; an aristocracy whose marks and titles are found in the earnest efforts of a man to do his duty and to excell in its discharge."—Edward Blake.

Salute To Canada

(By Arthur Bryant in the Illustrated London News)

I find it refreshing to think that Canada, in the swift march from raw colonialism to a commanding place in the councils of mankind, the great subdominions of the British still enjoy, like Victorian England and the twentieth-century United States, the leadership and inspiration of creative men: of men, that is, who know how to get results and are allowed to do so. Not that they need be born aristocratized to the recorder, the statistician and the pedant. The land and its people are free; free to grow rich and to make wealth.

With a feeling of deep gratitude I remember being saying, "Hail, Canada!" its people are becoming a magnificent new nation where the priceless beliefs and traditions which Britain has evolved over the centuries can be preserved and widened under conditions of scope and opportunity which no longer exist in Britain itself.

And perhaps, before we take another turn in our wedding sheet, the realization of what Canada is achieving and becoming may cause us to recall and renew our own pledge to freedom. . . . And even if it fails to do so and we continue, under the dead weight of the out-of-thumb, blinkered bureaucracy, to drift helplessly up to our own shroud, it may still awaken in the people of an overcrowded island off the European coast dwindling prospects a resilience of the kind that enabled it awaiting them beyond the Atlantic.

There is nothing Britain and her people could not do if they would only face the fact of changing principles that made them great. But if they will not let them do so in their own country, how vulnerable, so pathetically imperilled, our dodge and drive efforts were elected: president W. J. Andrews; captain, Dr. Ponton; secretary pro tem, Arthur Harman; committee, J. Thompson, J. Gordon, R. Day, H. Hopkins and F. Andrews.

Time To Think

(Windsor Star)

Rt. Hon. J. G. Gardiner describes farmers as the wisest men in the country. He attributes it to the fact that, while working in the fields, they have time to think.

As minister of agriculture and as a farmer, Mr. Gardiner naturally is somewhat prejudiced in favor of farmers. But his association of farming with time to think does make sense. The fact that, all ages have been those who have had time, or who have taken time, to think.

In many fields of occupations, farmers do have opportunity to think on their work. This is not true in many other vocations in this modern world. In many jobs, if a worker lets his mind get off his work, he is apt to lose a finger or suffer other injury. And, in many vocations and positions men work at such a pace they haven't time to sit back and figure out just what are the important things in life.

Farmers constantly work close to nature. They are close to the essentials and fundamentals of life. They have an opportunity to witness for themselves the difference between grain and weeds; between the true and the false; between the real and the artificial. This certainly is conducive to wisdom.

We don't suggest farmers are naturally any smarter than other people. But they have time to think their problems out, and in an environment favorable to the understanding of the substance from the shadow. One of the basic troubles of the world today is that too few people have enough time, or take enough time, to think things through for themselves.

Wary Of Rustlers

(Owen Sound Sun-Times)

Within the next few weeks cattle rustling will be in the grazed again. In not a few instances this will mean that farmers will put something well up in the hundreds of dollars on grass tenancies in addition to their own homes. In some cases the farmers will go for days, perhaps weeks, without seeing some of the animals, particularly in the bush pastures. Their pasturage is extensive, and where there are bush areas in connection, as actual tally of numbers is difficult if the herd is large.

Last summer and fall considerable rustling was reported in some sections of Ontario. Several convictions were registered, and jail sentences imposed. The law has been steadily stiffened toward cattle rustling, as well it may. Any extensive increase will put a very serious crimp on one of the country's most important industries.

Greater clarification in the matter of marking cattle would help materially in curbing the activities of thieves.

H. Stewart Cooper, Grey County Representative of Agriculture, deals with the problem at some length outlining the law pertaining to brands and pointing out that the large big branding, popular in the West, need not be the cruel, messy job it was in the past. Use of acids now makes it a simple, humane job.

Yet another plan of branding would be the use of numbers made on the inside of the ear. Each farmer, for example, could be issued a serial number and card, duly registered. He could then be the only one who knows how he dies. The cattle could be tattooed in the ear where the markings could be readily seen, but where they would be no discouragement. Then each farmer could be required to show his card of ownership when he sells a bill of sale covering the animal in case it had changed hands.

* * *

In this manner persons who stole cattle would be unable to sell them without registering in channels. Considering the value of the animals, such methods are frequently very loose, permitting illegalities, which, fortunately, are not numerous.

Divorce Reasons

(Toronto Star)

In Hollywood a marriage counselor asked a girl why she had married so young, and the reply was: Because I like the importance of being called "Mrs." Another answer from a young bride was: "He was the only one who asked me and mother thought it might not get another chance." We wonder the divorce rate is high.

Die 6 Years Too Soon

(Time Magazine)

Does the high pressure of their jobs cause top corporation executives to burn out faster and die earlier than other men? Though industry still lacks the statistics to make a watertight case, the answer seems to be yes. After checking the health of more than 25,000 executives averaging 45.8 years old, Time's Life Insurance Examiners found that only 20 per cent were in normal health. In Chicago's Michael Reese Hospital, three doctors examined 1,000 executives under 50 years of age, found only three entirely free from organic disorders. Dr. Irvine McQuarrie, of Minneapolis, after doing 1,500 executive physicals during the wartime, have become even harder to get in the executive." If a reaction occurs the individual is apt to be particular substance applied. This is the theory on which the allergist works in the treatment of quite treatable merit.

Well, all the "titiic" the doctors prescribed an anti-histamine salve and soap, and in three days at the "clinic" the child's skin cleared up. Since then they have been giving her "shots" to desensitize her against house dust and excluding from her diet the foods to which she is allergic.

"We can't help but wonder if she will get permanent relief, but if she doesn't we are at least thankful for this past year during which she has been able to eat and sleep without us having to hold her hands down so she couldn't scratch her skin raw. The improvement is almost unbelievable."

I quote that paragraph verbatim so readers may judge for themselves. I, for one, must confess I wrote the first half of this screed before I finished reading the letter, and I was astonished at the conclusion. But there it is.

The house dust business is altogether too much for me. I cannot take seriously either an allergist's position or a doctor's script or patch test with a substance of "indefinite composition, and notwithstanding unbelievable improvement" in the child's account, or the administration of house dust injections is absurd—or sort of hokum the layman specialist or clinic racketeer so successfully markets to the wisecrack Americans. I'm not serious, hunkhead, Yankee means North American.

Fortunately in the vast majority of cases of eczema the disease tends to disappear spontaneously as the child grows up.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

HOUSE DUST SHOTS, EH?

Pennsylvanian reports a case of eczema which calls for, or at least deserves, more than a pretext to sound off in my familiar way about "clinics." I may as well warn you that use of the word "shot" for injection irks me as much as the term "check" for examination or "check-up" for physical examination. You or should brace yourself for some tough language.

Child aged 3 had eczema over most of her body. Her parents took her to an Allergy Clinic.

The term "clinic" when used to designate a business place where a number of trick specialists gang up to exploit popular credulity and fear is a new word to me. I can recall no such institution in Canada, or the United States, in my time. Generally speaking, 180 or its top management group died in five war years. Executives vote hard work and wartime, have become even harder to get in the executive." If a reaction occurs the individual is apt to be particular substance applied. This is the theory on which the allergist works in the treatment of quite treatable merit.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

SILENT COMPANIONSHIP

Loneliness, I believe, is one of the most intense of experiences. A tree gives out its seed and other trees grow about it until there is a forest. Animals, especially our domestic ones, like company and are found together.

Birds have a crude companionship. We like to work with others, commune with them, and learn from them. We don't like to live alone, walk alone, or travel alone, although at times solitude is most welcome. I note how travellers on a train take to go to the club car, where many people go to talk and companionship.

Most of us like travelling companions, but the best of these are the ones we can talk little, saying much! Silent companionship is rare experience. I have read that Thoreau the nature lover, liked to have a companion, on occasion, but liked the silent one best. Most of us want someone around us, even though that one might be a stranger.

A friend of mine called his book "Silent Friends." Books were these friends. John Kieran was another. I would light up their pipes and sit almost silently, and the time would go by until, "I better be going!" Always an evening of spiritual, as well as intellectual companionship.

In the silence of the forest we are not alone. Our trees are so many things to which we are akin in nature. There are so many of our friends whom we see only at long intervals but there is a continual silent companionship with them, for so long as they live.

Strength for the Day

CONFLICT

Tuesday of Holy Week

Jesus as Day of Conflict. Jesus was soon to be crucified. On this day He engaged in final conflict with the forces that persistently defying the will and providence of God. He announced His enemies; He pointed out to them a rule which was sure to come (and which did); He announced the eventual triumph of His kingdom upon the earth.

If we think we can live the Christian life without engaging in conflict we are very much mistaken. From the moment we are born until the moment we draw our last breath, life is for many of its aspects a conflict. We have to fight to live physically. Men poured out their blood in order to give us on the North American continent the spiritual and political liberties we enjoy. The battle against the forces of liberty is eternal vigilance has been proved over and over again, in the life of individuals, and in history.

Let us always remember, however, that the greatest conflict goes on within our own minds. The first person we must set ourselves resolutely to oppose is ourself.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

On a recent wide sweep around the central and south-western states, my companion and I were much impressed with the way the hamburger stand, the small children out to dinner and the family restaurant had sprung up in all kinds and even in those country club style restaurants that specialize in night clubs in their having dance bands, singers and floor shows. It was also a general thing to see family parties in the most elaborate night clubs, with children up to quite late hours, to infants. Either the Americans can't afford baby sitters, or they have an entirely different attitude towards family life. At first, we thought this merely were scandalized at the sight of tiny children hearing the sophisticated public dinner-time life of the country. But, on further observation, it was evident that American restaurants and night clubs are used as well as by adults. They have the furniture for children—high-chairs, half-chairs, odd and interesting trays that keep small children from falling off on a dinner table. And it was soon apparent that the children were not shirking adult food: there were special menus for them in other words, they were expected and welcome.

In Canada, generally, you rarely see whole-family parties in a night club. Canada is chiefly due to the more old-fashioned idea that disciplined people that small children should be in bed by the time the grown-ups sup. Or it may be the result of the fact that a restaurant food is not fit for children's diet, or that restaurants do not provide baby sitters, or that Canadians are still more old-fashioned in their attitude towards family life. At first, we thought this merely were scandalized at the sight of tiny children hearing the sophisticated public dinner-time life of the country. But, on further observation, it was evident that American restaurants and night clubs are used as well as by adults. They have the furniture for children—high-chairs, half-chairs, odd and interesting trays that keep small children from falling off on a dinner table. And it was soon apparent that the children were not shirking adult food: there were special menus for them in other words, they were expected and welcome.

Harold F. Mott New President Of Rotary Club

George Campbell, president of the Rotary Club, announced at the meeting in the Hotel Quinte on Monday, Harold F. Mott has been elected by the board of directors to the office of president for the term 1953-54. Alf Wilkes will again occupy the office of secretary.

The guest speaker was Dan Coughlan, director of probation services for the province of Ontario. Mr. Coughlan traced the development of probationary systems in England from the turn of the century to modern times and also compared the developments with those of Canada and Ontario within the same period.

The probationary director pointed out the number of prisoners in British jails has increased by slightly more than 1,000 since 1950 and said British department of justice is extremely concerned with this upward trend.

In contrast, he noted that in the same period in this province those sent to prison in Ontario have increased more than seven times as much as all of England's upswing, and he said, "no one in this province of Ontario is exhibiting any great alarm over the situation."

The speaker declared himself a "pioneer for probation". He pointed out to the gathering how ridiculous it is to send a man to jail for 90 days. "First of all," he explained, "sending him to prison for this short term automatically places him in contact with bad associates, in many cases he will lose his job, and sadly enough, often his self respect.

Not Deserve to Society

"What is the sense of putting him in a position such as this. Obviously it is unnecessary to lock this man up when a proper probation period for the same length of time under the guidance of a probation officer would serve him a great deal. You cannot tell me he is a danger to society, not the man they put away for 90 days. These 90-day cases are not a threat to the public or else they would be sentenced to a great deal longer term than 90 days," the speaker said.

Citing several cases involving sex offenders, Mr. Coughlan said, "he is not a criminal to be dealt with for committing a crime, his is not an offence of crime but an offence of illness. How often have you heard the all-to-familiar words after a particular morbid offence of this nature has occurred 'that offender should be drawn, and quartered.' I don't think so," Mr. Coughlan shrugged.

"After all the man is ill and placing him in jail will not likely cure his illness. He should be put away some place where he will receive proper treatment. And if he cannot be cured, he should be put away until he can be.

But that's not the way things are done in Ontario. We put a man like that in jail where he will certainly not be cured. Why should we punish him? Actually, society at large should be punished, not the individual.

"We say when a man has served his sentence, he has paid his debt to society . . . his punishment is ended. Gentlemen, his punishment has just begun and it began the day he was released from prison," Mr. Coughlan concluded.

A new member, Clinton Rose, was inducted into the club at the Monday meeting. He was introduced by Jay Sprague. The club plans a ladies' night for April 23 in the Masonic Temple.

The speaker was introduced by Don McKinnon and thanked by Court Miller.

Junior Farmers, Junior Institute Hold Meeting

It was decided on that money be sent to the Relief Fund and given toward a P.A. system; and that the money left over from church service should go to Sick Children's Fund.

A sing-song was led by Ray Homans.

Guest speaker was Mr. Phillips who was introduced by George Beer. Films were shown.

A paper was read by George Clare. Paper editor for next month will be Harold Cole with assistants, Donna Phillips and Dale Balcomcad.

The sing-song leader for next month will be Bill Leeming and the lunch committee, Sheila Casey, with the recreational leaders, Harvey Simmons and Gretha Joslin.

After the meeting adjourned, all enjoyed the recreation and refreshments.

Miss Alice Heasman Talks to Pine Grove W.I. on 'Education'

Pine Grove Women's Institute met for the regular monthly meeting at Marvin Hill School with the president, Mrs. H. Detwiler, presiding.

The members were pleased to learn that $40 had been the amount collected through the Institute for the new National Institute for the Blind home, near Kingston.

It was decided to hold a meeting of the Standing Committee convenors to review the year's work and work on the committee reports for the annual meeting.

The convener of home economics and health will attend the provincial conference in Guelph on May 7 and 8.

Mrs. E. Horton gave an interesting account of world and local news.

Mrs. F. Heasman, convener of citizenship, took charge of the program. Mrs. G. Bartindale gave a reading, "What's Wrong With Bill?"

Guest Speaker

Mrs. F. Heasman introduced the guest speaker, Miss Alice Heasman, of Belleville. Miss Heasman spoke on "Education," as it is carried on in the graded schools of the city, pointing out many of the differences between urban and rural educational methods. This was of particular interest to the members, most of whom, had had experience only with the rural side of the subject.

Mrs. A. Tanner read an article "Hate Doctrine Gone In New Reich Text Books" and Mrs. F. Heasman one on "Adult Education."

A contest to increase work power concluded this part of the program.

Refreshments were served and a social half hour enjoyed.

Ferne Writes from Akola, India, Tells of Four-Day Tour

Mission House,
Akola, Berar, M.P., India
March 8, 1953

Dear Praying Friends:

Greetings in the Name of Jesus! This is our first letter to you in 1953, and though it may be a bit late, nevertheless the wish is the same. Happy New Year! May the Lord bless that each one of us this year will know experientially the fruit of Colossians 1:18: "that in all things He might have the pre-eminence."

Let me thank each one of you for your beautiful Christmas cards and greetings and for the many who wrote letters of encouragement when I was preparing for my final examination in the language. I am happy to say that your prayers were answered and the last bundle of the Marathi language tests has been successfully crossed. Praise His Name!

Four-Day Tour

During the past week I had the privilege of spending about four days out on tour in a small village 33 miles from Akola. This is the touring season, and at this time when our missionaries go out with their evangelists and camp in the various villages in their district. It is not only a time for evangelism, but it is a time for exhorting and encouraging the believers. It is a welcome area who have so little opportunity for Christian fellowship and teaching.

We were camped under a lovely spreading mango tree on the outskirts of the village of Wai. His tents consisted my camp cot and my cryselleta, a Bible woman, and three missionaries. In the mornings and afternoons we women went out to meet with the women and children in the nearby villages while the men and evangelists met out mornings and evenings to hold services for the men. On Sunday morning we all joined together for a meeting in a Wunjari village.

Much Jewelry Worn

These are tribes people who wear quite an unusual dress and they themselves like great quantities of jewellery that hangs from their braided hair and dangles in their eyes. As the drums, tubias and harmonium played the Christian songs, little brown feet came running from all directions and soon 100 were present for the service.

A large part was showing the leper coming to Jesus for healing was placed in front of the group, and the Master gave a very graphic account of the Bible story, applying it to the lives of those present. They listened with great interest until, their hour came to usher them off to the field to work, for we were there for our service at 8:00 in the morning. Some bought Gospels to read more about the Lord Jesus, and we do earnestly covet your prayers that the seed sown will fall on good ground.

Remarkably Healed

As soon as the, meetings had disbanded the evangelist working in that area said that in this village there was a Hindu lady who had been ill for two years. Recently, while visiting here, he told this woman of the Lord Jesus who could heal her body if she would put her trust in Him. She took him at his word and trusted Christ for healing and was remarkably healed. But the fear of being ostracised had kept her timid about witnessing to her new-found faith in Christ. This very morning she requested that we all gather at her home, for she wanted to publicly declare her appreciation to the Lord for healing her, and she brought four pecks of grain as a thank-offering unto the Lord.

It was a thrilling and touching scene as she laid her grain at our feet. Her husband, who is still a Hindu, also wanted to bring some money, for he realized that only God could have healed his wife. He, too, joined in the little service of thanks that morning in the presence of all the village. Do pray for this woman and her husband.

Little Worldly Goods'

In the same village lived one other Christian family who also brought a thank-offering unto the Lord. They invited us to see their home which consisted of one tiny little mud floor room. No sooner had we entered than they asked us to pray for God's blessing on their home. Yes, little of this world's goods, but happy in the Lord. Do pray for these dear folks.

In the little village of Wai we were so encouraged to see the Christian families actively working for the Lord and witnessing for Him. We praise God for the consecrated worker He has given us in this area—Nandev Cavas. There are jewels to be gleaned from the hearts of the villages, and we praise God for the workers He has given us to help in the task. Jesus said, "Let us go into the next towns, that I may preach there also: for therefore came I forth." We are counting and depending upon you folks to join hands with us in prayer as we seek to reach these "next towns" with the Gospel message and returns.

Yours in His glad service,
Ferne Gerrie.

Holy Rosary School Sponsors Bridge, Euchre Party

An enjoyable evening was spent on Friday when the Holy Rosary School sponsored a card party. Those winning prizes included: for euchre, Mrs. H. Kelly and Mrs. J. Sulder; with brown feet came running from all directions and soon 100 were present for the service.

A large picture showing the leper coming to Jesus for healing was placed in front of the group, and the Master gave a very graphic account of the Bible story, applying it to the lives of those present. UP NORTH, moose have the habit of using snowplowed railway lines as their personal promenades. OK until they come to a bridge; then Mr. Moose is likely to get caught between the ties, break his legs and otherwise gum things up. So the railways lay what they call "moose carpets" of aluminum between the rails and over the ties at spots where His Lordship may need safe footing.

It just goes to show how aluminum's combination of lightness, strength and resistance to weather comes in handy in the most unlikely places . . . And to explain why, in 1954, our aluminum capacity will be boosted to over a billion pounds a year, Aluminum Company of Canada, Ltd. (Alcan).

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

"Grace and peace be multiplied unto you . . . this beautiful and inspirational greeting, expressed by the Apostle Peter in the beginning of some of his Epistles, is a prayer most fitting to this year's Easter. Grace, Peace,

Wife Includes Easter Greetings from Her Husband, in Overseas Service . . . and a Hint That His Friends Write Is Him.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I would like to send some Easter cards. My husband is in the service overseas. Would it be at all proper for me to include his name with mine in the signature?

— Katherine C.

Yes! Please do this — for naturally your husband would want to be included in the greeting just as he would if he were home. Why not add a friendship-linking message worded something like this: "Even though Michael is so far away, I know—and you and Jim will know, too—that he would want me to include his Easter greetings with mine. So, dear friends—your greetings to you both, our best wishes, and our devoted love. Michael and Anne."

And wouldn't this be the perfect time, too, for you to send your husband's address to those to whom you are sending Easter cards, adding a please-write "hint" to the message? I am not sure that you have Michael's latest address — so here it is, and oh, dear friends, how happy he would be to have a card or a note from you! He is always hungry, hungry, hungry, for mail!)

Easter Message to Servicemen via Easter Greeting to His Wife

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When the husband is away in service, should an Easter greeting card be addressed to both the husband and wife, or only to the wife?—S. W.

It's the best idea, I think, to address the greeting to both. Pleasantly points up the fact that you are "remembering" both. Of course you can send a card to each, if you know the serviceman's address. Or, to explain your including both names on the envelope, write a warm-hearted note under the greeting-words. For example: "Please tell your Larry, the next time you write to him, that Reg and I are sending him our friendliest Easter greetings and every good wish. We pray that all's well with both of you two dear and cherished friends! When you have a chance, do write us the news. And we'd love to write to Larry, if you will please send us his address." Make your Easter message a heart-warming greeting for the wife to send on to her husband.

Fashion Flashes

NO MATTER what is sought, it can be found in cotton. From beach to ballroom, from marketing to matinee, there's the right cotton for the event. Charming for general day wear is a double-breasted cotton dress, the tiny buttons marching all the way to the hem. Made of checked, petit point cotton, the dress is brightened by a white piqué collar and cuffs, all ball-fringed in red.

SMART TRICKS help to give interest to fashion, and make it easy to extend a wardrobe, within budget limitations. For instance, a detachable shoulder piece, prettily draped and held by rhinestone buttons, makes it easy to turn a pretty print into a strapless gown. The dress is of white silk crepe with a coral, silver and blue print and has a moderately full, ankle-length skirt.

Hat Designers Concentrate On Styles Reflecting Glitter

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—In this festive year, milliners are determined that hats shall be worthy of the occasion.

London's top hat designers therefore are concentrating on Coronation hat styles reflecting glitter and color of the summer season in Coronation Year.

A designer experienced in giving a royal touch to women's most frivolous accessory is Kate Dayone-time milliner to Norman Hartnell, the Queen's dressmaker. She now has her own hat salon in exclusive Mayfair and supplies customers who once praised the models she designed for wear with Hartnell's chic suits and beautiful embroidered gowns.

Royal Fairways

Among Miss Day's customers is the Queen, and styles similar to the neat little bonnets with tiny ferns Her Majesty has favored recently can be seen in the present collection.

Good examples are a navy silk straw with close-fitting crown, perfect at back and a tiny front brim curving down one cheek, and "Derby Day," a golden-brown waffle straw with feather trimming over one eyebrow, and almost the same style.

Most of Miss Day's Coronation hats are small, and many expose the hair-line. One such is "chimney sweep," a black velvet pillbox bonnet, fit peaked, almost brimless front giving a widow's peak effect to the hairline. A witchy look is achieved by a spike of straw speaking two yards of chimney-sweep "brushes." The crown is covered with sinister-looking beads.

In Great Variety

Miss Day has hats for every society event from tennis at Wimbledon to garden parties at Buckingham Palace. A Wimbledon style is a close-fitting poke bonnet shape in deep leaf green, its tiny brim has the beautiful sweeping curve of a gothic arch, the crown swathed in white chiffon that floats gracefully to the shoulder.

An unusual touch to a yellow organza confection hat for garden parties is provided by sprays of summer flowers handpainted above and below the brim. "Oxford and Cambridge" is a navy-and-tan sporting both university boating teams. A light-blue linen cloche, "Ascot Heath," has a navy-and-white chiffon that sweeps down one side to the waist.

"Cafe Creme"

"Cafe Creme," a coffee-and-cream straw that might be worn at one of the big British race meetings where fashions are important as horses, It was designed by Kate Day of London, once a milliner to Norman Hartnell, the Queen's dressmaker.—(CP Photo)

Reputation-Makers Using Chicken

(Conducted by MARY MOORE)

You all have friends that excel at making some particular dish. For instance Jennie makes the lightest of foods, Sarah the prettiest whole wheat bread and Pearl the smoothest Hollandaise, and so on.

Every cook aims to establish her friends in some accomplishment and it is a human and commendable ambition.

The women at the church always ask Mrs. Weston to make the meat loaves. When your efforts are on display and subject to the cool appraisal of your sister-Ladies-Aiders and their husbands you had better watch out for your laurels.

I'm going to aid and abet you in your unspoken competition by giving you a recipe for a Chicken Loaf that is custardy and delicate in consistency and with a flavor that no one can detect.

CHICKEN LOAF (Hot)

One-quarter lb. sliced mushrooms, 1-2 cups soft fresh breadcrumbs, 1 cup each milk and well-seasoned chicken broth, 2 eggs, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon paprika, 1-4 cup very finely cut canned pimento, 3 cups sliced cooked chicken (if not small, it is about 1 tablespoon butter saute the sliced mushrooms over very low heat until they are limp and are soaked with the butter but not at all browned. In a bowl mix together all remaining ingredients and add the hot sauteed mushrooms. Turn into a pan about 9 x5x3 inches and press the chicken mixture into it. Set this in another large pan containing about 1 inch of hot water. Bake 350 deg. Fahr. for 1 hour. To turn out, let stand for 5 minutes, then loosen around the sides and turn out on hot platter. Serve hot in slices. Mushroom Sauce is an ideal accompaniment.

MUSHROOM SAUCE

For 2 cups sauce melt 4 tablespoons butter and saute in them 1 teaspoon grated onion and 1-2 cup spoon finely chopped green onion tops and 1 cup sliced mushrooms, for about 5 minutes, but do not brown. Then add 4 tablespoons flour, stir in, add 1-4 teaspoon salt and shake of pepper, the stir in 1 1-4 cups hot milk until thick.

Years ago I knew a girl who would make only four things: cake, poached eggs, chicken Hollandaise, and broiled steak.

And yet, she was a success as the wife of an executive of a mighty company who, fortunately for her, was moved from city to city from time to time.

Wherever she and her husband had guests she would make guarts and they always looked coffee, then very officiously broil the steak with the air of a duchess, while her adoring husband tossed the salad. For dessert they served a variety of cheeses and crackers. A bit Bohemian but she was a hostess. I'll give her chicken chiffon gown, too.

Her specialty was

CHICKEN HOLLANDAISE

(Try it and you will understand why the other office wives have always begged you back for a repeat.)

One and one-half tablespoon butter, 2 teaspoon finely chopped onion, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon lemon juice, 1-3 cup finely chopped parsley, 2 teaspoon salt, shake of paprika, 1 cup cold cooked chicken, cut in cubes, 2 cups milk, 2 unbeaten yolk of 1 egg. Cook gently the butter and onion until tender, stir in cornstarch and then the stock gradually, then the parsley, celery salt, paprika, and chicken; when heated through, pour this over beaten egg yolks, then cook over low heat 1 minute longer, stirring.

Our hostess served this on buttered graham toast cut in triangles but it would be good in timbale cases or French pastry cases or if you were lazy in every way, a small amount, for instance for an evening alone, it could go on buttered crackers.

Lennox and Addington District Y.P.U. Holds Fellowship Sunday

On March 22 the Lennox and Addington district Y. P. U. held a fellowship Sunday in Desoronto United Church with afternoon and evening sessions. The theme for the day was "Why Be a Christian." The afternoon session opened with a helpful worship service conducted by the Selby Y.P.U. The theme speaker, Mr. Dick Martin, student of Queen's University, Kingston, brought the address on the subject, "Christ—a Myth or a Fact." This inspiring address was given in three parts: "Christ As a Historical Being," "Looking At Christ," and "His Teachings."

True Peace

- Speaking of the loving, kindly personality of Jesus, Mr. Martin stressed the importance of people to follow Christ with mind, heart, soul and body. Keep in tune with spiritual things and follow His teachings every day. True Christians should have no enemies and not until we let Christ enter our hearts can we obtain that true peace and contentment.

The district president, Mr. Don Fingland, introduced the leaders of the discussion groups, faith and evangelism, Irene Walters and Margaret Hillis; stewardship and training, Gordon Fox and Mac Cameron; citizenship and community service, Burton Brown and Wray McLaughlin; missions and world service, Verna McTaggart and Gaynor Rendell.

A quiet period of recreation was under the fine leadership of Reta Christie, Miss Rosemary Hunter was in charge of book display. At five o'clock a delightful supper was served in the Sunday School rooms by the ladies of the W. A.

During the supper hour, Miss Margaret Hills, Belleville, brought greetings and spoke on "Camp Quin-Mo-Lac, Moira Lake, urging all who could to attend camp this summer.

An enjoyable sing-song was led by Rosalyn Robertson and Don Fingland expressed thanks and appreciation to ladies W. A. guest speaker and to all who helped in any way.

Evening Service

The evening church service was conducted by Judy Kemmett and Don Findlay. Mr. Ken Smith led and gave the evening message based on "Christianity — A Farce or Need." This was a most inspiring and helpful message to all who were in attendance.

The choir, under the direction of Mr. Gerald Mould, rendered a beautiful anthem and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. W. Neelands.

At the close of the evening session, a film, "Operation Timber" was directed by Mr. Gaynor Rendell, and held in the Sunday School room. Small discussion groups were formed, with a period of quiet meditation and prayer observed, after which each one had the opportunity of expressing his or her own thoughts on the Christian life.

Vesper Service

Miss Doris V. Twiddy, Deseronto, took charge of closing vesper service, with each entering the dimly lighted church in a quiet reverent way. A worship centre on the communion table formed a setting for the service. This centre was a gold cross beside a large picture of Christ. In large black letters on a white background was the wording, "He is Our Helper." The open Bible was at the foot of the cross and white candles were placed at either side. The pulpit light was centered above shining down on the cross.

During the playing of quiet music a poem, "God Will Let You and Me," was read. The hymn, "Spirit of God Descend Upon My Heart" was sung and a brief meditation given, challenging all young people to accept the Christ life, but the Christian life is the finest, the best life to live.

A most fitting solo, "Now the Day is Over," was rendered by Mr. Gaynor Rendell. With the singing of "Breathe On Me, Breath of God," and a meeting address-strength and guidance, a most helpful day of fellowship was brought to a close.

PRESERVED WISDOM

NEW DELHI (CP)—A factory for large-scale manufacture of recordings of the late Mahatma Gandhi's post-prayer meeting addresses has been imported from Britain and set up here. The all-India collection of Gandhi's speeches but wishes to put them on long-lasting discs and give them wider circulation.

BEAUTY

Slimming down the hipline

More bad luck for the plumpest. It would seem as if fashion designers had it in for the heavyweights. Now the slim, tight skirt accents the ever-curves of hips and thighs. Those who decide what women shall wear appear to take it for granted that there is only one anatomical type—the woman with the slender waist, no sprawl anchabline, long legs and a normally developed bust. If you qualify, you are in luck. If you don't, you had better get busy and do some figure remodelling. You'll not only look better, you will feel better; and you can give those high priestesses of style the merry laugh.

The weight-gainers, most of them, have an idea that reducing is a prolonged, agonizing ordeal. Nothing of the sort. Fat cells are caused by overeating or eating too much of certain foods, and nothing else. By disciplining the appetite, one can shake off a pound or two a week, and that is reducing fast enough. Rapid reducing can cause loss of energy and put wrinkles in your face. Of what value the slender, young shape, if the face looks older? If you belong to the hippy class, decide right now to get busy.

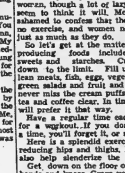
Ten minutes of corrective exercises every day won't kill any woman, though a lot of lazy ones seem to think it will. Girls are ashamed to confess that they get no exercise and women need it just as much as they do.

So let's get at the matter. Fat is produced chiefly by starchy foods, sweets and starches. Cut 'em down to the limit. Fill up on lean meats, fish, eggs, vegetables, green salads and fruit and you'll never miss the cream puffs. Take tea and coffee clear. In time you will get used to it.

Have a regular time each day for a workout. If you don't get a time, you'll forget it, or skip it.

Here is a splendid exercise for reducing hips and thighs. It will also help slenderize the calves.

Get down on the floor on your hands and knees. Grasp your left ankle in your left hand, raise your left knee and lower your head and chest to meet it. Then pull your left foot and leg up and backward, at the same time moving your chest and head forward. This is not as complicated as it sounds.



Lie on your back on the floor, hands at the sides. Lift the left foot high, stretch it as far as you can, then bring it toward the right, touching the floor with your toe. Six times; then six times in the other direction, and repeat.

Now it is the slim, tight skirt.

Gaiety of Coronation Year Reflected in Wedding Finery

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Economy is a trade slogan in the race for Coronation trappings, even though the thinning purses of the nobility ensnfied in the Queen's acceptance of an alternate, less sumptuous Coronation garb for peers under the rank of earl.

Britain's love of splendor and desire to "grace" an occasion are impulses which will see the Westminster Abbey pageant on robes of velvet rather than velveteen.

By request, royal dressmaker Norman Hartnell designed a contemporary robe of velveteen trimmed with white rabbit skin, selling around £20. The waisted, sleeveless robe with ermine collar, cut on the lines of a flowing evening coat with train, will be worn by many peeresses under the rank of countess—but without a tiara.

Hard on Velveteen

Women attending the abbey ceremony may, of course, prefer to economize in other ways. This is because the long hours of sitting before the ceremony starts—guests must be in their places some three hours in advance—would be hard on velveteen. On the other hand, silk velvets, frees and silk-and-cotton velvets, materials sold in the top ranges, are just about unerushable.

A spokesman for Normar Hartnell says they are selling cheaper robes, but that requests are few. Other manufacturers find that many orders for the velveteen gown are for future windows. Some of these orders are from Canada.

Another robe stylist, close to the law courts and Fleet street, is not making one robe in velveteen. This firm Ede and Ravenscroft has reproduced robes since the coronation of William and Mary in 1689, and most of their robes come in the present traditional styling which dates to the Coronation of Queen Anne.

Economies in Fur

More than one authority confirms that peers wearing the traditional robe may economize in the quality of fur trimming, but all are choosing good velvets. The furnishing firm (Warner and Sons) which regularly supplies the handwoven purple velvet used in the robe of the monarch says that a small quantity of handwoven velvets are being supplied for Coronation robes. These are in red.

The Royal Dukes including the Duke of Edinburgh will wear the same red as the peers. The only members of the Royal Family so far known to be wearing purple are the Queen, the Duchesses of Kent and Gloucester and Princess Margaret. It is not yet known what

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Her girl friend wrote her letters for her—has she buy friend gimmes?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A boy of whom I was very fond in high school went into service after graduation and began to write to me after he had gone away.

I'm not very good at letter writing, so I asked one of my girl friends to write my answers to him and sign my name, but of course we didn't tell him. When this boy came home on a furlough, we saw a lot of each other and got on fine together. After he went back to camp, he wrote me again, but the girl who had written my letters to him before had left town, so I had to answer him myself. He must have noticed the different handwriting and thought there was something funny about it, because he never answered me. What do you think I can do about this?—D. J.

Dear D. J.:

About the only thing I can see that you might do is to write another letter to this boy telling him the truth.

If you explain to him that you asked a girl friend to write and were specially anxious for him to get some really interesting letters, because you like him so much, he would probably take it in good part. Try this and see if he doesn't.

An older sister wants to make rules for her

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My sister tells my mother that she doesn't think I should go out with a boy by myself but that there should always be another couple along with us. Another boy, who is a friend of our family, sticks up for me all the time and tries to help me out.

Do you think I should let him stick up for me, and what do you think about this older sister?

I am 15 years old.—E. O. D.

Dear E.O.D.:

At 15, I think you should be able to go out on a fair number of dates with boys, and I see no reason for your always having to have another couple along. Your older sister so careful about her own dates when she was your age? Do you think, of course, that you always behave yourself as a well-brought-up girl should, when you are out with a boy, and that you never do anything that she would give your sister or anyone else cause to think you will be worn by the Queen Mother.

Peers who can't afford the heavy cost of new robes are allowed to wear parliamentary robes — red wool trimmed with ermine—but Lord Hawke, chairman of the Dependent Association of Unionist Peers, said a scheme has been started to help those without robes. Through the association, peers unlucky in the ballot for seats in Westminster Abbey will offer robes to those with seats.

As for the boy who takes your part with the family, it's probably a good thing that you have someone to help you present your point of view, and unless your family gets away from him doing that, there's certainly no harm done. If he's a boy with common sense, who is wise enough to know when to put in his two cents and when to keep it out, perhaps the family will listen to him when he does speak up. All of us need someone to help us at times, and if the boy really is a help, by all means let him continue to be.

1953 Cadillac Coupe de Ville is one of the extensive line of Cadillac cars which is formally announced today. Cadillac engineers achieve increased fuel economy plus added acceleration and performance through their 210 horsepower engine for 1953. A new 8.25 to 1 compression ratio, high valve lifts, a new 25-volt electrical system and a low 3.07 to 1 rear axle ratio combine to deliver new efficiency and driving satisfaction. Air conditioning heads a list of features which are optional at extra cost.

Anglers Word on Fish Size May Not be Exaggeration

MONTREAL (CP)—Those little exaggerations about the size of the fish you caught may be technically true. The authority for your veracity is none other than the biologist-in-chief of the Quebec biological bureau, University of Montreal.

He is Vianney Legendre, who doubles as professor of ichthyology at the university. His handbook, "A Key to Game and Commercial Fishes of the Province of Quebec" devotes more than seven pages to methods of determining the length of a fish.

You have your choice of four methods; also a few subsidiary tricks.

Extra Tricks

1. Standard length—for professional biologists and self-deprecating anglers: Measure from the foremost tip of the snout to the flexure line—the point at which the fish wags or wiggles his tail.

2. Body length—for the merely modest: From snout to end of lateral line or scales. With a big fish, this may extend a full inch beyond the flexure line.

3. Fork length—for the fellow who is modest by nature but still doesn't want to overdo even a virtue: Snout to taillin fork. This is the measurement biologists prefer to receive from anglers who write to them.

4. Total length—for those who want to make the most of everything—most anglers do—and who argue, not without reason, that tail lobes are a natural part of the fish, not something artificially added: Measure from snout to tip of taillin. If one lobe is longer than the other, take the longer by all means.

In estimating approximate standard length from total length, biologists are inclined to make allowances for the angler's well-known generosity.

How to Measure

Now for the extra tricks. You're within your just rights, and can gain a notch or two, by stretching your fish out to the natural length or position it had in life, instead of letting it become droopy on a board or table.

If your fish has one jaw longer than the other, measure from the longer jaw. If one taillin lobe is not quite the equal of the other, move both lobes together so their tips meet and you'll gain a little something.

Mr. Legendre didn't mention such stunts as trick photography to make the fish look bigger, spreading arms to demonstrate the size of the one that got away, or applying a centimetre scale and calling it inches.

Chapter 37
CRUCIFY HIM

Pilate had been talking with his wife. He knew what the returning clamor in the outer courtyard meant. Messengers swifter than the tired feet of the priests raced back to the palace with word that Herod had not risen to the bait; he returned the prisoner with his compliments. Whatever the crimes of Jesus, they were committed in Jerusalem and therefore under Pilate's jurisdiction. The problem was back in the governor's hands and it was even greater than before; now he had talked with Claudia Procula.

Never before had Pilate seen that sophisticated Roman lady of the court so much in earnest about anything. To kill Jesus of Nazareth, she told him, was unthinkable. Exaggerated as such a thought must seem, still Pilate had got from her the feeling that it was the fact of this life between him and his wife would never again be the same. That was a dismaying thought to Pilate.

Yet what must the governor do now? He had to find a way to acquit Jesus and still not incur revenge from a frantic priesthood. Again he sat in his fancy chair and confronted the pale, bruised prisoner. Scarce an hour before He was given the new royal robe of white with golden fringe which Herod had draped over Him in drunken mockery. The faces of Herod's Caliphas were pale and haggard with the long labors of this night and morning.

"I Will Chastise Him"

Pilate turned from Jesus to Annas, and then, hoarse voice edged ignorn than ever with impatience, he pointed out to them that although the prisoner was a Galilean, nevertheless Herod Antipas, the Tetrarch, had refused to do anything with Him. As for himself, he could only repeat what he had said before:

"I find no cause. You have presented to me this man as one that perverts the people, and behold, I, having examined Him before you, find no cause in that man in those things wherein you accuse Him. No, nor Herod either. For I sent you to him, and behold, nothing worthy of death is done to Him. I will chastise Him, therefore . . ."

"Good!"

"And then I shall release Him!"

Release Him! A yawp of fury came from the mob. To best more blind men, raise up more supporters, preach more perversions of the established order — release Him! Caiphas turned quickly and spoke two words in — to a dirty ear lowered to his beard. The words ran quickly to the very core of the mob and there rose a sudden piercing cry:

"Crucify Him!"

From one, then from a dozen came the uncouth cry. Soon it was a rhythm and a chant —

"Crucify Him! Crucify Him!"

"Ye Priests!"

Pilate's shaggy brows went up. Had he heard aright? This prisoner was supposed to have enemies in the Temple but friends in the streets. That cry for crucifixion came from the gutter. To flog Jesus would be almost to murder Him. They all knew what official chastisement meant. That ought to satisfy the most blood-thirsty among them. To let Jesus live—that would be keeping his word to Procula.

Although he knew that blatant, noisy, blustering mob for what it was, nevertheless the situation was intimidating. A riot could easily be in the making. Nevertheless, Pilate was not ready to admit defeat.

The idea in Pilate's mind to get his prisoner off was like a fear gnawing at his brain. He still had one unfigured idea. Forcing a conciliatory smile, he talked for the first time directly to the people.

In Jerusalem, he reminded them, they had a custom which he had faithfully followed: on the Feast of the Passover the procurator could set one prisoner free, with a full pardon. The crowds had only to shout the names of their favorites and he whose name got the loudest noise he would set free. Now Pilate, making a last effort to keep his promise to his wife, put two names before the mob — this prisoner of theirs and the other, the notable revolutionary leader — Barabbas!

Choice of the Mob

He was truly a seditionist, was Barabbas, and in his conspiracy to overthrow the government by violence he had already committed murder.

"Will you," asked Pilate, pretending to make light of the whole charge, "that I release to you the King of the Jews? Whom will you that I release to you — Jesus Barabbas or Jesus Christ?"

Then, obedient to signals from Caiphas, the crowd screemed:

"Away with this man! And release unto us Barabbas!"

By this time there were honest voices as well as hired; that took up the bellowing. Barabbas had his own friends in that crowd; the clamor was deafening.

"Away with this man! Give us Barabbas!"

Arms outstretched, Pilate strode forward and tried to plead with them, but they drowned out his words; they took up a rhythmic chant, and it swelled, as the shrieking beat the paving stones with their staff handles and a drunken woman clapped a pair of cymbals.

"Crucify Him!"

"Crucify Him!"

"Crucify Him!"

Pilate raised his hand furiously in an imperial gesture and there was a sudden word silence.

"Why, what evil has He done?" he roared indignantly. "What evil has this man done?"

Instantly their revilling voices bellowed again in the same final bitter reply:

"Crucify Him!"

Forty Blows

Pilate flung himself into the high chair. He gave an exhausted growl and made a sign. The crowd screamed with joy as Jesus was led off to His fate.

It was then that the guards took Jesus and beat Him within a gasp of His life. They flogged Him with a whip made of three leather lashes, to the flaying ends of which were stitched those bits of metal and bone. With forty blows they scourged Him, and when it was done Jesus was so weak that He had barely strength to stand. They dressed Him, and with wales and stripes and welts, He had been drubbed within a few breaths of His life.

But He must continue to stand, for they had still more to do to Him.

Over His back, streaming from the blood opened by the countless lashes, they laid again His own robe. Two idle soldiers had plaited long thorns that grew in scraggly hedges around the farms to keep out fox and wolf. On His head they pressed this crown of thorns.

Pilate meanwhile had returned to Claudia Procula, who reclined on her couch, pale and reproachful. He told her brusquely what had happened; from the courtyard the clamor of voices reached their ears;

"Hail, King of the Jews!"

"They give Him many blows!" wailed Procula. "Yet He makes no outcry!"

"True, they strike His head, and spit upon Him—"

It was over to have nothing to do with that just man!"

He bent over, but she thrust him away. He rose with an oath.

"Very well," he snarled. "I will go out and try again."

"I Find No Cause . . ."

Once more the prisoner and His judge stood before the mob. This time Jesus was on the platform beside Pilate as the governor squirmed in his ivory chair. The face of Pilate was tired and worn, and his eyes had a hunted look; the face of Jesus was bloody.

"Behold," Pilate began, trying to put a note of reasonableness and casual common sense into his wife; "behold, I bring Him forth unto you that you may know I find no cause in Him."

The purchased gangs looked at the beaten Jesus, face and hands bloody, wrists knotted and stained crimson, new scars on His face, but with shoulders up and straight and eyes and posture serene in indestructible composure. The crown of thorns gave to His face a dignity and not the clownish buffoonery they had expected.

In the silence Pilate spoke, as a man speaks when he thinks he is clinching a deal:

"Behold this man!"

Then he lifted his powerful thumbs to his ears as the shrieks beat the paving stones with their staff handles and a drunken woman clapped a pair of cymbals.

"Crucify Him!"

"Crucify Him!"

"Crucify Him!"

Pilate screamed back at them: "Take Him, you, and crucify Him, for I find no cause in Him."

Here Annas stepped sternly forward. He was not going to let Pilate escape his proper responsibility.

"Lord Pilate, we have a law—and according to the law, He ought to die because He made Himself the Son of God."

And a new shout went up:

"Crucify Him! Whoever makes himself a king speaks against Caesar. If you release this man you are not Caesar's friend!"

"Behold Your King"

Over and over again the mob chanted those desperate words. They struck to the depths of Pilate's little soul. Yet, even so, he persisted still. He stood beside the object of all this fury and, forcing himself to jest, as if to ask the whole race if they were in fear of this bedraggled figure, Pilate roared:

"Behold your king!"

No, they would not join in his laugh. He could not cajole the hirelings, paid to be implacable. They yelled:

"Away with Him! Away with Him! Crucify Him!"

In a panic of forced jesting Pilate cried:

"Shall I crucify your king?"

"We have no king but Caesar!"

Pilate heard that shout—and lost. Beyond that phrase he could not go. Those words were the frontier line past which no more acute.

The Americans have more money, better food and clothing and bigger automobiles, and prosperity arouses envy.

On the political side there is uneasiness about the vigor with which the U. S. is insisting on supporting defence programs.

Western Germany with 250,000 U. S. troops sees more Americans than other lands but there is no obvious anti-American trend. The Americans are changing from an occupation force to a defence force and the U. S. was the first of the victor countries to ratify the West German peace contract.

The French are perhaps more vocal than others in finding fault with the U. S.

First, the U. S. wants to have Western Germany rearmed promptly. France opposes.

Second, the U. S. voted to place on the United Nations agenda the complaints of Tunis and Morocco against French colonial administration. France regarded the vote as humiliation.

Third, the U. S. wants France to institute internal reforms to reduce the need for American aid.

About 45,000 U. S. soldiers are stationed in Britain, where they read and hear both abuse and hot defence of Americans. Where circumstances permit, they fit snugly into the British community.

They have won much condemnation for the swift efficiency with which they show up wherever there is a disaster in Britain.

However, Anglo-American relations involve far more than troops here with Britain's approval. Political, economic and military relationships run hot and cold.

An unofficial Anglo-American committee, on which American embassy officials are represented, has found that the cause of friction between American soldiers and British civilians, and has concluded that there are not many. . .

Not to obscure but rest, is British resentment against the infiltration of all that is meant by the "American way of life."

Highly or wrongly, many Europeans, especially in Continental Britain, regard Americans as "canned culture."

SLIGHT ERROR

FARNHAM ROYAL, England (CP)—Farmer Harold Ayres protested when his white and yellow Guernsey cow, by artificial insemination, gave birth to a black and white Friesian calf. He claimed compensation but was told users of the insemination service "must take the risk of a mistake."

U.S. Prestige Down in Italy, France, U.K., Austria, Greece Associated Press Reports Show

By ALVIN STEINKOFF

LONDON (AP)—A U. S. traveller in Western Europe who has been here before may be aware three days of a little chill in an atmosphere once allogether friendly.

There are exceptional spots. The American is still welcome in Spain the Republic of Ireland and in Scandinavia. He is tops in The Netherlands, where American assistance in the recent floods was deeply appreciated.

But Associated Press reports indicate that in such lands as Britain, France, Italy, Austria and even Greece, American prestige has fallen a little.

The reasons seem obvious:

There are hundreds of thousands of American soldiers on occupation and defensive duties in some countries. It hurts a country's pride to see foreign soldiers around.

American troops and civilian administrators have made the chronic European housing shortage politician could advance; not if he cared for his own skin.

Somewhere in his soul he knew that the beautiful mystery had escaped him again and now forever. That was why he called for a basin. The lustrum, ceremony of purification! In front of all of them, he, a Roman, washed his hands. And as the water water dribbled down, he lifted his face sidewise to heaven and cried in a broken voice:

"I am innocent of the blood of this just man."

A Woman Weeps

So the long trial was over at last. Barabbas, the revolutionist, was released to the people. Jesus was condemned to be crucified, all very legally, by Pilate. Jesus was started again on the trek to Calvary, and Jesus Barabbas, gray-haired, dazed, strode off with his supporters. But the wildered inkberry eyes not noting the woman in the dark blue cloak who stood in the shadow of the wall weeping and remembering. She herself, her friend, Mary Magdalene, had seen him. She had seen it all.

Mary had seen Him. She had seen it all.

Exploding Shells Bring Havoc To Indiana Town

ELWOOD, Ind. (AP)—Exploding artillery shells from three ammunition cars on a derailed and burning freight train rained fire on this village for five hours Saturday night. More than a dozen buildings burned, and scarcely one was left undamaged.

But only two persons are in hospital. Thirteen others were treated for cuts and bruises.

Gutted freight cars lay in a twisted mass around a crater 60 feet wide and 20 feet deep.

A 10-man demolition squad was sent here to remove the fearhead from several hundred unexploded shells scattered about the scene. Observers kept well away from the shells.

The survival of the 300 residents of the village in the face of such devastation appeared to be due to two factors.

The blast occurred a quarter of a mile from the village and most of the people were gathered at the Masonic Building on the far side of the town for an Eastern Star installation. The Masonic Building, its broken windows boarded up, quickly became disaster headquarters.

The Red Cross listed nine houses and four barns as destroyed and 34 homes damaged. It said 84 families were affected. Two buildings in the small business section were destroyed.

It was impossible to count the number of freight cars in the burned wreckage, but the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific Railroad reported 24 cars were unaccounted for.

Egypt's Liberation Rally Told in Nutshell by Flag

By HAIG NICHOLSON

CAIRO (Reuters) — Egypt's new Liberation Rally, formed by Premier Mohammed Naguib after his dissolution of the country's political parties, tells its story in a nutshell in the colors of its flag — black, red and white.

Black represents the "bad old days" and dark deeds of the former system of party politics with its accompanying graft and corruption.

White represents the dawn of better and brighter days under the Naguib regime.

Red is supposed to symbolize a warning sign that the people are prepared to struggle and make sacrifices to achieve complete independence.

The Rally says it is not a party, but a movement organized by Egypt's new regime to channel the hopes and aspirations of the Egyptian people. Naguib said recently: "The movement is not associated —from near or far—with any party — it has no relation to any organism or faction."

Anyone is eligible to join, and those unable to pay the small membership fee can become members free of charge.

"Supreme objectives" of the Liberation Rally are:

1. To obtain evacuation of foreign troops from the Nile valley and to liberate it from imperialism whether political, economic or social.

2. To create conditions under which the Sudanese people will be able to determine their future free from any external influence.

The Rally says it aims at creating a new social structure in Egypt, "on the basis of loyalty to God and country," and asserts that it wants to make social justice a "reality, not a mirage."

A booklet explaining the origin and ideals of the Rally has been widely circulated. Of the "bad old days," it says: "No one desired to give sound education to the peasants . . . their land was the prey of brokers, who purchased land and treated the fellaheen (peasants) and small tenants as though they were slaves."

Meanwhile, middle-class people were the victims of increasing prices imposed by greedy merchants in agreement with officials devoid of mercy or patriotism.

"Parties," it says, "resembled business companies whose sole aim was to exploit the people and to live on its sufferings."

Then, the pamphlet says: "Above all there, there sat on the throne a man who dragged the reputation of the country to the ground."

Of the future, it declares:

"In the Rally every Egyptian Egypt's new regime to channel the hopes and aspirations of the Egyptian people. Naguib said recently: "The movement is not associated —from near or far—with any party — it has no relation to any organism or faction."

Anyone is eligible to join, and those unable to pay the small membership fee can become members free of charge.

"Supreme objectives" of the Liberation Rally are:

1. To obtain evacuation of foreign troops from the Nile valley and to liberate it from imperialism whether political, economic or social.

2. To create conditions under which the Sudanese people will be able to determine their future free from any external influence.

The Rally says it aims at creating a new social structure in Egypt, "on the basis of loyalty to God and country," and asserts that it wants to make social justice a "reality, not a mirage."

Hawks Whip Dixie 5-3 To Win Quarter-Finals; Meet Weston Dukes Next

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

PRESERVE THE PICKEREL

Spawn-laden pickerel will shortly be finding their way to ice-free rivers and streams of the district. Each fish will deposit 30,000 eggs in its "nest." Left to themselves, the female pickerel and her mate will reproduce and bring to maturity between 200 and 300 fish and over a period of four years will produce 1,000 to 1,200 active fish, the first 300 of which will reproduce and create. The result: well-stocked streams and plenty of fish for everybody.

But looming behind this attractive piscatorial picture is the menace of the annual spring slaughter. Synonymous with the approach of the pickerel to spawning grounds, spears are being sharpened in darkened garages, kitchens and other places. Dip-nets and grappling irons are being readied. The pickerel killer is getting prepared to strike. Acting with him will be spawn-destroying fish, weather conditions and pollution. A heavy toll of spawning pickerel and their eggs is exacting through this media.

Nothing much can be done regarding the spawn-eating perch, bullheads, suckers, eels which follow the pickerel. Laws can be said and nothing done about the weather. Pollution can be reduced perhaps, but something can and will be done regarding the wanton slaughter of these productive fish by those who apparently derive enjoyment from nocturnal spearing and other illegal fishing activities.

During the past few years, hundreds of spawning pickerel have been caught, a great number tossed aside to rot on river or stream bank because of the killer lust of some of these after-dusk "sportsmen." This is especially true of the district extending between Trenton and Shannonville, with emphasis on the Shannon River near the latter place. Game overseers and police have done a fine job in curbing this practice, but they cannot be in a dozen places at the same time.

True a great number of those taking pickerel illegally do not do so merely for the fun of fishing. Some do it for financial gain, selling their catches to friends and neighbors; others merely take sufficient for their own needs. In any event the temptation is strong, but that does not relieve any of the responsibility of breaking the law. All are guilty.

Let's put it this way: A farmer would not kill a cow about to freshen, nor a sow carrying a litter of pigs. He would not decapitate a setting hen with eggs ready to hatch. Or in a broader sense, the farmer wishing to replace his herd with new stock would not kill the entire herd before it had freshened.

A government official has stated that if the taking of female fish at spawning time continues there is a possibility of a complete loss of reproduction for at least three seasons. This will lead to one thing, the posting of all streams and inland lakes in this district with fishing strictly prohibited until the fish population is back to normal.

Three very important points should be considered by those who purchase pickerel out of season. First if the vendor is without a licence he would be in illegal possession, and which state is immediately yours when the purchase is completed. Second, the fish were taken in the Bay of Quinte or other inland water it is illegal by reason of a closed season. And third, and this is very important, the flesh of any fish just before or after the period of production is not properly edible, and worst of all, if it is a female fish and taken before the spawn is deposited you are in possession of 100 fish, for even under unfavorable circumstances the hatch would yield that many.

So when you buy a pickerel or any other game fish taken during closed season, it is not only illegal, but if you enjoy angling or if you cater to the tourist business, you are helping to eat the proverbial cake and speeding the approaching catastrophe.

It has been announced that the law governing the taking of fish illegally will be rigidly enforced. Game overseers and conservation staffs will be augmented. No matter if you are the local equivalent of the Ada Kham or Mickey from across the tracks, the Colonel's lady or Judy O'Grady, if found fishing illegally, or in illegal possession you will feel the full force of the law.

The present picture as far as game fish is concerned, is alarming but not discouraging providing every local citizen gives his co-operation. The Game and Fish Associations of Belleville and Napanee in co-operation with the Department of Game and Fisheries, are exerting very effort to conserve the game fish of the district. They believe that with propey protection and treatment the fish will in their own way provide this area with fine angling and fishing for all concerned as well as making it attractive to tourists who intend spending vacations in this part of Ontario.

THEY DOOD IT!

The Hawks may have torn a slip from the hockey book of the Kingston Goodyears last night up there in Dixie. They ripped in for two quick goals, then played it cautiously, meanwhile watching for every opportunity that came their way. The loss of Halstead and Jones did not improve their offensive ability from the second period on, but the classic performances from this observer's point of view, were those of "Turk" Barclay and Gerry Goyer. Barclay even drew the admiration of the rabid Dixie fans with his sensational netminding while Goyer played one of the best, if not the best, of his junior "B" career.

The Hawks came up with a brilliant checking display. They had to. The win-hungry Flashers were skating miles in a desperate effort to pull victory out of defeat. They lacked finish around the Hawks' net and when they did get their shots away the "Turk" barred the gate. Clements, at the other end, came up with a dandy effort too, and he halted many a Hawk foray in its tracks. Halstead suffered an injured shoulder and received medical attention. It was not ascertained early today how serious the injury it.

In any event the Hawks will get down to serious practice on Wednesday night to ready themselves for the classy Weston Dukes, conquerors of Brampton in the Big Six. Stories up around Dixie way were to the effect the Dukes are not as strong as the team of last year. Even Percy Topping, Duke's manager, who arranged the playdown dates with Manager Cook, remarked: "You'll probably beat us in Belleville Saturday night, but after that we'll give you a run for it." And the lump in his cheek was not "chawin'."

Weston opens the semi-finals best-of-seven here Saturday night.

Two Fast Goals in 1st Period Pave Way to Fourth Victory; 'Turk' Barclay Hero of Piece

By GEO. H. CARVER
(Sports Editor)

DIXIE, Ont. — Featured by the sensational play of goalie "Turk" Barclay and an all-round outstanding defensive effort, the Belleville Black Hawks finally turned the tables on the Dixie Flashers here last night whipping them 5-3 to take the junior "B" quarter finals round four games to two.

The Hawks now meet the Weston Dukes in a best-of-seven semi-finals series with the first game scheduled for Memorial Arena, Belleville, next Saturday night. The second game is in Weston next Monday night, the third in Belleville Wednesday and the fourth in Weston on Friday. The winners will meet the victors of the other semi-final bracket, either Waterloo or Seaforth, for the provincial title.

Last night's victory was the first of the series scored by either team on the other's ice. Previously, the Hawks had won three in Belleville and the Flashers two on their home ice.

Behind the Hatchet

The teams, bitter rivals in a keen series, buried the hatchet immediately the siren shrilled to end the game. The Hawks literally mobbed their popular goalie and the Flashers, like the true young sportsmen they are, gathered around the Hawks in centre ice and offered them back-slapping congratulations.

"And," laughed Coach Flash Holbert in defeat, "I hope you beat the pants off the Dukes!"

Actually and in fairness to the Flashers, they deserved a better fate. And they, like the Hawks, a little more polish and finesse when in front of the Hawks' goal the story may have had a different ending. Barclay was sensational at times as the desperate bonetirers, defeat and elimination staring them in the face, found the Hawks lurking behind their blueline time and again.

Gerry Goyer played the best game of his junior "B" career and with his defensive mates turned back many a Dixie threat especially when the Hawks were shorthanded and that happened aplenty. Fifteen penalties were handed out by Referee Ken Holmshaw and Jack Shropshire, eleven of them going to the Hawks. Only once was the Hawks' checking that the Flashers were unable to capitalize on their extra manpower, twice during the game the Hawks were two men short but Barclay, Goyer and pals held the Port successfully. The Flashers have not scored a goal in their last fourteen games while the opposition had a man in the goosegow. The penalties were all minor affairs, some of them of the cheap variety.

The Flashers fired a puck in the second period that they claimed went in the net. The goal-judge flicked the light then as play resumed, he put it on for keeps. Referee Holmshaw, however, ruled the puck had hit the post and careened off into play. Nine hundred howling fans disagreed.

Archie Gets His First

And another feature of the game was the first goal of the season scored by Archie Stocco. The blonde defenceman fired the biscuit home for the Hawks' third goal in the second period when Ron Halstead tipped the blast, and he almost stared in surprise as the red light flashed. His mates pounded his back at centre ice and the youngster yelled, "Goshalmighty, I got a goal."

Two quick shots in the first period gave the Hawks a substantial lead. George Jacklin grabbed the puck on the second play of the game ripped it down the ice and scored while the Dixie fans sat stunned. Three minutes later Davey Jones broke away with Gilmour and Thornton, the tall centre, made no mistake to put the Hawks two up.

Dixie took over and ganged the Hawks' net after Stocco got the gate but Barclay kicked out everything they tossed at him. They were working in too close and the packed Hawk defence hurled them back time and again.

The Hawks were dangerous with the line of Halstead, Hull and Jacklin flying. They forayed in several times and Clementa in the Flashers' nets had to be good. He kicked them out from all angles. At the eight minutes mark the Dixie-land "gangers" roared in on the attack and the crowd stood up its feet as Jones drew beat Barclay from close in. Gordaneer and Copeland were in on the play, Hull followed Stocco to the pen after the latter got his "inaugural" but the Hawks' defence was airtight. Halstead suffered an injured shoulder and retired from the game to get medical attention. The extent of his injury was not known. Davey Jones turned sick, and he too retired from active service in the second period.

Reynolds again reduced the Hawk lead to a single goal when he slithered the puck from the blueline. It never left the ice in a perfect screen shot that the "Turk" never saw until it rattled the twine.

Hull Gets Two

The Flashers roared back in the third period and hemmed the Hawks in their goal mouth for minutes at a time, but again the hard-checking of the second and third lines plus Mr. Barclay held them off. Three minutes had gone when Dougie Hull, on a goal mouth scramble, flicked the biscuit home to give the Hawks a 4-2 lead.

The desperate Flashers poured in to the attack and the disputed goal resulted. Delbosco and Stocco went off within a minute of each other but the Dixie boys couldn't get the rubber past Barclay. Hull broke away, grabbed a loose goal-mouth puck and fired home the insurance marker that gave the Hawks the nod. The Flashers' efforts were rewarded when Vic Webster scored on a three-man foray with brother Bruce and Boncardo to whittle the score to 5-3. And that's the way it ended.

Reynolds scored two of the Flashers' goals, with Copeland drawing two assists. Webster got Dixie's other. Hull with a pair paced the Hawks offensive with Jacklin, Jones and Stocco accounting for the others. Barclay and Goyer definitely stole the Hawks' thunder with Herndon coming up with a good effort as did Stocco and Jacklin.

The teams:

Belleville: Goal, Barclay; defence, Goyer, Stocco; Green, Delbosco; forwards, Halstead, Jacklin, Jones, Thornton, Gilmour, Brant, Hermiston, Casey, Reynolds.

Dixie: Goal, Clements; defence, B. Webster, Boncardo, Gordaneer; forwards, Bruce Reynolds, Copeland Gibb, Bellehumer, Bruce Webster, Bain, Sicinski, Henry, Boehnert, Mitchell.

Pacific Coast League Opens For 52nd Year

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The Pacific Coast League, now 51 years old, begins another campaign today with indications pointing to a close race among three or four teams and three new managers on the scene—Bobby Bragan at Hollywood, Augie Galan at Oakland and Gene Desautels at Sacramento.

The 1952 champion Hollywood Stars are guests at San Diego in a day-night doubleheader with Lefty O'Doul's Padres; Portland Beavers oppose Los Angeles here tonight; San Francisco Seals invade Sacramento for an afternoon contest, and Seattle Rainiers visit Oakland Acorns tonight.

The PCL is beginning its first year in what is known as open classification, which ranks it between the majors and the triple-A organizations. The league now is exempt from the major league draft.

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN

by Elmer Ferguson

This column wouldn't think of becoming involved in any arguments concerning the hitherto history of hockey. That's a topic too controversial for our placid existence.

But one "first" and an important one, in the history of hockey in this Dominion, we must hand to Sault Ste. Marie. It was the first Canadian city to have a professional hockey team. For long before the old National Hockey Association was organized, preceding the present National League, the Soo was a member of the Professional International League, formed in 1904. The two Soos, Portage Lake and Calumet in Michigan, along with Houghton, constituted the first line-up of this league, later joined by the Houghton, Michigan, Club.

Those were the days of real sport in hockey. The Canadian Soo Club was formed of four sportsmen of the city, of whom John F. Mooney and George S. Cowie are still living. These four sportsmen put up $250. each for the club for the year. The Players' salaries were then from $20. to $25., per week, with the added inducement that overseas sticks and skates were free. And some names that are legendary in Canada's hockey annals today dotted the rosters of these clubs—names such as "Cyclone" Taylor, Newsy Lalonde, Jack Laviolette, Didier Pitre, Hod Stuart, a hockey immortal, manager and player for Pittsburgh, Jimmy Gardner, Con Corbeau, and a dozen more.

The Canadian Soo team on one occasion was forced to break through the salary limit of $35. The club had suffered a great many injuries, and as a daring replacement, it was decided to secure Newsy Lalonde. Newsy came high. He asked for $50. per week for four weeks and, sportingly, the club agreed to pay. The train bearing the great Lalonde to the Soo arrived in the night of the big game, three hours late. Lalonde stepped off, dressed in a fine suit of clothes and, as his identity was incognito, scored three goals, and not until the next day did the identity of this wonder of the ice become known.

Sault Ste. Marie was just a small town in those days. It had not yet amalgamated with Steelton and the combined population did not exceed 9,000. But interest in hockey ran high, as it still does in this sporting centre, which regularly sends players to the Ontario Hockey League. In later days it developed the great Sault Greyhounds that have won their share of amateur championships. The spirit that sponsored a professional team, whose roster included many of the greats of hockey in a league of amateurs, far beyond normal expectations, still carries on around the Sault, producing great hockey, fine players and enthusiastic crowds. These crowds are more orderly, no doubt, than those who staged, the famous post-game mob battles of the turn of the century, but just as keen.

Wily Veteran Trio of Schmidt, Dumart and Klukay will Try Again to Stop Wings' Sharpies

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Twice in a row Boston Bruins have fooled up the greatest scoring machine in hockey-dom hockey. Tonight they'll try to do it again.

The wily veteran trio of Milt Schmidt, Woody Dumart and Joe Klukay again will be host to hated Detroit Red Wings' sharpshooting threesome of Marty Pavelich, Gordie Howe and Ted Lindsay, with whom they have practically lived in the last two games of the Stanley Cup series.

Thanks to their assiduous attentions, the Wings' biggest guns have been silent and the Bruins lead the National Hockey League playoffs 2-0 in the best-of-seven semi-final.

At Chicago, the fourth-place Black Hawks will try to draw level with Montreal Canadiens, who whipped them twice in a row before finding their first setback on Chicago Ice Sunday night.

The Hawk victory was their first in 11 playoff meetings with the Montreaers and coach Sid Abel hopes the string will end or produce another win tonight.

The busiest man in Boston undoubtedly will be Bruin goalie Sugar Jim Henry, who stopped a total of 85-odd Detroit shots in marking up his two victories. The Bruins' opportunist style is less wearing on Terry Sawchuk, who customarily handles about half as many Boston drives at the Detroit end.

Maritimes Have Hockey Troubles

HALIFAX (CP)—President J. Elliott Hudson of the Maritime Major Hockey League called on the Maritime Amateur Hockey Association Monday night to reach a decision on the tangled league semi-finals or the MAHA "may well be responsible for the death knell of major hockey in the Maritimes'

He made the statement in a telegram to Walter Lawlor of Charlottetown, MAHA president.

Hudson wired Lawlor that he was calling an emergency meeting here today and recommended "in the interest of major hockey" that an MAHA executive meeting be called here at the same time.

The regular best-of-nine semi-finals, which Charlottetown Islanders won from Glace Bay Miners on Saturday night, were washed out at a league meeting Sunday after the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association ruled that Erwin Grosse, a Charlottetown import, was ineligible.

Instead the league ordered a two-game, total-goal series between the two clubs. Charlottetown protested the decision and the MAHA upheld its appeal without presenting an alternative proposal.

Grapefruit Loops Led by Detroit And Brooklyn

By ED CORRIGAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

Detroit first and New York Yankees in the second division in the American League!

Pittsburgh Pirates second and St. Louis Cardinals last in the National League!

Impossible?

Probably during the regular season, but this is Grapefruit League play where the impossible is possible. And that's just how things are now.

The only team that looks as if it might be in its normal place is Brooklyn, which is leading the National league with 15 victories and seven defeats. The Pirates are 4½ games behind followed by Chicago Cubs, Milwaukee Braves, Cincinnati Reds, Philadelphia Phillies, New York Giants and the Cardinals.

Following Detroit in the American are St. Louis Browns, Washington Senators, Cleveland Indians, Yankees, Chicago White Sox, Philadelphia A's and Boston Red Sox.

The Tigers, with a 13-5 record for the spring camp with the opening of the regular season less than two weeks away—show a percentage of .706.

Sudbury Wolves Using New Goalie Hold Dutchies to Three-All Draw

SUDBURY (CP)—It took an oxygen tank and a new goaltender to stop Kitchener-Waterloo's winning streak. But Sudbury didn't win either.

The game Monday night, third in a best-of-seven Eastern Canada senior hockey semi-final, ended in a 3-3 overtime tie. The Dutchmen, Southern Ontario champions, lead the series 2-0 with one game tied. The next two games will be played here tonight and Thursday.

The jinx on the team scoring the first goal of the game continued. In the first two games the Wolves scored the first goals and were unable to win. Monday night Kitchener counted first.

The Wolves, using an oxygen tank as a recuperative measure for the first time, outshot and outplayed the Dutchmen most of the game. They showed improvement over the first two games of the series in Kitchener last week when the Dutchmen scored 4-2 and 8-3 victories.

Borrow Goalie

Sudbury also borrowed goaltender Bobby Gillson, an opponent of the Dutchmen all season while playing with Owen Sound Mercurys in the Ontario Hockey Association's Senior A series.

Dutchmen started the scoring when Bobby Schnurr tallied at 4:28 of the opening period. Four minutes later the Wolves tied it up. Yacker Flynn picked up a relay from Roly McLenahan in front of the net and drilled in a short shot. Kitchener was two men short.

It appeared that the Dutchmen were heading for their third victory when Howie Lee and Doug Verity sent them ahead 3-1 in the second period. Two Sudbury forwards, Marty Burton and Mauno Kauppi, went off for repairs in the second but returned late in the game. Burton was hit on the knee by team-mate Lennie Specik's blue-line shot and Kauppi was clipped on the head by a high stick.

A little more than half of the third period was finished when Flynn roared back with his second tally of the night to bring the Wolves to within one goal of Kitchener's lead. Only minute and eight seconds before the final whistle Roly McLenahan tied the score while Kitchener's Jack McKeown was sitting out a hooking penalty.

Both coaches, especially the Wolves, had great chances to break the deadlock in the overtime session but the score was unchanged.

Referees Andy Bellemer and Gus Flager had an easy night, handing out 20 penalties, including two 10-minute misconduct spells to Wolves in the overtime period. The minor penalties were split evenly, each team drawing nine.

Galt's Binkley Wins MVP Trophy

GALT (CP) — Goaltender Les Binkley of Galt Black Hawks of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series has been awarded the Bellmore Trophy after being voted the most valuable player to the team during the last season.

The presentation was made at a banquet which marked the official disbandment of the Hawks, who were eliminated from the OHA Junior A playoffs by Toronto St. Michael's.

Jim McBurney, runner-up to Bob Attersley of Oshawa Generals as the most valuable player in the league and league-leading point-scorer, received the Joe Packer Trophy for being top scorer among the Galt players.

Stewart Defeats Sam Snead

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)—Earl Stewart Jr., 31-year-old Dallas, Tex., redhead, won the Greensboro Open golf tournament Monday with a par four on the 19th hole of a sudden-death playoff with Sam Snead.

The two had tied over 18 holes with two-under-par 68s. Doug Ford, Harrison, N.Y., and Art Wall, Jr., Honesdale, Pennsylvania, who tied with Stewart and Snead at 275 for 72 holes, dropped out after 18 More day. Ford scored even par 70 and Wall 72.

Stewart had never won a major tournament in his three previous years of circuit competition.

Royals Down Saskatoon 3-1

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

New Westminster Royals showed a complete reversal of form to defeat Saskatoon Quakers 3-1 in Portland, Ore., and win the best-of-seven Western Hockey League semi-finals Monday night. The Quakers now lead the series 2-1 after winning the first two games 4-2 and 11-4.

Bisho Boyer, playing coach Max McNab and Gord Fashoway notched the Royals' goals. Doug Bentley tallied for Saskatoon.

Saskatoon Quakers downed Edmonton Flyers 6-2 to square their best-of-five quarter-final series at two games apiece. Eric Solinzi and Steve Black paced the Stamps with two goals each. Pat Lundy and George Agar connected for the others. Ray Hannigan and Jim Anderson scored for Edmonton.

Hornets Oust Hershey Bears In Overtime

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Pittsburgh Hornets nosed out Hershey Bears 3-2 in an extra period Monday night to win the first round of the playoffs for the Calder Cup and the American Hockey League championship.

The Hornets made it three straight in the best-of-five series to eliminate the Bears.

Early in the extra period Johnny McLellan passed from behind the Bears net. The puck struck the back of Gordie Henry's skates and ricocheted into the Bears net for the winning goal.

The Bears hit hard in the opening period of the game at Hershey, and took a commanding lead on goals by Leo Labine, Corcoran and Gordie Wilson. Sabourin tallied for the Hornets.

In the second period Wilson added his second point to give the Bears a three-goal lead. Then the Hornets rallied and narrowed the scoring gap when Ray Tingvold and Bobby Solinger scored.

The third period had all the thrills in the book. Early in the period a hard scrimmage play sent both Hershey defencemen sprawling on the ice and Hugh Bolton walked in with the tying point. Then at 7:34 a hard shot from Danny Lewicki's stick bounced off Frank Martin's skates and into the Bears' net. But with less than two minutes to play, Sam Bellio scored from scrimmage for the Bears to tie the score.

Early in the extra period, McLellan's shot put the Hornets in front. With less than a minute to play Henry was withdrawn from the Bears' net. The strategy backfired because on the faceoff Solinger scored on the unguarded net.

Name Head For Empire Games

VANCOUVER (CP)—A manager will finally be chosen to lead preparations for the 1954 British Empire Games here, it was announced Monday.

He's Blair M. Clerk, 49-year-old director of the YMCA veterans welfare services, and a veteran of financial and publicity campaigns throughout North America.

He won unanimous approval of the games' permanent committee, which debated more than 36 applications. Official approval of Games committee proper and Mayor Fred Hume is considered a formality.

Clerk expects to take over the post next week.

The first step he will take, he said, will be "to pull all the loose ends together" and begin carrying out plans laid down by the BEG directors.

Decision Reserved

COLLINGWOOD (CP) — Magistrate Gordon Martin reserved decision Monday in a preliminary hearing of a manslaughter charge against 18-year-old Walter Finn of Aurora, held in connection with the death of Robert Gillies, 17-year-old Collingwood hockey player.

Gillies died March 6, a few hours after he was injured in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior C playoff between Aurora and Collingwood. Finn was given a match penalty for checking Gillies into the boards.

George Gordon, a goal judge at the game, testified Monday he had overheard Finn tell the Aurora goalkeeper several times that he was going to "start a brawl."

Montreal Canadiens Voted Most Colorful N.H.L. Team

This story is the last of a Canadian Press series on outstanding players and teams in the National Hockey League. Selections were made in a poll of sports writers and sportscasters in NHL cities.

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—The National Hockey League's most colorful team? Montreal Canadiens by a whopping majority.

That's the way sports writers and sportscasters of the six NHL cities saw it in a Canadian Press poll. And the overwhelming margin given the Montrealers over Detroit Red Wings and Toronto Maple Leafs—only other clubs to receive votes—stamped the red, blue and white club as the greatest boon to box-offices in the game.

A big measure of credit for Canadiens' popularity should go to Maurice Richard, voted the most colorful guy in the game. The Rocket won it easily over Gordie Howe of Detroit and Milt Schmidt of Boston Bruins, the only others receiving a vote.

Popular Team

The writers and announcers probably had their eyes on the standing-room only accommodations at Montreal Forum and on the attendance figures of other NHL cities when Canadiens were playing.

The reason was summed up neatly by Vince Lunny, sports editor of the Montreal Herald, with this observation: Canadiens would be the most colorful, they outdraw all other clubs on the road." The same view was expressed by Scotty O'Meara, Montreal Star sports editor.

Sportscaster Frank Fallon of WHEK, Boston; Andy O'Brien of Weekend Magazine, and sportscaster Frank Starr of CJAD, Montreal, were among many who saw O'Meara, but others emphasized the color of Canadiens players.

"Personalities," was the one-word description of Canadiens by John Gallagher of the Boston Daily Record. "Fast and flashy," said Dana Mosher of the New York Daily News. "They have every type of player out there," observed sportscaster Foster Hewitt of CKFH, Toronto.

"Detroit's workmanlike, efficient; so is Montreal—but Canadiens are always a rough, tough, hustling, spectacular crew who will fist fight when necessary," summed up Dan Desmond of the Chicago Herald-American.

Wide-Open Style

"They are the most colorful because of their wide-open play," said Red Burnett of the Toronto Daily Star.

Another Canadiens supporter was Nick De Nunzo of the Boston Traveler who added a good word for coach Dick Irvin: "Canadiens are the most colorful because Irvin works on making them colorful," he said.

Joe Falls of The Associated Press, Detroit, and sportscaster Phil Rose of CHUM, Toronto, were the only selectors to pick the Leafs. They're sort of like the "Pride of the Yankees," the AP writer said. "If you are a Maple Leaf you have to be good and rough."

Voting for the Red Wings were Bobby Hewitson, sports editor of the Toronto Telegram; Marshall Dann, Detroit Free Press; Ben Olan, The Associated Press, New York; Jack Chevigny, Black Hawk playing-coach and former Wings player, and sportscaster Ward Wilson of WMGM, New York.

Langlois Wins Over Jim Beau

BROOKLYN (AP)—Pierre Langlois of France, the world's fourth ranking middleweight, scored a unanimous 10-round decision over Jimmy Beau of New Canaan, Conn., in a televised fight at Eastern Parkway Arena Monday night. Langlois, a 12-5 favorite weighed 161 to 156 for Beau.

Langlois came back strong after taking all Beau had to offer in the first three rounds and outhustled the American through the rest of the fight.

There were no knockdowns although Beau slipped to the canvas in the 10th.

Judge Charlie Shortell scored the bout 7-3 for Langlois. Judge Artie Aidala saw it 5-5 but gave the Frenchman an 8-7 edge in points while referee George Walsh scored it 5-4-1 for Langlois.

Two Jockeys Injured

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP)—Two jockeys are in hospital with injuries suffered during Monday's racing program at nearby Gulfstream Park.

Gerald Porch, 30, received three broken ribs and possible internal injuries when his mount, Doctor Beck, crashed against the outside rail and fell over onto the grass.

Steve Brooks, 32, was thrown from Ten Stone. He suffered a fractured collar bone.

Hawks, Habs European Trip Called Off

CHICAGO (AP) — A proposed European exhibition hockey tour by Chicago Black Hawks and Montreal Canadiens was called off Monday.

Bill Tobin, Hawks general manager, said playing dates on the continent could not be scheduled.

"Originally, the tour was set up for Paris, Germany and Switzerland," he said. "But now all we can get are 10 dates in England, and after we had finished there we would have to wait two weeks to get passage back home.

"The return home delay would be necessary because the tour was planned on a round-trip arrangement."

Frank Selke, general manager of the Canadiens, said he would not seek another team for the trip, scheduled to start April 24 from Montreal.

"I guess it's all off," he said.

Name Western Football 'Boss'

WINNIPEG (CP)—A quiet-spoken Winnipeg lawyer will take over one of Western Canada's toughest football jobs Wednesday.

Sidney Spence, 48, Monday was named commissioner of the Western Interprovincial Football Union. He succeeds Kent Phillips of Saskatoon.

He will be responsible only to the presidents of WIFU teams. His duties include handling player registration, negotiation lists, assigning officials, arbitrating disputes and he has the power to suspend and fine teams or individuals to a $1,000 maximum.

Franklins Edge Timmins Combines

GLACE BAY, N.S. (CP)—Northside Franklins took a 6-5 victory in overtime from Timmins-Porcupine Combines Monday night, their first win in the best-of-seven quarter-finals of the Eastern Canada Memorial Cup playdowns. The Combines lead the series 2-1, with one game tied.

The fourth game will be played Wednesday at Sydney.

Bert Hamilton, with the winning goal, his third of the night, at the 6:46 mark of an overtime session.

Franklins grabbed a first-period lead, Dicker McDonald and Aubrey Gordon matching Dalling's pair of tallies. Graham Towers and Flo Gurda scored for Combines.

The visitors tied it up in the second, holding Franklins scoreless while Rick Albert and Bill Viche beat Joey Collins.

Jackie Marcoux slipped a stinger past Art Mousley with the overtime session just 34 seconds old. Combines turned on the pressure and Graham Savord scored before Dalling broke it up.

Series Defaulted By Tamworth

TORONTO (CP)—As a result of a dispute in which charges of rough play were made, Tamworth has defaulted its Ontario Hockey Association intermediate A playoff final series to Orono, which will meet Bracebridge in the semi-final.

Orono won the opener 13-1 at Bellevilla Friday, Tamworth refused to play the second game, scheduled for Bowmanville Saturday night, and defaulted the game and the series after R. R. Devlin, Tamworth manager, asked the OHA for police protection against what he called "rough stuff that would leave us a bunch of cripples."

SAUER TO REMAIN OUT

MESA, Ariz. (AP)—Injured Hank Sauer, the National League's most valuable player last season, will miss the Chicago Cubs' 1953 opener against Cincinnati April 14, X-rays of his fractured right finger Monday disclosed the digit still is not healing as shattered. A doctor said Sauer will be out for at least three more weeks.

Sedgman Stops Kramer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Australian Frank Sedgman stopped Jack Kramer 6-4, 6-4 in their pro tennis appearance here Monday night. Kramer now leads in their cross-country duel 26-23.

Pancho Segura of Ecuador downed Australian Ken McGregor 6-2, 6-4, making it 45-14 in his favor.

The Aussies, still holding a big lead in doubles play, went down before Kramer and Segura 6-4, 6-2 for a 33-26 edge.

Akoolap Oxpert cannot resist the crushing weight of a hand that looks big. He must take it to slam or bust. And the funny part of it is that he often makes it.

There was the tournament deal shown here:

NORTH
♠ A K J 9 6
♥ Q 10
♦ 7 6 4
♣ 7 6 2

WEST
♠ Q 8 5 2
♥ 7 3
♦ K 5
♣ K Q J 9 3

EAST
♠ 10 6 3
♥ 9 8
♦ T 10 9 3 2
♣ 10 5 4

SOUTH
♠ A 7
♥ A K J 6 5 4 2
♦ A Q 8
♣ A 8

The bidding went like this:

South	North
1 H	1 S
3 H	3 S
4 NT	5 H
6 H	Pass

Ordinarily a player should not invite slam information until he has discovered a trump fit. This does not always apply, however, when he has an independent suit of his own.

Four no-trump is the ace and kings asker. Five hearts in reply is the signal for showing one ace and one king. This is how south finds out that the opponents have two kings.

The two kings held by opponents might well be enough to down a small slam. So, caution would advise south to stop at five hearts. But a good player dare not be too cautious.

Most of the pairs in this match who got that far went a step further and landed in the small slam contract or six hearts. This is one of those cases where a slam should be tried.

While there is such a thing as being too cautious there is also such a thing as being overly bold. And some bridge players are that way. Because, one south even went to seven hearts.

Opening lead in nearly all cases was the club king from west. All it takes is a little careful play to make six. And a flier makes seven. Plant your feet on a cloud and do it.

AT THE CAPITOL — Howard Hill, world's greatest archer who ever lived, demonstrates how it's done with a bow and arrow, his favorite ancient weapon. The scene is from "Timbo" opening Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Capitol Theatre. Filmed in Africa and Arabian Color, it is directed and brought to the screen in Amaco scope. Produced and directed by Hill, the film is distributed by RKO Radio. On the same program is "The Half Breed" in CinemaScope. Both hits are in color and first city showings.

AT THE CAPITOL — Robert Young and Janis Carter decide to remain in the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police, as shown in Jack Portel, in the RKO Radio thriller, in color by Technicolor. On the same program in color "Tembo" first wild animal show of the new season, featuring Howard Hill of bow-and-arrow fame. Both hits are first city showings.

AT THE BELLE—Peter Lawford and Janice Rule, one of M.G.M.'s prettiest and most talented personalities are the honeymooners of Rogue's March," M.G.M.'s new drama of romance, adventure and excitement, which opens today at the Belle Theatre. Richard Greene also stars in the dramatic story of an English army captain accused of treason. A special 35 minute short subject is M.G.M.'s "The Hoaxters", the inside story of the world's greatest fraud.

AT THE McCARTHY — Glori-Jean seems in the center of hilarious situations in Universal-International's riotous comedy, "Bonzo Goes to College" coming tonight at the Odeon Theatre, Trenton, in which she co-stars with Maureen O'Sullivan, Charles Drake, Edmund Gwenn and the celebrated chimpanzee.

Village Township Over-Subscribes Quota For C.N.I.B. Centre

Madoc — Madoc Village and township have oversubscribed its quota of $2,000 for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind campaign for the service centre to be built in Kingston by 25 per cent.

Other Donations

The general canvass in the town netted $778 while the township gave $5.25 along with a $200 grant from the township. The remainder of $2,570 collected was made up by donations from the schools, service clubs, fraternal organizations, women's clubs army and navy and corporations.

Among those attending the presbyterial meeting of the United Church held in Holloway Street United Church, Belleville, this week were Mrs. and Mrs. F. J. Lane, Mrs. B. Johnson, Mrs. Brintnell, Mrs. Tanner, Mrs. F. H. Nayler, Mrs. D. Carman, Mrs. A. Empey, Mrs. N. Hoard, Mrs. R. Moore, Mrs. K. Burnside and Miss Holmes.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Moffit, of Coe Hill are visiting Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Ashley.

Mrs. James Caughey, of Bloomfield, Prince Edward County spent Friday with relatives in Madoc and Marmora.

Miss Jerdi Aylsworth is visiting friends in Bancroft.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Noble of Toronto, are spending a few days with Mrs. Walter Whytock.

MARMORA

Marmora—Well attended services were held at St. Andrew's United Church on Sunday. In the morning the Sacrament of Holy Communion was administered by the pastor, Rev. K. J. Crawford, B.A., B.D.

The anthem was "Easter Dawning", Fervor. The sermon subject was "The Last Supper." The evening service was under the direction of St. Andrew's W.M.S. The Invocation was taken by the president, Mrs. W. Topper. Prayers were offered by Mrs. J. Sproul.

Messrs. Barbara and Mary Meiklejohn rendered the duet, "I Know That My Redeemed Liveth" by Lawrent.

Mrs. J. Bateman read the scripture lesson. The offering was taken by Mrs. G. Jarvis and Miss D. Airhart. Rev. K. J. Crawford played Handel's "Largo" as a violin solo, with Mrs. A. F. Fraser accompanying on the organ.

Colored slides "From Sea to Sea With the United Church" were also shown by Rev. Crawford.

The service closed by Mrs. Topper. Hymns of a missionary character were used in course of the service.

St. Paul's parish hall was the scene on Saturday afternoon of a rummage sale, a sale of homecooking and an afternoon tea sponsored by the Ladies' Guild.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Miller of Sutton, called on Mrs. R. G. Winters on Thursday afternoon.

Mr. W. J. Coffin, accompanied by reader, officiated at St. Peter's Quarterly Service on Sunday afternoon.

The weekly Lenten evening service at St. Paul's next Wednesday is being held at 8 p.m. instead of 7.30 p.m. Good Friday morning a service is being held at 10 a.m. with Rev. T. H. Good, rector of Madoc, officiating.

There was a good attendance at St. Paul's on Sunday morning. The rector Canon A. H. Sowerby preached an appropriate Palm Sunday sermon and the organist Mrs. L. R. Rundle sang "The Palms."

Rev. K. J. Crawford is conducting evening services at St. Andrew's in Holy week. On Wednesday evening his subject will be "Gethsemane"; on Thursday evening, "On Trial" and on Friday evening, "The Cross."

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes, and find what your outlook is according to the stars.

FOR WEDNESDAY, APRIL 1, 1953.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Pay bills, answer due correspondence, and tend to other such details. It's that sort of day. It's just the time to do some planning.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Yours is one of the highly intellectual Zodiacal Signs. You can achieve while others are still fathoming things; on other hand, you tend to neglect opportunities. Forward!

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Recollect awhile, re-trace steps to ascertain whether you can improve, possibly save energy or time. Keep that disposition in order, too.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Those born at the beginning of one Sign, or the end of another, have characteristics of both blended. Mind changeableness, alienations now.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo)—Don't let little things upset you. Be moderate in demands and thankful for favors, big or small. Don't dissipate vitality.

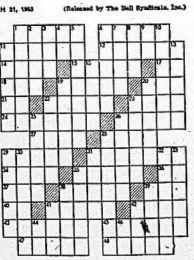
August 24 to September 23 (Virgo)—Neatness and accuracy reach their heights in Virgo, but bursts into song are being fantastical and these usual assets can turn into faults. Look ahead, hopefully, prayerfully.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—If you cannot go all you hoped to do, or find that obstacles have upset your time-table, be not aggravated nor lose heart. Keep smiling.

October 24 to November 23 (Scorpio)—Daring is in order if its purpose is beneficial to some good cause. You like challenge; here's your time! Don't permit doubters to defeat your ambition.

November 24 to December 22 (Sagittarius) — Benefic aspects among your Sign; day's only unfriendly one is Mars warning about temper, disposition, etc. Nuf said.

December 22 to January 21 (Capricorn)—Read Virgo — it suit you dependable folks for today. No worrying; don't fret if you cannot attain what you expect.



January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—You can benefit if you follow advice to Leo and Sagittarius now. Stay efficient by staying calm; you will achieve more.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces) — Scales up in your favor but you will have to be on your toes. Families matters, daily routine sponsored most.

YOU BORN TODAY have a flair for detail, can improve old methods or create new ones of your own. Are enterprising, clever, but may hinder your own advancement by not taking sound suggestions, or following wise advice. Take setbacks philosophically. Never permit jealousy to take hold. Pray when troubled.

W. I. Meeting

On Wednesday the Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. S. G. Meiklejohn with a good attendance of members and seven visitors.

The president Mrs. C. Gordanier, presided and opened the meeting as usual. In the absence of Mrs. W. J. Ireland, Mrs. Cosby acted as secretary and attended all business matters. Two books were sent to the camp in Korea.

Mrs. A. Reid, Mrs. Cosby were to act as a committee to arrange the date of the next social meeting. Mrs. Beatty district president, was present, and gave a splendid address on W.I. work and stressed that all should have their names on mail boxes and have village signs erected with one, to help to guide tourists. The meeting of district directors will be held on April 7, at the home of Mrs. Beatty. The 24th district annual convention will be held on May 24 at Tweed. Mrs. Spry convener for community activities was in charge of the program; readings were given by Mrs. Mumby, Mrs. G. Webb and Mrs. Cosby.

Mrs. G. Meiklejohn was in charge of the lunch and gave a splendid address on "Advertising" and anything to help the community and keg in a discussion.

Mrs. J. McKeown gave a quilt top she had pieced to be quilted at the home of Mrs. T. McKeown.

Mrs. Moon of Madoc gave an interesting talk on W. I. work which was enjoyed by all.

At the close of the meeting Mrs. Meiklejohn and assistants served refreshments.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. James Spry.

Liberal, C.C.F. Parties Seeking New Leaders Before B.C. Vote

VICTORIA (CP)—British Columbia's four major political parties swung into action during the week-end following word from Premier Bennett that a provincial election will be held on or before June 15.

The premier's announcement came after dissolution of the 23rd legislature Saturday by Lieutenant-Governor Clarence Wallace. The lieutenant-governor opened a bid by the CCF to form an administration following defeat of the minority Social Credit government on the floor of the House last Tuesday night.

A meeting of B.C. Liberals Saturday decided to hold a provincial convention in Vancouver April 8 to elect a leader to succeed former premier Byron Johnson and complete their election platform.

The meeting was attended by Mr. Johnson, who has announced his intention of stepping down as leader, and Fisheries Minister James Sinclair, representing the federal party.

At a quarterly executive meeting of the Progressive Conservative party, Deane Finlayson, youthful provincial leader, said "things have never looked so good for the Conservative party in B.C." Mr. Finlayson, 33, is expected to contest the Oak Bay riding in the election.

First item of business at the provincial CCF convention at Vancouver April 10-12 will be the resignation of party leader Harold Winch, announced Saturday.

Mr. Winch, member of the House for 20 years, said he had suffered his first attack because "I'm tired." Randolph Harding, CCF member for Kaslo-Slocan, said Mr. Winch had submitted his resignation "some days ago" and that it had been referred to the convention.

Earlier in the day Mr. Winch had gone to the lieutenant-governor to ask that the CCF be allowed to form a government. Mr. Winch told the lieutenant-governor a CCF government would deal strictly with public business and would not introduce socialist policies prior to an election.

Mr. Winch said the lieutenant-governor had told him he could not ask the CCF to form a government unless it could command an over-all majority. The balance-of-power Liberals had indicated they would not support the CCF.

C.N.R. Planning To Celebrate 100th Anniversary

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian National Railways is planning to celebrate the 100th anniversary of Ontario's first railway by creating a "museum on wheels."

On May 16 a museum train will run 50 miles from Toronto to Allandale, Ont., over the route followed 100 years ago by the Ontario, Simcoe and Huron Railway, now incorporated into the CNR system.

The train will consist of three locomotives and six cars and will contain hundreds of exhibits relating to railroading in Canada back to 1853. It will be staffed by retired railwaymen wearing uniforms similar to those worn on the O.S. and H.'s first run.

Mogul No. 674, of 1899, the oldest locomotive still operating on the CNR, will haul the train. Also on display will be woodcutter No. 40, first standard-gauge engine ordered by the Grand Trunk Railway and the pride of railroading in 1872, and a saddle tank switcher of 1894.

Bronze Reminder

Only a bronze plaque at the entrance of Toronto's Union Station now commemorates the old "iron, straw and hay railway" which was built as a part of a projected railway to "avoid the circuitous and dangerous route" for waterborne traffic via Lake Erie and Lake Huron.

"Varnish hoses" and "snoozers," as railroaders called Ontario's first coaches and sleepers, have been restored to their original appearance and included in the museum train. The old menus in a plush and ornate dining-car unit of 1899 prove that the appetites could be satisfied at low prices.

Other exhibits, carefully authenticated by research, will range from tickets, rails, Bible racks and pictures, to the power plant of the first diesel car in North America.

The museum train will be in Quebec in July and in Toronto from Aug. 28 to Sept. 1, at the Canadian National Exhibition. Late in September it will move from Toronto over the original lines of the former Great Western Railway which now is part of the Canadian National Railways.

Bahati African Location Raided By Police Squads

By RONALD BATCHELOR

NAIROBI, Kenya (Reuters)—Hundreds of police raided the nearby Bahati African location before dawn today and started screening about 15,000 Africans.

Police said later more than 500 Africans were identified as criminals wanted for murder, arson and administering the white blood of Mau oath.

Another 700 were detained because they were absent from their reserves without passes.

The entire Bahati area was sealed off for seven hours. Those interested were flown in to a special detention camp, singing and shouting defiantly.

Troops hunting the Mau Mau gang which attacked Naivasha police station Thursday night and made off with sub-machine-guns and other arms Sunday ambushed some of the gang, killing one who was found clasping a rifle and stolen machine-guns. A rifle and more than 100 rounds of ammunition also were found.

Two other terrorists were killed Saturday when they attacked an army patrol in the Nyeri district.

Mau Mau raiders ambushed a Kikuyu woman in the Fort Hall district and killed two of his escort.

A former Canadian mountie is one of the men leading the drive to catch the terrorists responsible for the massacre of scores of Kikuyu natives in the last few days.

John Timmerman...a native of Canada, is assistant police commissioner in Nairobi directing the hunt for the anti-white terrorists. He was formerly an RCMP corporal.

15TH TRAFFIC DEATH

TORONTO (CP)—John Burian, 45, died Monday an hour after suffering a skull fracture in an automobile accident. It was Toronto's 15th traffic fatality of 1953. At this time last year, Toronto had 11 traffic fatalities.

PLAN WILD LIFE WEEK

KINGSVILLE (CP)—Plans are being completed at the famed Jack Miner bird sanctuary here for the observance of National Wild Life Week April 5-11. Sponsored by the Jack Miner foundation and authorized by an act of Parliament, the week is designed to awaken public interest in the country's wild life and natural resources.

BROKE LORD'S DAY ACT

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP)—Two Hamilton men were fined Monday for violating the Lord's Day Act by shipping bags of waxed paper from Rockwood to Brooklyn, N.Y., on a Sunday. Stanley Wybrith and F. M. McArthur were fined $48 for operating two tractor trailer transports on the highway on a Sunday. Fines of $23 each were levied on three charges.

put the "B" on chore work

The Model B is large enough for full-sized loads, yet it's small enough for chore work around barns, feedlots, inside of buildings. It's just right for hauling, mowing, orchard work, a dozen other jobs.

Here's a tractor that will crawl down on wasted time . . . put more jobs under power. If good hired help is scarce, let the Model B replace hand work and leg work.

Big 123-cubic inch engine; belt pulley, hydraulic lift, and power take-off optional. A full line of mounted implements to speed your work the year around. Find out what the Model B can do for you. Stop in and talk to us.

Search For a Hero

By Thomas Hal Phillips

At exactly 1400 we were underway for Larcone. The sea was wonderfully calm and we were close enough in shore to see the green hills of winter, bright in the warm sunshine. It was a glorious day to die and I was not afraid, then. I was a part of it, a part of the great machinery of war which I had known so well from lamp-lighted pages. The sea to our left was so vast, the hills to our right were so green, and the sun was so bright that I could feel my heart pounding. I imagined that Wallace and William must have felt that way just before a big game.

I was the taiker, standing on the conn to the left of the captain, repeating all of his orders to Blackwell, who repeated them over the public address system. Now and then I glanced down to B deck where Bert was standing by as loader for the No. 2 20mm., and once, by semaphore, I sent him a message to observe the high position I held while he was a mere loader.

"Check handy-billies!"

A handy-billy, a small pump with a gasoline motor, was the most temperamental of all equipment. It always worked except during emergencies and inspections by "bird-dogs" — those high-ranking naval officers who paid unexpected visits to ships at all hours of the day and night, entering a ship exactly the same way a bird dog enters a brier patch.

The captain had not heard the spurting of the No. 1 handy-billy, so he climbed up the side of the conn and leaned over. "Is it working?"

"No, sir."

"Don't you know we're in a state of emergency?"

"Yessir, but the handy - billy don't."

"That's not funny. Keep trying." He turned to me. "Pass the word for Mr. Belman to report at No. 1 handy-billy."

"Mr. Belman. Report to No. 1 handy-billy." It sounded like an emergency call for a doctor. I thought the captain was going to fall off the conn when he leaned over to watch manoeuvres below.

"Can we fix it?"

"Just a minute, sir," Mr. Belman said.

The captain climbed down and paced the conn, the way people will do when they cannot understand the simplest failure.

"A graduate of M.I.T. and can't fix a handy-billy." The captain spoke to Mr. Pruitt who had his binoculars trained over the bow. "A master's form M.I.T. What do you think of that?"

* * *

Mr. Pruitt did not answer. The captain climbed onto the edge of the conn again and called down, "You know this is an emergency?"

After a minute K-K looked up. "Captain, Mr. Belman says the handy-billy knows it but it don't give a hoot."

"Throw it over the side!"

Mr. Belman stood up. He was stocky, determined, sure of things; and the cleft that divided his chin seemed to indicate that he possessed two powers, either one of which was too much for an ordinary man. "What did you say, Captain?"

"I said throw it over the side." Mr. Belman picked it up and threw it overboard. He held the starting lanyard in his hand, a piece of rope the size of one's little finger and about five feet long. He looked up toward the conn and smiled—it was hard to believe he was only 24 years old. "I'll keep this. It might come in handy." Twirling the lanyard around his wrist, he went back toward the engine room.

The captain had total faith in charts. Blindly, we proceeded at one-third speed; the LCT's deployed at the proper time; our stern anchor was dropped; suddenly I felt myself pulled forward a little and heard the grind of the bottom on the sandbar. There was no sound of the enemy, only the sound of our engines churning ahead at one-third speed and the LCT's deploying to the left and right of us, and the crews hauling the ramps out halfway.

There had been only our own shell bursts on the gray rain-soaked slope ahead of us. Then the DE's moved in a little closer and fired a colored barrage which we called "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." I suppose that was to make sure the Germans did not overlook us.

We began to retract, which is easy to do if the anchor does not drag—a simple manoeuvre of backing at two-thirds speed and hauling in the anchor. Within 10 minutes we were clear of the beach, and one by one the LCT's slipped in behind us like mechanical toys. The rain had almost stopped.

The captain looked up, searching the sky, though it was still too dark to see all of the mast. "If we have a little bad weather going back, I could tell the Commander that handy-billy slid overboard."

To our left we could hear heavy guns that seemed almost upon us, and see pale flashes, like distant sheet lightning. They're awfully close," Blackwell said.

The captain shook his head. "No. Sound travels that way when it's damp. They're trying to break the German line now. If they don't break out, we'll have to land on Red Beach with ammunition."

"Let's pray for a breakthrough, Blackwell said.

"I never pray for things like that," the captain said, calmly and with decision.

There were two waves of planes. In the first instant they appeared like the shadows of mosquitoes against a bright wall; a moment later, like wild geese in quite a formation. The first wave of five broke toward the DE's; the second wave of three came toward us. I remember that the captain had my arm and was asking me, "What are they? What are they?" It was a signalman's business to identify a plane within one-tenth of a second. I knew perfectly well they were all ME 109's, but I could say only, "Germans!"

"Commence firing," Mr. Pruitt was altogether calm. Blackwell repeated the order.

The LCT's were deploying and we had taken a hard right rudder. There was a jolt and the planes were gone.

* * *

Our bow gun commenced to fire. A single plane, from the first wave, had made its turn from the DE's and was coming in low, strafing. Mr. Pruitt beat over, saying, "Look out!" The captain was still looking astern. As he turned he caught his side with a faint grin, not of pain so much as of surprise. He held onto my arm. I thought he was being funny; then at once we all knew he was hit. He leaned slowly against the conn and fainted.

We carried him down to B deck. Mr. Pruitt ordered everybody to stand clear except Farmer and Archie and me. I was already sick, and the wind was bringing the diesel fumes toward us. I closed my eyes and heard Farmer cutting and ripping the captain's uniform. I have never seen anybody die, I thought, I'm going to be sick. I saw Farmer get up and go talk to Mr. Belman, who had come to the conn.

"Should we take him to his cabin?"

"Not now, sir."

Behind me, somebody was saying, "Look here where the bullet went into the mast."

Farmer came back and knelt beside the captain; we could feel the slight pull as the ship increased speed. Kenny brought four or five blankets; we wrapped the captain in them and used one for a pillow. The sun was becoming warmer but the wind was stronger, for we were by then making 16 or 18 knots.

"I fainted," the captain said.

I was startled by the voice. I looked down, saw that the captain's eyes were half opened.

"You'll be all right," Farmer said.

"No. I'm going to die. If we'd gone to Bombo, we wouldn't be into this."

"That's right, Captain."

"Who else got hurt?"

"Nobody else."

* * *

"Nobody?" The captain was like a child who has been told to go somewhere alone. "Is that Don up there?"

"Yessir."

"How you doing up there, Donald Meadowcroft."

"I'm all right, sir."

"Reckon why it got me instead of you?"

"I don't know, sir."

"Because you're a good boy, that's why. Did it go clear through me? I'm going to die die. . . ". He closed his eyes for a minute. "What kind was it, Don?"

"ME 109, sir."

"You'd better take me down to my quarters. It's warmer there." He smiled, but the tears began to come out of his eyes and roll down across his temples. Then he was like a baby that has fallen, and can not quite decide whether to laugh or to cry. I had to look away. Farmer motioned for some of the men to bring a stretcher. We took the captain below and put him on his bunk. All the time we were moving him he kept his eyes closed tight, his face clenched, making his cheeks hollow. When we had finished, he looked up from his bunk and said, "That's why I joined the Navy instead of the Army—I wanted to die warm."

"You'll be all right," Farmer said. He whispered to Kenny to bring a sheet.

XXII

While the captain whispered something to Farmer, I went out. The fresh wind was like the smell of breakfast on cold mornings at home. When I returned, I found Farmer standing outside the cabin. "He wants you alone."

"Okay."

"Guess what's on his table?"

"What do you mean?"

"His teeth. Somebody slipped his teeth back, while I was giving him a shot."

"Does he know it?"

"Yes, he knows it. Go on in. If he gets to looking strange, call me."

I stood by his bunk waiting for him to look at me but he didn't and I said, 'Forty more minutes, Captain."

He was looking at the table where his teeth lay, and once he seemed to try to reach out his hand for them. His face was resigned, like that of a man, home from a long trip, who stands before his dresser, searching the mirror for something new; and as he takes from his pockets his wallet, his keys, his change, he comes upon a streetcar token from that distant city and thinks: What a waste.
